The Breaking Point of Love

---- Chapter 471 Trevor had been busy the whole time and didn't have time to bother with Miles. After sitting for a while and feeling bored, Miles couldn't help but say, "Forget it, I'll go look for Beck instead." Without even lifting his head, Trevor replied coolly, "And you think Beck has time to entertain you?" Miles became speechless. Just as Trevor predicted, by the time Miles arrived at Harper Corporation, Beck was indeed busy.

Seeing that he too had no time to talk to him, Miles couldn't help but say, "You do have time for lunch at least, right?" Beck flipped a page in the document and replied, "I have a blind date at noon." Miles was quite interested in the topic and said, "Your mom's still arranging blind dates for you? The one from a few days ago, I heard she started chasing after you like crazy after just one meeting. How's that going?"

Has she backed off yet?" Before Beck could respond, his secretary came in with a bouquet of flowers, looking hesitant. ---- "Mr. Harper, these are from that lady from before. I couldn't reason with her, and I didn't want to give the delivery guy a hard time..." Beck replied indifferently, "Got it. Deal with the flowers however you want. You can go now." "Yes, sir." After the secretary left, Miles raised his eyebrows and smiled.

" Nothing happened these past two days, so I thought she'd given up. But turns out..." He couldn't help adding, "To be honest, that heiress from Hunt Corporation-looks, education, background, personality-she's supposedly flawless. What exactly is it you don't like about her?" Beck paused, turned his head to glance at him, and said with clear disdain, "You came all this way just to gossip?" 1 Miles laughed.

"You're just figuring that out now?" 1 "Keep talking and I'll throw you out." "No, seriously," Miles insisted. "I've met Ms. Hunt myself. She really is great. You're really not the least bit interested?" Seeing the look Beck gave him, Miles quickly added, "I just think, well, you're not exactly young anymore either. It makes sense ---- that your mom is anxious. But if you don't like this Ms. Hunt, then what kind of woman do you like? Tell me, I'll introduce someone ~@ Beck put down his pen.

"Say one more word and I'll have someone throw you out." Miles quickly shut his mouth. Fine. Seeing that Beck was clearly at the end of his patience, Miles decided not to push it further. "Fine, you're busy at noon, but surely you're free for dinner?" "Not free." "What? You're not actually mad, are you?" 2 Beck paused, then said, "I'll be heading over to YodaVision later.

I already have plans for the evening." 2 Miles figured Beck meant business-related matters, and probably had dinner with Matthias and the others after the meeting. Since it was official business, he didn't push further and left feeling bored. + At around 3:00 pm, Beck headed to YodaVision. When Celeste found out he had arrived, she put down her work ---- and went to meet him The moment Beck saw her, he stood up from the sofa almost immediately. "It's been a while." * Celeste nodded.

"It has." It really had been quite a while since they last saw each other. Truthfully, this matter didn't require Beck to come in person. But he made the trip anyway just to see her. Celeste didn't expect him to come personally either. Still, she didn't think much of it-just assumed it meant he took their collaboration seriously. Kieran only found out later that Beck had come to YodaVision. He happened to need to speak with Celeste urgently and went to the meeting room to find her.

Beck had been smiling and chatting with Celeste, but the moment he saw Kieran walk in, the smile on his face faded noticeably. Kieran's gaze toward Beck also carried a hint of coldness. 4 However, considering Celeste wasn't officially divorced yet, and that both he and Beck had feelings for her, he figured there was no point in playing the rivalry game for now. ---- So, he looked away and focused on discussing work with Celeste. 8

---- Chapter 472 After wrapping up their work, Celeste noticed that Kieran hadn't left but was instead looking thoughtfully at Beck. Not knowing if the two of them had any private dealings, she asked, "What is it?" Previously, Kieran had seen that Beck liked Celeste but hadn't pursued her, so he assumed he might no longer be interested. But judging from today's interaction, it was clear that Beck still liked Celeste very much and had no intention of giving up on her.

Kieran quickly realized that Beck likely already knew Celeste wasn't divorced yet-and possibly even knew who her husband was. With that thought, Kieran had initially considered trying to probe Beck for some information about Celeste's husband. 2 But recalling the way Beck had looked at him just now, Kieran felt that even if he did know who her husband was, there was no way he'd kindly share that information.

Besides, if he were to ask, he'd also be admitting that he didn't know enough about Celeste himself... It wasn't worth the risk, and Kieran wasn't someone to act on impulse. - --- Having come to that conclusion, Kieran withdrew his gaze and smiled lightly as he said to Celeste, "It's nothing. I've got something to do, so I'll be heading off now." Celeste replied, "Alright." Beck had noticed Kieran's gaze but wasn't a mind reader-he didn't know exactly what Kieran was thinking.

Still, from Kieran's cold, intense look, he could tell that Kieran was determined to win Celeste over. After Kieran left, Beck chuckled and said, "That was the son of the Gibson family, right? I'd heard he was the spoiled and reckless type, but after interacting with him a few times, he actually seems pretty serious about work." Celeste thought he was just making casual conversation, so she responded, "He does take his work seriously.

He's never complained about pulling all-nighters when needed, and he's never been late or left early. More importantly, he's quite talented. Overall, he's pretty good." After learning about Kieran's background, Celeste had also assumed he came to YodaVision on a whim. The fact that he'd stayed on this long had surprised her. And on a daily basis, she found working with Kieran comfortable ---- -very different from the impression he gave the first time they met.

Though Beck seemed to be praising Kieran, he was actually probing Celeste's attitude toward him. Hearing her positive comments about Kieran, Beck smiled without saying anything. He'd heard that Kieran had come back to the country because he admired YodaVision's programming language and joined the company because of it. 1 Which meant-he'd also returned for Celeste.

From the way Kieran looked at Celeste while they discussed work earlier, Beck could tell that Kieran deeply admired her professionally. 2 In fact, he looked up to her. 2 If his guess was correct, Kieran probably still didn't know that Celeste was the developer behind YodaVision's programming language. + And even under those circumstances, Celeste had already won him over purely with her own ability.

If Kieran ever found out that Celeste was the very person he had long been searching for, wouldn't he be even more... 1 Based on Celeste's response just now, it was clear that she had ---- a good impression of Kieran. In that light, Kieran staying at YodaVision really did seem to be an effective way to win her over.

Especially with her divorce from Trevor soon to be finalized- well, there's a saying, "Proximity has its privileges." After they finished talking business, Beck invited Celeste to dinner. She agreed. 1 As they left the meeting room to go out for dinner, they happened to see Kieran leaning casually against the doorway. Seeing Celeste and Beck leaving together didn't surprise him at all. It was as if he had already predicted that Beck would use work as an excuse to invite Celeste to dinner. And the fact that he was there seemed like he had been waiting for just that.

The Breaking Point of Love

---- Chapter 473 Kieran's appearance there didn't seem to indicate that he intended to join in or deliberately stir up trouble Looking at Celeste, he spoke in a familiar tone, "Going out for a meal with Mr. Harper?" Celeste replied, "Mm." "You'll be coming back later, right?" "Yes. She still had some things to take care of and needed to return to handle them. Kieran nodded. "Alright, I'll come find you later then." With that, he didn't say anything more.

After glancing at Beck, he tuned and walked away. Beck knew that Kieran was actually provoking him. 2 He was showing him that while Beck had to go through a lot just to get Celeste to agree to meet, Kieran was already very familiar with many aspects of her life and had plenty of chances to be around her. He had no need to play any petty tricks to get in the way of ---- whatever was happening between them. 4 But faced with Kieran's provocation, Beck wasn't angry or anxious.

As it stood now, Celeste didn't seem to have romantic feelings for either of them. So, at most, he and Kieran were just the pot calling the kettle black. + In fact, if he had a choice, Beck would rather that Celeste show some affection, whether it was for him or even Kieran. At least that would mean she felt something... 3 He had already mentioned to Celeste that Shanice had recently been taken back by her grandmother.

4 It had been a while since they'd last heard anything about Shanice, so once they arrived at the restaurant, Celeste couldn't help but ask, "How's Shanice doing?" Hearing her ask about Shanice warmed Beck's heart. He said, " She's doing well. She called a few days ago and said she misses you. She said she wants to come back and see you." Celeste smiled. "That'd be great." 4 Then Beck, after a brief hesitation, added, "I heard that Jo's training went really well this time too.

She'll probably win something in the next competition." ---- When Celeste heard him mention Jordyn, she gave a quiet hum and lowered her eyes. Before she could respond further, the door to the private room suddenly swung open. "Beck!" As soon as Beck heard that voice, his expression immediately darkened. 3 Celeste, however, remained completely composed. When Linda saw Celeste inside as well, her eyes widened in shock. "Why are you here?" 7 Celeste had no intention of responding.

Beck looked at Linda and asked coldly, "What are you doing here?" 4 Although Beck had always been distant with her, this was the first time he had shown such unreserved coldness. 2 Linda was so startled by his sharp tone that she was left completely stunned. "II..." "Linda, don't be rude," came the voice of Erin and Patricia as they walked over. 4 They were surprised to see Celeste too, but they knew Beck and ---- YodaVision still had a good working relationship.

So, seeing the two dining together didn't raise any surprise. Patricia smiled and said, "Sorry, Beck. It's Linda's fault for interrupting your dinner." Since they were elders, Beck still showed them respect. He said, "It's alright." 2 But toward Linda, he showed no mercy this time. "Ms. Shaw, I don't think we're that familiar with each other. I hope something like this won't happen again. Do you understand what I'm saying?

He wasn't just saying there shouldn't be a next time-he was clearly rejecting her. 5 Linda truly liked Beck. Hearing his firm rejection, and in front of Celeste no less, she instantly felt wronged, and tears started to fall. She couldn't help but choke out, "I-I didn't mean to-" _ © But Beck showed no sign of softening. Since it had already come to this, he decided to be completely clear about his rejection. "If I'm not mistaken, Ms. Shaw, you seem to be interested in me.

But I can tell you very clearly-there is no possibility of a relationship between us. So, I hope you'll learn to respect ---- boundaries moving forward."

The Breaking Point of Love

---- Chapter 474 Patricia and Erin didn't expect that Beck could so firmly and directly reject Linda right in front of them, although he had always seemed polite and respectful toward them Naturally, Patricia still hoped that Linda and Beck could end up together. She smiled and tried to ease the tension, leaving room for the situation to be salvaged "This is indeed Linda's fault. We'll talk to her properly later. Sorry for disturbing your meeting.

How about I have Wynn bring Linda over another day so she can apologize to you properly-" "There's no need for that," Beck interrupted, clearly seeing through her intentions. "When it comes to matters of the heart..." He paused for a moment, glancing subtly at Celeste before continuing after half a second, "... They can't be forced. Ms. Shaw and I are not suitable for each other.

I hope you can help persuade her-not to waste her time and future over me." With those words, what was left for Patricia not to understand? She looked at Celeste, who had remained detached the entire time, calmly sipping her tea, and couldn't help but feel that Celeste was silently laughing at the Shaw family's humiliation. ---- Her smile grew a bit stiff. She forced a dry laugh and said, " You're right. I'll talk to Linda properly." "Thank you, Madam Shaw," Beck responded politely.

Linda had already fled in humiliation long ago. Once Patricia and Erin left and the door was closed again, Beck sat back down and said to Celeste, "Sorry for taking up your time. 1 Ever since he realized Linda had feelings for him, he had always made his rejection clear. But Linda had shown no sign of backing off. He had tried to find opportunities to speak to her directly, but each time, before he could say anything, she would pretend not to understand and run off.

Today, he finally had a chance to meet with Celeste one-on-one, and he didn't want to waste time dealing with Linda's drama. Linda's lack of restraint and willful ignorance had finally worn down his patience. 2 Because Wynn had taken Trevor from her, he knew the relationship between the Lockets and the Shaws and Celeste was delicate and strained. 1 - --- The termination of the contract between InnovaTech and YodaVision had only deepened the rift between Celeste and the Lockets and the Shaws.

Plus, Linda had always clearly disliked Celeste. 2 Under these circumstances, saying everything directly in front of Celeste was the best way to make Linda give up. With all that in mind, he decided to lay everything out. 2 Celeste smiled and said, "It's alright." Beck hesitated for a moment before saying, "Sorry, just now I-" He hadn't finished speaking but Celeste already knew what he was apologizing for. She smiled faintly and replied, "It's fine.

Besides, what you said was true." She had experienced it firsthand, and she knew very well that love truly couldn't be forced. Now, she was able to accept that truth with peace of mind. 2 And perhaps Beck had sensed that, which was why he had said it so plainly That was exactly Beck's intention. ---- Still, even though she had let go of the past, hearing someone bring it up again inevitably stirred some unpleasant memories. So, he couldn't help but want to apologize.

Celeste didn't want to dwell on the past and changed the subject. Beck looked at her flawless, delicate face. His heart stirred slightly, and he wanted to say something more but remembering that she hadn't officially divorced yet, he restrained the impulse and changed the subject too. 5

---- Chapter 475 Two days later, at noon, Celeste and Kieran were on their way to the cafeteria for lunch when her phone suddenly rang It was a call from Trevor. Celeste saw the caller ID and hesitated for a second before answering the call. "Hello?" "Grandma's awake." 4 Joy surged in Celeste's heart. She said, "I'll come over right away.

"Alright." After hanging up, she turned to Kieran, who was standing next to her waiting, and said, "Sorry, something came up-I won't be going to the cafeteria." Kieran glanced at the number on her phone and, seeing that it was indeed something urgent, said, "No problem." 2 Celeste nodded and quickly walked off. When she arrived at the hospital, Trevor, Jordyn, Teagan, Queenie, Lincoln, and the others were all there. As soon as she walked in, Jordyn ran into her arms.

Trevor also ---- looked over at her, then turned back to speak to Martha. Grandma, Celis here." 9 Upon hearing that Celeste had arrived, Martha smiled and tried her best to look toward the door. Celeste stepped forward and took her hand. "Grandma." Martha gently patted her hand, wanting to say something, but before she could utter a word, she drifted back into unconsciousness. Celeste panicked. "Grandma-" Trevor gently patted her shoulder and comforted her.

"Grandma just woke up, her condition still isn't stable, and she's low on energy. The doctor said it's normal-nothing to worry about." Hearing this, Celeste finally let out a breath of relief. But Martha looked so pale that she couldn't help but worry it was a sign of a temporary surge of energy before passing.

She asked, "Then what's the situation now...?" Trevor replied, "Although her condition hasn't fully stabilized yet, the doctor believes it will gradually improve." With that, the heavy weight on Celeste's heart finally eased. After a while, so as not to disturb Martha's rest, everyone, ---- including Celeste and Trevor, left the ward. Most of them-whether Teagan or Trevor-had received the news about Martha waking up while they were on their way to lunch. So, none of them had eaten yet.

Lincoln had been especially busy with work and had only come to see Martha twice while she was in a coma. This time, he had taken two extra days off to stay. Seeing that everyone still hadn't eaten, he said to Celeste, "Since Cel's back too, why don't we all go eat together?" Lincoln had always been busy with work. Whether before or after her marriage, Celeste hadn't seen much of him. But ever since she was little, he had always treated her fairly well.

2 Faced with his invitation, neither Queenie nor Teagan said a word -which basically meant they didn't object. Over the many years of her marriage to Trevor, Celeste had gone out to eat with the Fleming family less than three times in total. 5 Thinking back, those occasions felt like they happened ages ago. Since she and Trevor were already preparing for a divorce, she didn't want to intrude on their family gathering.

So she said, "It's okay, I've still got work to deal with--maybe next time." 1 Everyone could tell she was politely declining. ---- Hearing this, Lincoln paused and looked at Trevor. Before Trevor could say anything, Jordyn lowered her head in disappointment and fiddled with the little plush toy in her arms. Trevor didn't try to persuade her to stay either-he simply said, " I'll walk you out." He wasn't really walking her out-he clearly had something to say.

4 Celeste understood and said, "Thank you." Trevor turned to Jordyn and said, "Jo, go play with your Uncle Tucker for a while. I'll be back soon." "Okay," Jordyn replied, though her eyes still looked longingly at Celeste. Celeste saw the reluctance in her eyes, paused for a moment, and then rubbed her head. "When I have time, I'll take you out to have fun." 13 Jordyn immediately brightened up and grabbed the hand that had patted her head. "Okay!" =

---- Chapter 476 Celeste and Trevor walked side by side out of the hospital room, After they had gone a fair distance, Celeste took the initiative to speak, "You can say what you want now." 1 Trevor turned his head to look at her. "Grandma's condition hasn't stabilized yet. I'd like to postpone the divorce for a few more days." Celeste didn't look at him. Hearing this, her expression showed no surprise.

2 After a moment of silence, she said, "Got it." "Thank you." As she was about to walk away, Trevor added, "Is there anything you want? As a token of gratitude, I can help you with anything- or grant you a wish." 7 Celeste paused slightly at that, but without turning around, she replied calmly, "It's fine.

You can't give me what I want." 10 After saying that, she felt her words might be misinterpreted- 'that he would think she meant she wanted his love-so she added, "I don't mean what you think." + Trevor chuckled at her words. Standing just two steps behind --- her, he looked at her profile and said, "How do you know what I think' Celeste didn't know what he had interpreted her words to mean. Judging by his tone, though, he didn't seem angry.

Whatever he thought she meant, she didn't intend to explain further. So, she walked away in silence. Watching her back as she left, Trevor called out, "Then let's just say I owe you a favor?" 4 Celeste didn't stop walking. "Suit yourself." That night, the news that Martha had woken up and that the divorce between Celeste and Trevor had been delayed again reached both the Lockets and the Shaws. Patricia said, "It's better that Mrs. Fleming Senior woke up than remained in a coma.

Now that she's awake, the divorce between Celeste and Trevor is that much closer. No matter how you look at it, it's a good thing." 1 Linda and Ruby silently agreed, even if they didn't say it aloud. 2 Linda, however, had been in a low mood lately due to being publicly rejected by Beck in front of Celeste a few days ago, so she didn't chime in. 7 ---- Wynn felt the same way.

In fact, compared to everyone else in the Lockets and the Shaws, she was the most eager to see Celeste and Trevor officially divorce. But even with her impatience, she could only accept it when Trevor chose to delay the divorce again for the sake of his, grandmother. 2 Martha waking up should have been something that made her happy-at least from any reasonable perspective. @ But then she heard that Celeste would be going to the Fleming Group tomorrow...

Last time, Celeste had only briefly showcased her skills at Fleming Group and already gained the recognition of the R&D department's core team-including Trevor himself. 1 If she showed up again and once more demonstrated her professional abilities-and if Trevor saw it... That thought made Wynn lose her appetite. She clenched her spoon as her mood sank. © The next day, after visiting Martha at the hospital with Betty, ---- Celeste prepared to head to Fleming Group.

Trevor was also at the hospital, and he knew she would be going there too. By the time Celeste left the hospital, it was already late. Since she didn't need to return to YodaVision, she could go straight to Fleming Group. Trevor also needed to return to the company to take care of matters. In theory, they could've gone together. But neither of them brought it up. Instead, they left the hospital one after the other, separately.

By the time Celeste arrived at Fleming Group, most people were already present in the conference room. The meeting had already been underway for a while. After Celeste finished speaking with a few people, she suddenly noticed that Trevor had entered the conference room at some point. She glanced at him briefly, then looked away. Perhaps seeing her confusion, the staff member sitting beside her leaned in and whispered with a smile, "Mr. Fleming came in more than ten minutes ago.

He wasn't supposed to attend today's meeting. But once he arrived, he's been sitting there ---- watching and listening to you talk the whole time... 7 "It's pretty obvious he came just to hear your 'lecture.'" Celeste had already built a reputation in Fleming Group's technical department. In fact, quite a few people from the department wanted to attend her "lectures." But not everyone had access to their conference room. Celeste said nothing in response. The meeting continued.

After Celeste finished another round of explanations, Trevor still showed no intention of leaving. Just then, someone glanced outside the glass wall and leaned toward him to whisper, "Mr. Fleming, Ms. Locket is here." Trevor heard and retracted his gaze from Celeste, looking out toward the conference room entrance. Wynn was indeed standing just outside the door. Others in the room also noticed her. Since they were having a break, someone gossiped in a low voice, "Mr.

Fleming's girlfriend came to the office to find him again." ---- Celeste overheard the gossip but didn't respond. Seeing Wynn, Trevor stood up and left the conference room. Walking toward her, he asked, "Didn't you say you had something to handle at InnovaTech? Why did you suddenly come over?" 12

The Breaking Point of Love

---- Chapter 477 Wynn gave a faint smile and said, "The matter was taken care of, so! came over." 3 In reality, she hadn't felt at ease. The meeting wasn't even halfway through before she left InnovaTech. ® She knew that Trevor didn't need to attend the meeting Celeste was participating in today, but just as she expected, he had indeed come down from upstairs specifically to sit in on Celeste's meeting.

Thinking about that made her feel sour inside, and her expression turned somewhat stiff.» Trevor checked the time. "I have a video meeting in about ten minutes. It'll take over an hour. Want to come upstairs with me and sit for a while?" 9 "Okay." Wynn returned to the Locket residence in the afternoon. When Patricia saw her, she asked, "Why are you back so early? Didn't you and Trevor go out for a meal?" 2 ---- "He had things to take care of." "I see." Wynn looked tired.

After kicking off her shoes, she was about to go upstairs to rest when Lilian noticed her expression and asked, "Did something happen? You haven't seemed in a good mood lately." Wynn paused briefly, then replied as if nothing was wrong, " Nothing. Just a little tired." 4 Lately, there had indeed been a lot going on in InnovaTech, and there hadn't been any breakthroughs in their core technology. It made sense for her to feel frustrated. 4 Because of this, Lilian didn't press the issue.

She simply asked someone to make some nourishing food and told Wynn to come eat. Janet had already come home from work. When Wynn sat down next to her, she greeted her, "Wynn." Wynn responded with a brief hum. As Wynn ate, Ruby munched on sunflower seeds and suddenly said, "Oh, right-the Simmons family's daughter, Nancy, got her engagement called off by the Thatcher family." © ---- The Simmons and Thatcher families she referred to were from Youtopia. Both families were well-matched in status.

Nancy and the eldest son of the Thatcher family, Landon, had grown up together. Both were refined and talented, and it was said they had a great relationship. 1 Nancy was quite beautiful and known to excel academically. While still in university, she had already received several patents, helping elevate her family's company significantly. 2 The Thatcher family had always been very satisfied with their future daughter-in-law.

It was even rumored the wedding was coming up soon-but unexpectedly, the Thatcher family broke off the engagement. Patricia was intrigued and asked, "Why did they suddenly call it off? Did something happen?" "It's a bit dramatic. Apparently, Landon cheated-get this-with Nancy's assistant. The assistant is said to be a graduate student, also quite capable, though not even close to Nancy in terms of professional ability.

© "But people say she's got a fun personality, unlike Nancy, who's all about work-too serious, always buried in the lab. Anyway, Landon is now absolutely determined to end the engagement-" 2 ---- "Didn't people say he really admired Nancy before? And thought she was talented? And she really is quite good-looking. Plus, Landon is known for being calm and self-controlled. It's hard to imagine him doing something like that..." "Exactly!

But you know how men are--it's not always about how good or accomplished a woman is. Just because you're more talented doesn't mean a man will love you." 3 "True that," Linda, still in a bad mood, felt slightly better after hearing this gossip and chimed in, "What's the point of a woman being capable and talented if that's all she has? = "Over time, a man will get tired of that. Landon getting bored is only natural." 2 Wynn had been listening half-heartedly, just to kill time.

But hearing this part, she suddenly paused and looked up. Celeste really was outstanding in her field. But apart from her professional ability, in every other aspect-she couldn't compare to Wynn. 12 Even if Trevor didn't yet know that Celeste was a student of Zachary, he already knew quite a bit about her strength. Still, at most, he had shown a bit more appreciation for her than before-nothing more... ® ---- But then she remembered what happened that morning when she went to Fleming Group.

From the moment Trevor found out she had arrived, he hadn't looked at Celeste even once-he simply took her upstairs right away. 1 The dark cloud that had hung over Wynn's head for days suddenly vanished. A smile finally appeared on her face.

The Breaking Point of Love

---- Chapter 478 Betty had caught a cold in the past couple of days. On Saturday morning, after Celeste visited Isabelle, she drove to the hospital to visit Martha. When she arrived, both Trevor and Jordyn were there. Martha was in better spirits than when she had just woken up. When she saw Celeste, a smile immediately appeared on her face. While Celeste chatted with Martha, Trevor didn't interrupt them.

He poured Celeste a glass of water and then quietly sat to the side, peeling apples for both Jordyn and Celeste. When he finished peeling and cutting the apples into small pieces, placing them on a small plate, and handing it to her, Celeste had no choice but to accept it and said, "Thank you." + "You're welcome." Seeing the two of them able to sit together and talk calmly, Martha sighed inwardly. Celeste had stayed with Isabelle for quite a while earlier.

So, after spending over half an hour with Martha, it was time for the latter's meal. ---- Martha looked at Trevor and said, "There's someone here to take care of my meals. Cel has been visiting me every day during my stay in the hospital.

Trevor, you should invite her out for a meal." Celeste was just about to decline when Martha gently patted her hand, shook her head, and said, "I don't mean anything by it." As she spoke, she also glanced at Trevor-the implication being that she truly wasn't trying to set them up. In fact, just like Miles, she had come to realize that ever since the two had decided to get divorced, they were actually getting along more harmoniously. 3 Naturally, she was pleased to see this.

Since they still had Jordyn between them, even if they weren't going to be husband and wife anymore, maintaining a good relationship was still beneficial. Trevor looked at Celeste and asked, "What would you like? Something local?" When she learned she could eat out with Celeste, Jordyn was delighted and came over to hold Celeste's hand. "Yeah! Mom, what do you want to eat?" Celeste paused for a moment before replying, "Something local." ---- Trevor stepped away to take a phone call.

While his back was turned, Martha lowered her voice and said to Celeste, "Cel, I really don't mean anything by this. It's just... Since you've already let go of him, and Trevor's attitude has softened now, if the two of you can maintain a good relationship, it would be better for Jordyn's future as well." 4 With how much Trevor liked Wynn, did they really think just a little lingering sentiment would be enough to complicate things between him and Wynn? As for Jordyn...

Celeste didn't say anything. After chatting with Martha a bit more, she left the hospital room. Later, in the private dining room, just after sitting down, Celeste's phone rang. She stepped outside to take the call. While talking, she happened to see Patricia and Linda approaching. 2 Trevor had his own private room at this restaurant. Usually, when Linda and the others came, they would eat and take things with them-all charged to Trevor's account.

5 ---- When Patricia and Linda arrived at the restaurant and found out that Trevor was there too, they didn't think much of it, assuming he was there for business and simply requested another private room. However, when they saw Celeste standing right in front of Trevor's exclusive private room, they immediately stopped in their tracks. Linda's expression darkened. "What are you doing here?" 2 Celeste, still on the call, didn't answer, nor did she care to.

The restaurant manager knew that Celeste had come with Trevor. Not only that, just earlier, he had seen Jordyn holding tightly onto Celeste's hand. It seemed the two had a very good relationship. Not knowing the full situation, the manager wiped the sweat from his brow and awkwardly explained, "This lady came with Mr.

Fleming..." Linda immediately asked, "Just the two of them?" 2 Trevor had previously instructed that the Shaws and the Lockets should be treated with courtesy, and since that instruction hadn't been withdrawn, the manager could only continue telling the ---- truth. 2 "No, Mr. Fleming's daughter is also with them."
