Chapter 59

Victoria Adylyn got home, went straight to her room for a shower, and packed a bit of her stuff after which she got her baby ready for bed.

She was about to read Sophie her bedtime story before she discovered that she might as well come clean to her daughter and prepare her mind for what was to happen.

“My love, I have something to discuss with you.

Her eyes lit up. “My birthday party.”

Vicky smiled. “We were definitely going to throw you a party but I have something else to discuss with you.”

“Okay. The little girl smiled regardless, excited that her mom was going to throw her a party.

“How do I say this?” She mumbled to herself, sighing.

“I want to talk to you about your Dad!”

“Daddy?!” She whispered, sounding confused.

“Yes, baby,” Vicky answered, caressing her cheek with the tip of her fingers.

“Your Dad is not dead.”

“But you told me Daddy died. It’s not good to tell lies, mama.”

Vicky was torn between keeping a straight face as well as smiling. The former was because she was a bit guilty about it and the latter simply because of the face her daughter put on, trying to scold her mama in her own little way.

“I know baby, I’m deeply sorry. It wasn’t Mama’s intention to tell you that.”

“A lot of things happened that you may not understand and that is why I kept the news away from you. Your Dada and I were not on good terms also. I’m so sorry baby.

“Are you sad?” Sophie asked her mommy. She could hear the concern in her little girl’s voice.

“Do you forgive me?”

“If I forgive you, you won’t be sad anymore?”

“Yes!” Vicky answered, nodding.

“I’m not mad at you, mama.

“You mean it?” She smiled.

Sophie nodded. “But when can I see my Dada?”

“You have seen him before,” Vee whispered.

“When we came back from Vinny’s party?”

Vicky nodded to her Daughter’s question as she referred to the airport scene.

She had expected her daughter to talk about it or even ask questions after that day but it was as though that scene was washed away from her memory.”

“Yes, that is your Daddy. I could not introduce you both properly because Mommy and Daddy were really not on good. terms and for some other reasons that you may not really understand.”

“Adult reasons?”

Vicky nodded Smiling. “Yes, adult reasons.”

“We are traveling tomorrow so you are going to meet him.”

Sophie smiled, “promise?”

“I give you my word, my baby.”

“Thank you, Mommy.” The little girl initiated a hug with Vicky. Vicky hugged her too, kissing her cheek.

“Are you excited?” She asked even though it was very evident on her daughter’s face.

The little girl nodded.

“What are you going to say to him when you see him?”

Vee watched with a proud smile as her daughter blushed.

“I’m going to ask him to play dress up with me.” She whispered.

Vicky laughed “Daddy is a really busy man but I am sure he won’t be able to refuse you. You will definitely have him. wrapped around your little fingers”

“I can’t wait for you to meet him Vicky leaned closer to her daughter, placing a deep kiss on the crown of her forehead.

“I have a surprise for you”

“What? Chocolates?”

Vicky burst into a peal of satisfied laughter. “Better than chocolates”

“Okay! Where is it?” Sophie mumbled, looking around her room for any surprise, knowing it had to be a tangible gift.

“You are going to have a baby sibling”

The switch between Sophie’s expression from her being excited about a surprise to her having teary eyes about the news. made Vee start to get emotional

“A baby brother?” At this point, tears were rolling down her cheeks.

Vee moved closer to her daughter and wiped the tears away with her thumb.

“We don’t know if it’s going to be a boy yet. We will find out soon but you are definitely having a baby sibling. It is growing in mommy’s belly already.”

“You will take care of it. Won’t you?”

Sophie nodded, sniffing.

“I know my love, I know you would be the best big sister ever.”

She nodded.

“You want to say Hello to your baby sibling? You want to touch my belly?”

Sophie nodded, crawling closer to her mother

Vee was putting on a pajama set so it was easy for her to raise her top a bit and for Sophie to bond with her little one.

She smiled when Sophie’s warm and small hand gently caressed her belly.

She couldn’t believe she had been looking into her daughter’s eyes for days now and had kept the news to herself all this while.

“Hi baby sibling,”

Vicky almost teared up when she saw her baby girl place a kiss on her belly. At this point, she wiped away tears from the corner of her eyes with her fingers and quietly made a promise to continue to be the best mother she could to her children.

Victoria had honestly not been excited about expecting the baby but seeing the love her daughter was showing in less than one minute of her finding out about her sibling made her want to give this new phase of her life so many chances.

“Mommy,” Sophie looked up at her mother. “Baby sibling can share my cereal and snacks with me. Also, there is no need to buy another bed when baby sibling comes. I want him or her to sleep on this bed with me.”

Vee smiled, “if I knew you would give me all the motivation I needed, I would have told you first about the pregnancy.” She mumbled, her daughter not quite catching what she said.

“Is it possible to love you so much more than I already do? You are such an amazing girl with the most beautiful heart.” Sophie smiled beautifully, enjoying the praises from her mother.

“Yeah, you would be able to share your snacks with her when she is born and grown to eat all of it. Baby sibling will need to be in mommy’s room when it is still small and if it’s a girl, you can always share your room with her when she is of age. That is if you don’t change your mind.”

“No!” She said confidently, shaking her head. “I’m not going to change my mind.”

Vicky smiled, “We shall see about that.”

“I want you to go to bed early. We have a long flight to catch tomorrow.”

Sophie nodded.

The duo got comfortable on Sophie’s bed, with Sophie’s head on her mother’s chest and her hand on her mother’s belly, Vee started reading her bedtime story.

After two stories, Sophie fell asleep.

Vicky gently got off beside her, tucked her in after which she placed a deep kiss on the crown of her daughter’s forehead. She went to the other side of Sophie’s room and checked her travel bag which Gloria packed earlier, just to make sure the essential items were there. She added a few things to the travel bag after which she locked it up, then proceeded to pick out her baby girl's outfit for the next day.

Getting back to her room, Vicky continued her packing and after she was done, She also selected the clothes she was going to wear the next day.

She proceeded to her nightstand, took her drugs, and gulped them down with a glass of water after which she crawled into her bed with her phone.

She sighed, scrolling through, then eventually went to her browser then typed Oscar's full name in the search button.

There was lots of information about him that Vee had no idea which one to read first. She was only interested in knowing if he was still based in Wayde Enterprises. But the first news she saw on the page was about his divorce from his ex-wife which cost him a reasonable amount of his fortune but he was still a Billionaire regardless.

The page was also filled with other scandals and news but getting the information she wanted. She logged off after.
