---- Chapter 537

Miles, who'd been bored out of his mind the whole evening, finally brightened up the moment he saw Beck. "Finally! You have no idea how long I've been waiting for you." & Beck smiled and patted him on the shoulder, and when he noticed Wynn looking over, gave her a polite nod before sitting down beside Miles. Linda didn't know that Beck would be there too. The scene of him bluntly rejecting her before was still vivid in her mind, and it still stung. So, when he showed up, she only glanced at him once before quickly lowering her head, not daring to look again.

Miles said, "Let's play Mafia later. Since Trevor isn't here tonight, we can finally have some fun. He wins every time, so it completely ruins the experience for the rest of us." Beck had already eaten before coming, but still took a few bites of the barbecue. Hearing that, he smiled, clinked glasses with Miles, and said, "Sure." They ate for a bit longer, but soon Miles and the rest couldn't wait to start the game. Beck, however, was a little distracted.

---- Ever since he arrived at the campsite, he had been quietly scanning the area, but hadn't seen Celeste anywhere After two rounds of the game, just as the next one was about to start, Beck suddenly paused, smiled faintly, patted Miles on the shoulder, and pointed in a direction. "I'm going to say hi to someone." Miles glanced over and saw he was pointing at Matthias. He didn't think much of it and waved him off. "Go, go." Then, he turned back to continue playing The others didn't notice, but Wynn did. She clearly saw that Beck's mind wasn't on the game at all.

But Beck had completely ignored her, not even realizing she'd already seen right through him. 2 Thinking of how he couldn't wait to go find Celeste, Wynn pressed her lips tightly together. Miles did notice that she didn't seem very happy tonight, but assumed it was because Trevor hadn't come, and didn't think further. 2 Linda, too, was watching Beck leave. ---- Moments ago, she'd been too nervous to even look at him, but realizing he'd seen her and didn't even want to acknowledge her made her heart sink further. Now, watching him walk away, she felt even more dejected-so much so that she couldn't even focus on the game anymore. 1 Matthias and Kieran had just returned to get some drinks when they spotted Beck. Matthias was surprised-he hadn't seen either Beck or Trevor earlier and assumed they weren't coming tonight. But now that he saw Beck alone, he realized Trevor really wasn't here. 1 As Beck walked over, Matthias greeted him politely. "Mr. Harper." Beck smiled. "Mr. Yoder." After a brief pause, he asked, "Ms.

Rodriguez isn't here?" Matthias knew Beck had been on good terms with Celeste recently, so, hearing him ask, he pointed in a direction. "She's here-over there." Beck nodded. Seeing the drink in Matthias's hand, he said, "That's for Ms. Rodriguez? If you don't mind, may I join you? I'd like to say hello." ---- Matthias thought it was quite considerate of him. Clearly, Beck valued this potential business partner. "Sure." After walking for a bit, Beck finally saw Celeste. But when he did, he realized she wasn't alone. Beside her were Caleb and Kieran.

Hearing footsteps, Caleb and Kieran both turned around. When they saw Beck, Kieran's expression instantly darkened, while Caleb looked slightly surprised. "Mr. Harper? You came too?"

Beck nodded. "I've been here for a while." Then his gaze fell on Celeste and on the telescope beside her. "Doing some stargazing?" Celeste hummed a reply. Beck looked genuinely interested. "What are you looking at now? Mind if I take a look?" Celeste turned to Kieran and said, "It's not my equipment, it's-" But Kieran's expression had already gone back to normal. "If you're interested, go ahead." Beck smiled. "Thanks." He'd handled telescopes before, though not often.

As he looked through the eyepiece, he asked, "What's that red patch in there?" Celeste replied, "A hydrogen cloud." "Which galaxy's hydrogen cloud?" The questions Beck asked were fairly basic, beginner-level stuff But Celeste didn't show a trace of impatience, answering each one calmly. ---- Kieran, however, watched quietly, his expression unreadable. Since Caleb, Trevor, and Beck's companies all had business ties with YodaVision, Beck's coming over to greet Matthias and Celeste didn't seem unusual-Caleb thought he was just being polite. But Kieran knew that until today, Celeste had no idea that both he and Beck liked her. And since she didn't know, and Beck clearly hadn't told her either, Kieran preferred to keep it that way. He deliberately hid any hint of hostility toward Beck. Even so, Caleb still caught on. Because the look Kieran gave Beck was the same cold, guarded look he'd once given him. Caleb paused, wondering if he was imagining it, but when he turned and caught the way Beck was looking at Celeste, he knew he wasn't mistaken. He glanced at Beck, surprise flickering in his eyes.

He truly didn't expect that Beck would like Celeste too. Then he gave a small, knowing smile. Given how exceptional Celeste was, it wasn't exactly surprising ---- 'that more than one man liked her. Beck would've liked to chat with her longer, but before he could, his phone rang-work-related. At the same time, Miles had also tagged him in the group chat, asking why he was taking so long. He slipped his phone back into his pocket and said to Celeste and Matthias, "I need to take this call. Let's talk again later." Celeste and Matthias both nodded. "Sure." Beck turned and left.

The group then went back to stargazing After a while, Lottie heard there were fireflies nearby and eagerly pulled Celeste along to go see them. The mountain had all sorts of surprises. The spot where the fireflies gathered was quieter, with fewer people around, so both Caleb and Kieran, worried for the women's safety, went along too. They weren't the only ones interested-quite a few others had heard about the fireflies and wanted to check them out. Not long after, Wynn also heard about it and decided to go as ---- well Unlike Celeste's group, though, she went alone.

Carrying a flower lantern, she hadn't even reached the clearing yet when she saw, not far away, both Caleb and Kieran standing close to Celeste-each gently releasing a firefly into her open palm. Wynn knew a bit about Caleb and Jorge's circle-none of them were particularly close with Trevor or Matthias's group Normally, given Caleb's tight schedule, even if he wanted to hang out, it would be with his own crowd. So, for him to show up here, spending the evening with Matthias and the others-there had to be a reason. And now, that reason was clear as day.

If before she'd still had a sliver of doubt about whether Caleb really liked Celeste-then now, she had her answer. Caleb truly liked her.
