

The Amazing son in law Chapter 7415

The stage director, thinking Tawanna was simply blinded by love, said nervously, “Tawanna, Trevor is in the United States! He can’t protect you, and even God can’t control what happens in the East!”

But Tawanna remained completely calm and replied, “Just do as I say—I will definitely turn this danger into safety.”

At that point, the stage director had no other options. Tawanna’s safety rope had snapped, and whether the big screen moved forward or backward, her safety could no longer be guaranteed.

Continuing with the original plan was still extremely risky, but there remained a chance to successfully execute the stage design as intended.

So the director had no choice but to take the risk. He told her, “Then please be careful, and hold on tightly to the support. If you can stay steady through the second half, it’ll be much safer.”

He also warned her, “Remember, if the big screen keeps falling, don’t get up too early. As long as you stay down behind it, you’ll be in the safest possible position. But if you stand up too soon, the danger increases significantly.”

Tawanna ignored the warning.

She knew that since charlie Wade was doing everything possible to ensure the performance wouldn’t be disrupted, she couldn’t just lie behind the big screen.

That would look far too cowardly—anyone watching could tell she was afraid.

According to the original design, she was supposed to stand tall behind the big screen and step forward as it came down, making a dramatic entrance.

So, summoning her courage, she slowly stood up—just as charlie Wade had advised.

At that moment, countless people backstage screamed in panic.

And even Tawanna felt a surge of fear. From that height, a fall could mean certain death.

Fortunately, an invisible force surrounded Tawanna, holding her firmly in place. She knew it had to be charlie Wade’s doing. Along with her amazement, she felt deeply shocked—and moved—by his care.

At that moment, as the tilt of the big screen surpassed 30 degrees, many audience members seated at the highest and farthest point—once referred to as the “top of the mountain”—caught sight of Tawanna standing behind the screen.

This area had earned its nickname not only because of its height and distance but also due to the poor visibility it once offered. In the past, before big screens were common at concerts, fans seated there had to rely on binoculars just to make out who was on stage. Now, thanks to the screen, they had a much clearer view.

When those fans at the top saw their idol appear in such a dramatic fashion, they instantly erupted in excited screams.

Since the seats closer to the stage are set lower—and even those in the inner field are below stage level—most nearby audience members still had no idea what was happening.

The screen continued to tilt forward.

Gradually, more and more people spotted Tawanna.

She began waving to the growing crowd that had noticed her, and the atmosphere quickly became electric.

As the big screen was about to fall completely, everyone in the stadium could now see Tawanna standing atop it, arms spread wide as she waved to the audience.

The cheers became deafening, and the entire stadium erupted into a frenzy.

With Charlie Wade’s protection, Tawanna descended from the screen unharmed and walked confidently toward the T stage, joining the dancers already waiting there—all in perfect rhythm with the music.
