Chapter 1111

“Who did you call uneducated?!”

Before Cassian could speak, Stan shouted angrily.

He had been interested in the female student beside Mia to begin with, and there was no way he would let go of such a great opportunity to show off.

“You.”

Henry replied, unfazed.

Stan was stunned.

He had never met someone like this before.

A normal person would have retaliated with even harsher words, which would then lead to Stan, the basketball team’s ace player, teaching him a lesson with his fist.

Hence, this single word and seemingly perfect reply had Stan immediately choking and lost for words.

Cassian then put down the phone to smile wretchedly at Henry. "Just you wait. You're going to be thrown off the campus like a stray dog in no time at all."

When faced with Cassian's threat, Henry only said one thing.

"Moron."

At the same time, Jasper had already calmed Tiffany down.

"Jasper, I really didn't steal anything. I also didn't hook up with other people," Tiffany explained to the man.

Jasper smiled gently and replied, "I know. They're the ones framing you."

Tiffany was about to speak when Jasper gestured for her to stop. Cassian was already done with his call by now, so Jasper gave it some thought before deciding it would be better to call Dorian as well.

After all, Henry was a truly extreme person, and those two students would most likely not have a future if they genuinely angered him.

Henry did not like the air of arrogance this man carried. "Wow, how impressive of you."

Henry said ambiguously before he mocked, "You must think you're so powerful since you're this university's bullsh*t Academic Affairs office's chief, huh?"

The Academic Affairs office was indeed an authoritative department, one that held the fate of all the students with the university.

As the department head, Denton was used to people being respectful toward him, and he had never been scolded like this before.

He was enraged by Henry's words, and he stared at the man while saying, "I am this university's Academic Affairs office's chief. I have the right to deal with problem students as I see fit."

"So, will you outsiders get out? Either get out yourself, or I'll have security throw you out. Guards!"

The few security guards did not dare go against Denton's instruction, so they immediately surrounded the three from all angles.

Henry narrowed his eyes. He was already very irritated and he badly wanted to beat someone up to vent his frustration.

It was Dorian who rushed over.

"What are you doing here, Mr. Clem?" Denton had a pleasing and fawning smile on his face as he jogged over to Dorian and greeted courteously when he saw the other.

Dorian glared at Denton harshly and ignored him, waving his hands to shout at the security guards to back off.

"Move, all of you! What do you think you're doing?!"

The security guards were confused. They were just trying to throw someone out on Denton's orders, so they had no idea how they had angered Mr. Clem.

Denton was also stunned. He did not know how he had offended the dean's secretary either.

At that moment, Dorian had already made his way to Jasper and said remorsefully, "I'm really sorry, Mr. Laine. It seems like I made a fool out of myself."

Jasper replied calmly, "Fool or not, I am very disappointed in some members of Hoofmorn University's managerial staff. The quality of the students here is also very unimpressive.

Denton could be considered an experienced man, seeing as how he had been working for more than half his life. He could tell that Mr. Clem was not the most important character here. At most, the man had arrived to deal with the issue.

The true main character was Jasper.

Denton's lips quivered when he looked at Jasper.

Mr. Clem was the dean of Hoofmorn University's secretary. While he did not hold a high administrative position, half a rank higher than Denton at most, the man's identity was special.

Dorian would not be the dean's secretary if he was not also the dean's confidant.

If Jasper refused to let today's incident go, then Dorian would surely report the matter to the dean.

If that were to happen, a mere chief of the Academic Affairs office would surely be crushed.

Denton felt lightheaded at the thought.

"You... you must be Mr. Laine, right? Mr. Laine, there's got to be a misunderstanding here."

“While Hoofmorn University doesn’t require every single one of its students to be geniuses or to become formidable figures in society, we require that our graduates be upright members of society at the very least!”

“The four of you will be monitored, and this incident will appear in your report cards as a demerit. Stan and Cassian, this is your senior year, yes? If you still want your graduation certificates, then I suggest both of you self-reflect and think about what you did wrong!” Dorian’s words had Mia and the other three completely shocked.

Especially Stan and Cassian, who had never expected this incident to affect their graduation.

In the current era, a university graduate, especially one from Hoofmorn University, was a huge boost to someone’s identity.

It could be said that if one was a graduate of Hoofmorn University, then getting an office job was already a given. People around them would also look at them with envy and admiration.

Demerits like these would follow them their entire lives and could never be erased.

Mia’s complexion paled and she turned to look at Dorian frantically. Then, she turned to Jasper, and finally rushed toward Tiffany before falling to her knees with a thud.

In the humongous university, there was a smaller area in the canteen with private rooms that allowed people to order food to dine-in; It was rather similar to restaurants and hotels in that regard.

It was currently lunchtime, so Jasper and the others then went to eat lunch at the canteen.

"I told you before, didn't I? I told you to look for me if you have any troubles, so why'd you endure all this mistreatment alone over the past few days?"

Jasper finally brought it up while they ate.

Tiffany replied softly, "I didn't want to be a bother."

"There are many things that you may consider a bother for you, but require no more than a phone call from me to resolve. You have to contact me if similar situations arise again, alright?" Jasper said gently.

What I need is someone who can be Tiff's friend for the four years she'll be spending in university. Her being benefited doesn't matter much to me. I'll only be concerned if she meets some idiot like that Mia again."

"Moreover, scheming or not, it's still Tiff's life. I can't do everything for her, so she's going to have to deal with it herself."

As Jasper and Henry returned to the hotel to rest, someone else was in a horrible mood.

"Mr. Ball, that's the situation now. The entire stock market is very calm and we've already identified some entities that bought shares secretly. It's not a large amount, but we've got our eyes on them in case they make a move."

Alban waved off the subordinate who was reporting the situation as the furrow in his brows deepened.

"Three days. Every hour is important, but Jasper's not doing anything at all. What's he trying to do?"

Alban had always prided himself on having mental prowess just as impressive, or even more impressive than anyone else. Yet, here he was, confused by Jasper's lack of action.

“Mr. Ball, three investigative teams have already arrived at the group and they’re currently combing through our accounts. Everyone in the group is terrified, Mr. Ball. What do we do now?”

The subordinate asked Alban.

Alban was stunned by the sudden news.

He had been doing business for decades and he believed that he had experienced his fair share of ups and downs. Yet, he still felt frantic when he heard this news. It had been years since he last felt like this.

Alban’s expression was very dark.

As the chairman, he had single-handedly and slowly brought the Seatresures Group up from a small pharmaceutical factory about to go bankrupt, to the magnificent business it was today. He was well aware of how many unclean trades his group had done over the years.

The money he gave those doctors and hospitals as rebates alone amounted to more than one billion!

Should this be discovered, Alban would be the first one to be crushed and destroyed.

“Calm down!” Alban slammed his palm on the table and said.

Countless people were taken in straight from their homes and workplaces to aid in the investigations.

The people getting brought away were mostly heinous individuals with a mountain of evidence proving their dirty work. These were people that would certainly be thrown in jail after they had gone through the formal procedures.

This storm wreaked through the entire country and it almost flipped the medical treatment industry and pharmaceutical enterprises on its head.

As one of the first five largest privately-owned pharmaceutical industries, the Seatreaures Group was pretty much in the eye of this storm.

At the same time, countless people slammed their palms on the table and exclaimed that even the heavens were helping Jasper when they saw the news.

The stock market, known to be the most sensitive measure when it came to news regarding the world's industries, had already begun to react.

The moment the statement was released, the pharmaceutical sector's index began to plummet. All share prices of listed enterprises relating to medicine began to crash.

Shares of the largest privately-owned pharmaceutical enterprises in the country began to tank, spearheaded by Seatreaures Group. Not even investors or organizations could hold on to their stocks once news of officials investigations of those enterprises broke.
