Brandon's POV

That was when he finally decided to open his mouth.

"I shouldn't have done to your mate or anyone else's mate," he said. "I can't apologize to everyone for my deeds, but I can do that to you, so, in my last few minutes of life, I want to apologize for everything that I did to Abby and all other females."

"I didn't do this because of lust but because I used to entertain how every supernatural creature begs in front of me for their mates," he said. "But the moment you said that my princess, my Sophia, will be touched by other males if anything happens to you. I shivered in fear at that mere thought. I don't mind if you will kill me mercilessly, but please... please don't do anything to my princess."

"Princess?" I scoffed. "All the females whom you raped for mere entertainment were also someone's princess and someone's queen. Did you think about them?" I asked bitterly. "Anyways, are you done?"

"I fixed Sophia's marriage with you because as a father, I knew you're best for her and who would keep her safe and protected. So, please take care of her."

That was it.

I shot at his heart and kept hooting at him until the bullets of my gun were finished, and then I threw my gun in anger.

All my warriors came running into the dungeon, hearing the sound of bullets. And then looked at me, and then Ethan. No one said a word. Soon, Bruce and Iris, too, joined them.

"This was it? You killed with him without playing with him?", She asked in a disappointing tone, but I didn't answer her and looked at Bruce.

"Make arrangement to send his body to his sons."

"WHAT?" Iris shouted. "First, you killed him this easily, and now you are sending his body to his sons so that they can have a proper funeral. I won't let this happen. No, I won't."

"Do anyone has any problem with it?" I asked, looking at others.

"We do have!" Lucas said. The moment Lucas said this, Iris smirked.

"I second that with Iris and Lucas.", Joshua said. This time, her smirk widened.

"But at the same time, we won't go against your decision nor question anything," Jacob added. And this time, her smirk was wiped from her lips.

"WHAT?" She shouted again. Being a human, I was getting irritated with her voice. I couldn't imagine the irritation level of others. After all, they had sensitive ears. "How could you just OKAY with his decision and weren't asking anything from him?"

"All that matter is that our enemy is dead," Lucas said. "If Boss made any change in the plan, then we will support him instead of going against him," he added.

"Because he had held our hand when we had no idea about our future. Without Alpha and without any support, we wouldn't have been dead by now considering as rouge." Joshua beat Iris when she was going to say, Lucas.

Iris gave an irritated look to everyone before speaking, "Fine! Do whatever you want. I'm going to use that whore's phone to trap that fat man. I hope there is no change in that plan, OR the consequences will be bad... VERY BAD." She said, stressing over the last two words, looking at me while everyone looked at me for my final decision. I nodded my head.

"You really planning to kill Oliver? You will lose Sophia forever by doing so, and she will always hate you for this."

"As if anyone present here cares about her hatred?"

"Not anyone, but he does care about it. It is something that he could bare to see in her eyes. Moon Goddess might have paired him with Abby first, but that bond had been ended decades before."

"But there is still a hope of a second chance in a relationship."

I let them argue and left from there because Bruce being here also meant Sophia was alone. At first, I reached the parking lot where I had parked my car. I grabbed a couple of papers that I needed and then walked toward Sophia's room, holding that paper in my hand.

The moment I entered the room, I saw Sophia standing near the window and looking out. I was positive that she might have seen me reaching near my car and grabbing the paper. I gulped, knowing that she had seen everything while Caroline was blabbering on the bed, lifting her ting legs and hands in the air. Hearing the sound, she turned her head and rolled to look in the direction of the sound.

"Aaa," She grinned, seeing me, and started bouncing in my direction. I smiled, seeing her, and walked toward her to carry her in my arms; Sophia was quick to take her in my arms.

"Don't be innocent like me in trusting people, Caro. This person is dangerous for you." She said without looking at me.

"I will never harm her."

"Really?" She scoffed. "If you can plan to kill my innocent brother, then why not her? After all, she also shared the same blood that my brother has in his vein." I bit my inner cheeks, not telling her that she didn't have the same blood in her vein that she or her brother shared, and even if she would have shared the same blood, I wouldn't have killed her, NEVER.

"Dada..." Caroline said, bouncing her arm to come near me, but Sophia didn't let her come near me. It was breaking my heart, but I guess I deserved that.

"I'm sure your presence has anything to do with the paper in your hand, so please tell me. I have all ears."

I mustered all my courage and pulled out my black card before speaking, "...
