

The amazing son in law - The Amazing Son In Law

Chapter 7143

Noticing her mother's interest in joining their trip to Tokyo, Claire explained, "Mom, we're going to Tokyo because Loreen got tickets to an American singer's concert and invited me and Charlie Wade to join her."

"Concerts..." Elaine murmured, disappointment creeping into her voice. "I really dislike those noisy events; the loud music gives me a headache."

Elaine quickly added, "What if I come along? We could shop together during the day, and I can wait at the hotel while you watch the concert."

Then a thought struck her. "Since Loreen is alone, doesn't she need a roommate? How about we book a twin room? Loreen and I could share one room, while you and Charlie Wade take another. It would save us on hotel costs."

Claire sighed, "Mom, this trip was organized by Loreen, and I'm not sure how she'd feel about me bringing you along. Besides, who wouldn't prefer their own room while traveling? It can be inconvenient to share with more people for no reason."

Claire continued, "And our stay will be brief. We're flying in the day before the concert and returning the very next day. Our schedule is so tight that we won't have time for anything else."

Elaine frowned, a bit frustrated. "That sounds a bit boring. Traveling should be relaxing and enjoyable. I don't want to feel like I'm rushing around like a soldier on a mission."

Seeing her mother's reluctance, Claire tried to reassure her. "You're right, Mom. The schedule is too packed. If you really want to go to Japan, I promise to take you to see the cherry blossoms in the spring next year."

"Oh, that sounds wonderful!" Elaine responded, suddenly brightening. She was content with not joining the Tokyo trip.

Meanwhile, Charlie Wade had never been fond of concerts. He always felt he had to tolerate them, having only attended Stefanie Sun's concert before. While Tawana, the American singer, was very popular—arguably even more than Stefanie—Charlie Wade wasn't particularly interested. However, since it was his wife who was excited about the concert and traveling abroad with Loreen, he felt he needed to accompany her for peace of mind. Thus, he reluctantly agreed.

He booked a flight from Aurous Hill to Tokyo for noon the day after tomorrow and also secured a room at the Aman Hotel in Tokyo, which happened to be the same hotel where Zara Banks and Fitz had been kidnapped.

Since he was set to leave the day after tomorrow, Charlie Wade drove to the Champs Elysees Spa Hotel early the following morning. His main purpose was to see Yun Ruge, who had been staying there.

Yun Ruge had been in seclusion for some time. While it was referred to as seclusion, it felt more like house arrest enforced by Charlie Wade. Although he had arranged for Don Albert to provide her with a comfortable stay, he had also instructed Don Albert and his team to keep a close watch on her, ensuring she didn't leave the hotel.

His concerns weren't just about her safety; he also feared that if she showed herself, it could lead to unwanted trouble.

Fortunately, Yun Ruge had kept her word and never attempted to leave.

When Yun Ruge saw Charlie Wade, she was taken aback. It had been a long time since they last met, and she had begun to feel abandoned by him.

She thought this way because Charlie Wade had clearly stated that he couldn't remove the poison from her body for now. With the poison untreated, she had only a little over a year left to live. For someone facing such a limited future, she felt she had lost her value.

Yun Ruge figured that since she had no value to Charlie Wade, he wouldn't feel the need to invest energy in her. She understood why he hadn't visited her in such a long time.

Open-minded, she didn't harbor any resentment toward Charlie Wade. Her current plan was to remain in seclusion and practice. When her time came, if he still couldn't detoxify her, she would leave him and find a serene spot in nature where she could quietly wait for the end.