

The Amazing Son in law /

Super Hero Charlie Wade - Charlie Wade Chapter 7367

The old man's heartfelt words filled charlie Wade with despair.

He had never considered this issue so deeply before. On one hand, he felt it wasn't the right time to make a decision; on the other, he knew that finding the perfect solution to such a dilemma was nearly impossible.

Grandpa was, of course, right. If he could take down the Poqing Society and eliminate Sara, he would have to openly acknowledge his ancestry and return to the Wade family—letting the whole world know that the child of bruce Wade and Lydia (Ava) (Charlie's mom) had come home.

But if that day came, how would he face Claire?

Eventually, she would learn everything—it was only a matter of time.

At this thought, charlie Wade couldn't help but sigh.

Once a lie begins, it leads to countless more.

During this time, he hadn't just hidden his identity from Claire but had also concealed many other things—some even related to her parents.

For instance, the first time Elaine was imprisoned, it was because he had sent her there himself. After she stole his bank card and transferred the money, he orchestrated everything while Claire anxiously worried. Once his true identity was revealed, she would undoubtedly piece everything together.

Noticing charlie Wade's silence, Lord Wade realized his words had struck a chord. He then said, "charlie, think about this carefully. If you have time in the next couple of days, you should visit your Uncle sun."

charlie Wade sighed. "Sigh... I wanted to visit him. In fact, I had already promised Stefanie sun that I would pick her up tomorrow morning and go to her home. But now, after everything you've told me, how can I still have the nerve to go?"

Lord Wade asked in surprise, "You're picking up Stefanie sun? She's coming back?"

"Yes," charlie Wade replied. "Stefanie sun is on her way back to China. She should arrive in Eastcliff tomorrow morning, and I promised to pick her up."

Lord Wade immediately questioned, “Why? You agreed to pick her up, and now, just because of what I told you, you’re not going? That girl traveled all the way from abroad, endured a ten-hour flight, and is eagerly looking forward to seeing you the moment she lands. And now you’re planning to stand her up?”

“I...” charlie Wade felt a headache coming on. “I never said I wouldn’t go... I just don’t know how to face them, especially Uncle sun and Aunt Angie.”

Lord Wade waved his hand dismissively. “You’re overthinking it. Your Uncle sun would never bring up these things to you directly—otherwise, he wouldn’t have discussed them with me first. Just act as if you don’t know anything. If he doesn’t mention it, you don’t mention it. Wouldn’t that resolve everything?”

charlie Wade looked at his grandfather, feeling frustrated. “Grandpa, you can’t just say things like that. Are you implying that I’m shameless?”

Lord Wade quickly distanced himself from the remark. “Of course not! I’m just offering advice. Think about it—this is the best approach. If you don’t go along with it, your only other option is to play dumb. But if you outright refuse your Uncle sun, it would be like slapping all three of them in the face. And remember, they’ve been waiting for you for twenty years!”

charlie Wade felt even more conflicted. He knew that outright rejecting Orrin sun’s family was impossible. What kind of person would he have to be to do something like that?

The kindness that family had shown him was beyond measure. They were even willing to marry their beloved daughter to him and let her carry on the family name first. No matter what, he could never bring himself to reject them outright.

For now, the only choice was to feign ignorance.

Though charlie Wade knew his grandfather was manipulating him, he had no argument left to make. With a sigh, he relented, “Alright, Grandpa. Thanks for the advice. I know what to do.”

Lord Wade nodded with a satisfied smile. “That’s good. Since you’re going to Uncle sun’s house anyway, I think you should stay for lunch tomorrow. Then, in the evening, bring Stefanie sun over so we can all have dinner together. Honestly, I haven’t seen her in so long—I miss her as an elder.”

charlie Wade understood that this was all a matter of proper etiquette. Regardless of his relationship with Stefanie sun, it was only natural for her to return to Eastcliff and visit the old man.

So, he agreed and said, “Once I see Stefanie sun, I’ll let you know. I’ll come visit you tomorrow.”

“Alright!” Lord Wade said happily, smiling. “Let’s not go out to eat tomorrow—we’ll have a family dinner at home. Since Stefanie sun is coming, why not invite your Uncle sun and Aunt Angie as well?”

charlie Wade grew anxious. “Grandpa, what are you trying to do?”

Lord Wade chuckled. “Nothing at all. It’s just that I haven’t had dinner with the three of them in a long time. As their elder, it’s perfectly reasonable for them to visit me as a family.”

charlie Wade sighed in resignation. “It’s up to you. If you’re inviting Uncle sun and his family, though, it’d be more appropriate for you to call him directly. I won’t play messenger.”

“Fair enough!” Lord Wade readily agreed, then added with a smile, “After you pick up Stefanie sun tomorrow, go to her house to see your Uncle sun and Aunt Angie. I’ll call him at noon and invite them over for dinner. I’m sure he won’t refuse.”

charlie Wade knew he had little say in the matter, and arguing wouldn’t change anything, so he simply kept quiet.

Lord Wade then said, “charlie, I’m thinking of inviting your aunt as well. What do you think? That way, it would be the three members of the Sun family and three generations of our own—it seems fitting.”

charlie Wade’s aunt, Cynthia Wade, had been excused from guarding the ancestral mausoleum at Ye Ling Mountain because she was tasked with taking care of the old man. The other members of the Wade family were still unable to leave the mountain.

charlie Wade had no particular resentment toward Cynthia Wade. The old man had always doted on her, and charlie Wade was well aware of it.

It seemed that the old man also wanted to ease the tension between charlie Wade and his aunt.

So, charlie Wade nodded and said, “You handle everything.”

“Alright, alright,” Lord Wade replied with a smile. “Then it’s settled. I’ll make the arrangements tomorrow. charlie, go get some rest—you have to leave early to pick up Stefanie sun from the airport, don’t you?”

charlie Wade, feeling a bit exhausted, said, “I’ll sit in my father’s study for a while first.”

After standing up and bidding farewell to the old man, Charlie Wade made his way to his father's study.

Everything remained just as it had been years ago. Every piece of decor brought back memories of his childhood.

At times, Charlie Wade couldn't help but feel that the old man was quite pitiful. His only son—brilliant and full of promise—had died young. The remaining members of the Wade family were all disappointments, unworthy of mention.

Perhaps that was why the old man had preserved this room exactly as it was.

He often sat here alone for hours, lost in silence, reminiscing about the son who had once made him so proud.

Seated at his father's desk, Charlie Wade found himself consumed by a single question: If his father were still alive, what decision would he want him to make?

Would he expect him to remain loyal to his marriage, to obey the wishes of his parents, or to prioritize the family above all else?

In the end, the last two choices seemed to be one and the same.
