

The Amazing son in law Chapter 7445

“The day after tomorrow,” charlie Wade echoed. “That’s the day of Tawana’s first concert in Shanghai. I’ll pick her up, but I won’t be able to return for at least four days. Will she be at risk of being exposed while in Shanghai?”

Lin Wan’er said, “It should be fine. The identity we secured for Miss Song has a military classification and carries a confidentiality level. Local authorities won’t have clearance to verify her details. She’ll be given official documents, and they’re all legitimate—there shouldn’t be any issues.”

Then she added, “Young Master, you’re driving to Shanghai this time, right?”

“Yes,” charlie Wade replied. “I’m already on the road.”

“Good,” Lin Wan’er said with a smile. “Please pick Miss Song up from the airport and bring her to the hotel where you’re staying. Have her remain indoors and focus on her cultivation for a few days. Once you’re done, drive her back. That way, there’s no need to take public transport, and your movements will remain discreet.”

charlie Wade found Lin Wan’er’s suggestion reasonable. When it came to staying hidden, no one was more skilled than Lin Wan’er—after all, she had evaded Sara for over three centuries.

So charlie Wade said, “Then I’ll make the arrangements according to your plan, Miss Lin.”

“But will I be able to access the military airport smoothly the night after tomorrow to pick someone up?”

“No problem,” Lin Waner (Alani) replied. “Sir, just send me your license plate number when the time comes. You can drive straight there—someone will be waiting to receive you at the airport.”

charlie Wade had complete faith in Sun Zhidong's capabilities. His arrangements were always meticulous, so charlie Wade simply said, "Alright, I'll head there when the time comes."

At the same time, at the Wanlong Palace headquarters base in Syria—

Thanks to substantial financial backing, construction of the base progressed at an astonishing pace.

After arriving, all the death warriors and cavalry guards were assigned living quarters at the base.

The Wanlong Palace had built an extensive complex of structures above and below ground to ensure they could live comfortably and securely.

Despite its location in Syria, the Wanlong Palace benefited from ample funding and the convenient shipping routes of Is, enabling access to top-tier materials and supplies. Wan Pojun aimed to develop the base into a fortified mini-city, capable of both defense and self-sufficiency, and housing tens or even hundreds of thousands of people.

To give the children—many of whom had lived underground their entire lives—a chance at modern education, a temporary school was set up within Wanlong Palace. A dedicated education team, composed of highly educated members, began teaching using Chinese compulsory education textbooks to lay a strong foundation.

As for the death warriors and cavalry guards, they were deeply grateful for charlie Wade's arrangements. After settling in, they enthusiastically contributed to the palace's development. Almost all of them joined the construction teams, working regular eight-hour days as if employed full-time, helping build and expand the Wanlong Palace.

This new group from Morocco had just arrived two days ago.

Upon arrival, they were integrated into the community with the others. The earlier arrivals warmly welcomed them—offering help where needed and doing their best to assist everyone.

It was common to see a family about to move into their newly assigned housing, only to be joined by a group of fellow residents who came running over to help them settle in.

Through mutual assistance, people quickly got acquainted and began sharing stories of their past experiences in different regions.

When those previously rescued by Charlie Wade heard from the Moroccans that the Po Qing Society had begun a sweeping overhaul of all its bases, they were both shocked and immensely grateful.

None of them had gone through a large-scale relocation—they were brought here entirely by Charlie Wade, along with all their family members.

However, opportunities like this may never come again in the future.

After arriving in Syria, Ruyu was astonished by the scale of the base and everything that had been done for the Death Warriors and Cavalry Guards.

That handsome face appeared once more in her mind, and her admiration for Charlie Wade deepened even further.

But as she looked around at the loyal warriors and cavalry guards joyfully reuniting with their families, a wave of loneliness swept over her.

Perhaps, in this lifetime, she would never have the chance to see her family again.
