

Arabella 1533

Chapter 1533

He always had a way of handling his business that left no trace, no loose ends.

"Get a good sleep," Arabella said, not blaming him but rather reminding him, "Don't forget about David's concert the day after tomorrow."

"I'll pick you up for it."

"Alright."

As soon as Arabella finished speaking, a servant came running over. "Ms. Bella, it's terrible—Serena's been attacked, and bitten by a snake, too! The family doctor won't be here for another hour. What should we do? The master and mistress are out, and we're all at a loss."

"Take her to the hospital." Romeo surely didn't want his girl tending to Serena's wounds, "Bella's had a long day already."

"We better hurry and get Serena to the hospital then." the servant scurried back inside.

A gleam of interest sparkled in Arabella's eyes as she looked at Romeo. "Bitten by a snake?"

Did this guy actually have someone scare Serena with a snake?

"It's not poisonous."

tied to the Collins family, he of amusement in her expression, she said.

some rest," Romeo patted the young girl's head. "Don't worry about her. Even without wouldn't die

I don't save just echoed; this at the hospital. Her hair was a mess, her white dress was soiled, and though a coat had been draped over her shoulders, she whistled through the windows into the emergency room where Serena sat. She looked as hurried over as soon as he heard the news and immediately spotted Serena, who had been crying her eyes out. Her face was bruised, and her exposed skin was covered in cuts hadn't made me get out of the car, none of this would've happened." Serena stay still," the nurse said as she disinfected Serena's wounds. "We'll need to give you a tetanus shot shortly. Which family member servant stepped forward, but Martin quickly said, "I'll kept crying, not even

"Serena."

"Serena, just wait for me. I'll pay the bill and be right back."

"You can also just scan the QR code on the ticket," the nurse suggested.

"Alright." Martin looked at Serena briefly before following the instructions.

Serena couldn't fathom how her life had come to this. If Romeo had been here, the nurses would be bending over backward to please her, and she wouldn't have to deal with any of this red tape. The hospital director would probably have come rushing over in the middle of the night to attend to her personally.

It was clear; Martin was useless compared to Romeo. With Romeo around, not to mention his bodyguards, Romeo himself would have been enough to protect her and ensure she got home safely. None of this would have happened.

After Martin paid, the nurse administered the injection and handed over some prescriptions for them to take home.

"These are oral medications. If the pain becomes too much, these can help alleviate it. And these are for external application," the nurse explained, indicating instructions and dosages.

Martin anxiously inquired, "She has so many injuries. Are they serious? Does she need to be hospitalized? Is there any bone damage?"

"We took her some X-rays, and there's no bone damage, but she'll be in pain for a couple of weeks. There's quite a bit of bleeding after all."