

Billionaire's Ex-Wife And His Hidden Babies

161

Sophia cried at this unexpected and shocking proposal and nodded her head before speaking, "Yes! Yes! Yes!" And then she forwarded her hand. Brandon grinned and stopped, finally slipping the ring on her ring finger and giving her a passionate kiss in front of everyone. Sophia heard the busting sound of something near her and something falling around her, but she ignored it.

"They look perfect together!!"

"Finally!!"

"Congratulations!!"

"What an amazing proposal."

"Beautiful"

Oliver wiped the tears from the corner of his eyes after seeing his sister happy again. After Brandon and Sophia broke the kiss, he caressed the side of her cheek, looking at her lovingly.

"Are you a magician?" Sophia asked in a low tone.

"Sorry?"

"It's the strangest thing, but every time I look at you, everyone else disappears." She added, making him chuckle. Brandon shook his head and looked at Bruce as a signal to send the reporters away from there. Sophia saw at least ten to four people leaving from there who were recording everything; in fact, this whole proposal was live. Once they left, kids came running toward Brandon.

"Dad...daddy...dada.."

"Everything looked amazing from the top." Calvin chirped.

"Indeed, dad. It was the best idea to keep us up." Colton added. Little did he know that his father did this because Brandon didn't want to disclose the face of his kids.

"Good Pro.. posal." Caroline remarked.

While kids were busy praising the whole proposal thing, Sophia took that moment to study everything that was around her. The whole area was prepared in a way that the skating shoes could roll smoothly. Not just that, the whole hall was covered with her photos, all the photos that were her favorite, even the rice light decoration was made in such a way that that it looked like... her.

"Tell me, one thing? How the hell can you dance in that thing?" Laila exclaimed, pointing at his skating shoes.

"Practice! Practice and Practice!!" Brandon replied. "To be honest, I wasn't sure that I would be able to pull that stunt or not. Damn, I fell like unlimited times while practicing on it, but it worth it." He paused before speaking, "Isn't it, My Love?"

"It was just.... Wow! Wow! I don't have words to share about it." Sophia admitted because it was really magical and so romantic and, not to forget, unusual as well. She knew that Brandon had been planning a surprise for her for the last seven days, but she had never thought that Brandon would do something like this. It was totally out of the way for him.

"You kept your promise, dad," Calvin said with a big grin on his face.

"Finally, you both are together again," Logan said, wiping his happy tears.

"This time, we are also here." Calvin reminded his grandpa, on which he laughed and nodded his head.

"Of course, sweetheart."

"Welcome to the family again," Oliver said, hugging Brandon in his ear.

"I hope you won't repeat the same mistake again," Oscar said, patting Brandon's shoulder.

"I won't," Brandon said with determination. "Thank you, Rebecca, for suggesting to me the perfect place to execute my plan." He added, looking at Rebecca.

"Anytime, buddy." Rebecca winked playfully, on which Oliver narrowed his eyes.

"All right, guys, the remaining party is on the terrace," Brandon said, looking at the close friends and relatives who had almost left from there. He wasn't interested in performing in front of unnecessary people, so only people who knew about them until now; he had invited them, including his warriors, friends, dad, Jake, Martha, Sophia's office colleagues, her family, her friends, and a few more like bodyguards were there while the remaining where on the terrace.

'Finally! After a month, they are engaged, and soon they will get married.' Colton thought and smiled at that thought.

They nodded their head and moved toward the terrace. That was when Sophia observed how the party was filled with not just friends and family but also a lot of unfamiliar faces, which she assumed as business associates of Brandon. Not just his, even her important investor and clients from Manaus were there. Now, she knew why her boyfriend, now her fiance was so busy this whole week.

"I love you, hunter. And I'm sorry for saying NO at the beginning." Sophia said, kissing Brandon's cheek.

"I love you too, Amour. And I'm glad that you said NO, or I would have to change the song." Brandon said, chuckling. "But... But I was also prepared with other songs, you know."

"OH. MY. GAAAWWWD." Sophia gasped. "Who are you? Where is my boring boyfriend?"

"I'm still the same. Just... just don't expect this from me on a daily basis." Brandon laughed. "People around me is shocked to see me like this, you know."

"Well, even I'm shocked," Sophia admitted, and that was when her eyes landed on her ring. "By the way, I... loved the ring. I hope this ring didn't cost you much."

"I'm glad that you didn't start your scolding me about money. And, nope, it is not that costly." Brandon said, kissing her again. Sophia didn't say anything even though she knew that the ring she was wearing would have cost a fortune.

"Even I got a ring for you, but I didn't bring it here," Sophia said. She also had a wedding ring for Brandon, just like he liked to wear when she was in Manaus, and Brandon was away from there for a week.

"It better be not shiny," Brandon said because he wasn't a big fan of jewelry.
