Chapter 2931-2932

Matilda also smiled in surprise: “Oh, old Hank, why are you here?”

After finishing speaking, she pointed to Charlie and exclaimed: “You...do you know Charlie?”

Charlie hurriedly took the lead at this time and said with a smile: “Auntie , a friend of mine just planned to do some new business, so he invited Professor Hank over for dinner. I didn’t expect to run into Professor Hank here.”

Hank knew that Charlie didn’t want too many people to know his true identity information, so he agreed: “Yes, Matilda, I was surprised when I saw Charlie just now. This is a coincidence.”

Matilda didn’t doubt that he had him, and she nodded and smiled lightly, “It’s a coincidence. I also said that I would call you back and talk about college training for senior citizens. I don’t know if you’re busy with school teaching tasks recently. ?”

Hank hurriedly said: “Hurt! No matter how busy you are, you can spare time to help our senior college students improve their studies.”

Ziva Hank on the side was surprised when he saw his father’s diligent and excited look.

She thought that her father was the kind of person who had no interest in life, and she was afraid that she would not be destined to find another half in the future.

However, when she saw her father staring at the aunt in front of her, she suddenly realized that it turned out that father also had the day when the old tree bloomed.

So, she couldn't help but look at Matilda a few more times, and she couldn't help sighing: "This aunt's appearance and temperament are excellent. It is the first time I have seen this aunt in middle-aged and elderly people. Dad's vision is really good..."

Matilda also noticed that there was a young and beautiful girl who had been looking at herself, so she couldn't help but look at it. Seeing that the girl's eyebrows were actually like Hank, she couldn't help asking: "Oh, Old hank, isn't this your daughter?!"

Hank just remembered that he didn't even introduce his precious girl to Matilda.

So he hurriedly said to Matilda: let me introduce you to me. This is my rebellious little girl, Ziva Hank."

"Oh!" Matilda couldn't help exclaiming: "It's really your girl! She looks so beautiful!"

Ziva Hank smiled and said, "Auntie, you have won the prize."

At this time, Hank said to Ziva Hank: "Ziva Hank, this is Aunt Matilda. She has just returned from the United States and has been living in the United States before."

"Really?" Ziva Hank's eyes lit up when he heard this.

She didn't think there was anything great about returning from the United States, but felt that the experience of this aunt and her father were so similar that the two must have a lot of common language.

Matilda nodded at this time and said, "I went to the United States after graduating from college. After my husband passed away some time ago, I returned to Aurous Hill with my son to settle down."

Ziva Hank heard this and couldn't help sighing: "Oh, Aunt Matilda, you are in basically the same situation as my dad, and even the time of going abroad and returning to the country is the same. I believe you and my dad must have a lot of common languages, right?"
