

The Amazing Son in Law/Super Hero Charlie Wade - Charlie Wade Chapter 7281

“Of course,” Charlie Wade replied confidently. “Remember the time I helped Mr. Mitsui with Feng Shui? He was quite impressed. Tawanna was a bit skeptical, though, and I think she might want me to take a look for her. I still have Mr. Mitsui’s contact information. I can ask him to connect us with Tawanna and arrange for us to watch from backstage during the concert.”

Claire shook her head. “Forget it, husband. That sounds like too much trouble. It’s fine if we don’t watch it—we’ve already seen her perform before.”

Charlie Wade smiled warmly and said, “It wouldn’t be any trouble at all. After all, we’re the hosts while they’re in Aurous Hill. They’ll be staying here for several days, so we could provide some assistance in return.”

He continued, “You know Don Albert’s Heaven Springs, right? It’s the best restaurant in Aurous Hill. Tawanna and her team will be here for a few days, so she should definitely try our local specialties. I can reserve the diamond box at Heaven Springs for her. Plus, with her entire team coming to Aurous Hill, I can ask Mr. Isaac Cameron from Shangri-La to ensure they have everything they need. In exchange, she could invite us backstage to watch the concert. Doesn’t that sound reasonable?”

Claire said earnestly, “It doesn’t matter whether we watch the concert or not, but it would be wonderful if we could offer them some assistance. After all, they’ve traveled a long way. If the opportunity arises, we should do our best to be good hosts.”

Charlie Wade fully understood the importance of keeping opportunities within one’s circle. With Tawanna coming to Aurous Hill for her concert, he had already made arrangements. Tawanna and her entire team would be staying at the Shangri-La Hotel.

Given their planned stay of seven to nine days, this period would undoubtedly attract significant attention from domestic media. The hotel’s association with Tawanna would naturally generate high levels of news exposure—valuable publicity that couldn’t be given away to competitors.

As for Heaven Springs, Charlie Wade saw an opportunity to leverage Tawanna’s influence to bring traffic to Don Albert’s restaurant. If Tawanna could help make Heaven Springs a hot spot, it could pave the way for opening branches nationwide.

The catering industry may seem limited in scope, but with proper expansion, it’s possible to grow it into a business with a valuation in the tens of billions. Charlie Wade even envisioned Heaven Springs becoming a renowned high-end Chinese restaurant chain.

With this in mind, Charlie Wade quietly sent Tawanna a WeChat message: “Are you interested in trying some local cuisine after arriving in Aurous Hill? If so, I can arrange it at a restaurant owned by a friend of mine. It would also be great if you could use your influence to help promote it.”

Tawanna replied almost instantly: “If Mr. Wade is treating me, I’d be happy to go as soon as I land! And if you want me to promote the restaurant, I can post on social media right away.”

charlie Wade responded, "Of course, I'll treat you. There's no need for you to pay. I'll handle everything."

Tawanna teased, "If Mr. Wade is paying, that's not enough. You'll need to attend the meal in person."

charlie Wade asked, "Are your conditions always this strict?"

Tawanna laughed and said, "I don't think it's strict at all! Mr. Wade helped me so much in Tokyo. With your character, I'd expect you to personally host me now that I'm at your doorstep. Won't you come out to treat me to a meal?"

charlie Wade smirked, thinking she was quite skilled at negotiation.

After a moment of thought, he replied, "Fine, I'll treat you, but my wife will be joining us. When the time comes, you'll need to cooperate and say you've asked me to check the Feng Shui for your performance—or better yet, appoint me as the Feng Shui director for your China tour."

Tawanna immediately agreed, "No problem! It's a deal, Director wade!"

Chapter 7282

After reaching an agreement with Tawana, charlie Wade chose not to inform his wife, Claire, about the matter immediately.

He decided to surprise her directly when Tawana arrived in Aurous Hill.

Meanwhile, charlie Wade also intended to keep Don Albert in the dark.

He called Don Albert and asked, "Don Albert, do you have any guests at Heaven Springs tomorrow afternoon?"

Don Albert replied, "Master Wade, some friends have reserved Heaven Springs for tomorrow, but I've kept the diamond box empty for you to use anytime."

charlie Wade nodded and instructed, "Prepare a banquet of the highest standard at Heaven Springs tomorrow. A friend of mine will be visiting, and I'd like you to be there as well."

“Not a problem.” Don Albert, though aware that Tawana was coming for a concert, wasn’t interested in celebrities and knew little about the situation or her connection to charlie Wade. When charlie Wade mentioned entertaining a distinguished guest, Don Albert didn’t give it much thought.

That evening, charlie Wade told Claire, “Honey, do you have any plans for tomorrow afternoon?
Let’s have dinner together.”

“No plans,” Claire replied. “Why the sudden idea to go out for dinner?”

charlie Wade smiled and said, “Just think of it as us spending some quality time together.”

“Alright!” Claire agreed and asked, “Where are we going?”

“I haven’t decided yet,” charlie Wade said. “Don’t worry—I’ll pick you up at the office tomorrow.”

“Okay!”

The next day at noon, Tawana flew from Tokyo to Aurous Hill on her private jet.

Japanese media broadcast the entire takeoff of Tawana’s plane live, with Fuji TV even airing a special program titled Goodbye Tawana. Thousands of fans flocked to the airport, lining both sides of the guardrails outside the runway to bid her farewell. The scene captivated the world, drawing comparisons to the global hysteria surrounding Michael Jackson during his peak.

The enthusiasm wasn’t limited to Tokyo—Chinese fans were equally fervent in their admiration for Tawana.

Well-informed fans, familiar with aviation tracking systems, had already identified Tawana's private plane's registration number. As soon as the plane took off, they began tracking its flight status. By the time it was en route, thousands of fans were already preparing to greet her at Aurous Hill Airport.

On the plane, Tawana sat silently in her luxurious, comfortable seat, her eyes fixed on the vast ocean below. Occasionally, she glanced toward the horizon, yearning for a glimpse of land. She knew that once the land came into view, it meant she was nearing Aurous Hill.

For days, Tawana had found herself thinking of Charlie Wade—every day, every moment.

This feeling was unfamiliar and profound.

Despite her rich romantic history and her self-proclaimed boldness in love, when it came to Charlie Wade, she could only keep her feelings buried deeply in her heart. She didn't dare share them with anyone, not even herself at times.

Meanwhile, Trevor, seated beside her, appeared distracted. He had noticed a change in Tawana over the past few days. She seemed distant, almost aloof.

Initially, he thought her moodiness stemmed from a recent argument between them. He assumed she was still upset.

But lately, he realized it wasn't anger that made her distant—it was something else. She wasn't upset but preoccupied. For instance, now, she sat quietly, gazing out the window, lost in thought.

This was unusual for her—a woman known for her lively and cheerful personality.

In the past, whenever she was on a plane, she was always lively and cheerful, except when she was sleeping. She would either chatter endlessly with him, strum her travel guitar and sing, or play little games to pass the time.

But today was different—it was the first time she neither slept nor spoke.

Chapter 7283

Trevor couldn't help but wonder, thinking to himself: What has caused Tawanna to change so much? Is it because of our earlier quarrel or the recent crisis? But thanks to Mr. Wade's help, that crisis has been completely resolved, and there hasn't been any further trouble since. So why does she still seem so affected?

As he mulled over this, a disturbing thought suddenly flashed through his mind: Could it be... Could it be that she's fallen for Mr. Wade?

But that's impossible! Mr. Wade is married...

And could it be because he's married that she's feeling so dejected—troubled by a love she can't pursue?

This... this seems very likely...

Reflecting on Tawanna's recent distance, Trevor felt a deep sense of disappointment.

He loved Tawanna dearly, enough to overlook her diva-like temperament, her naive worldview, and her complicated past.

But he couldn't accept the possibility that her heart might belong to someone else.

Worse still, that someone else was the very man who had saved them both—a man so extraordinary that Trevor felt he couldn't measure up, no matter how hard he tried.

The thought left him with a heavy heart. Finally, he said softly, "Hey, baby."

Tawanna, lost in her thoughts, didn't hear him.

Trevor sighed, leaned closer, and repeated in a louder voice, "Hey, baby."

Snapping out of her trance, Tawanna gave a faint, flustered smile and asked, "What's wrong, dear?"

Trevor smiled back, though it didn't reach his eyes, and asked, "What are you thinking about? You've been so distracted, almost like you're completely absorbed in something."

Tawanna adjusted her hair awkwardly and said with a smile, "I was just thinking about the upcoming performances—20 shows in total. It's going to be a lot of work."

Trevor knew she wasn't being completely honest, but he chose not to call her out. Instead, he offered reassurance. "I understand. After everything that's happened, you must be exhausted and could really use some rest. But since this is a favor for Mr. Wade, you'll probably need to push through a little longer."

Trevor deliberately mentioned Charlie Wade to observe her reaction.

As expected, the moment he brought up Mr. Wade, Tawanna couldn't help but smile—a subtle change in her expression that she didn't even notice.

Trevor saw it and sighed inwardly. It was the first genuine smile he'd seen from her in days.

His suspicion seemed to be spot on.

Encouraged by the mention of Charlie Wade, Tawanna said, "I've been on tour for so long, and I'm honestly very tired. But when I think about repaying Mr. Wade's kindness, it gives me the strength to keep going."

Then, as if remembering something, she asked, "By the way, Trevor, aren't you heading back to the U.S. soon for training and competitions?"

Trevor nodded. "Yes, the coach and team manager have already reached out. They want me back as soon as possible—definitely within five days."

Tawanna smiled. "That's fine. If you need to go, I'll arrange a plane to take you back. I'll stay here in China and finish the 20 shows. After that, I plan to take a few months off before heading back to the U.S."

Trevor hesitated before asking, "Baby, when you're done with the tour and return to the U.S., will things between us go back to the way they used to be?"
