Chapter 1001 Who's to Blame

Jenny lowered her head and took a while before she finally said, "I'm sorry." "Sorry?" Alec sneered and wiped the corner of his eye as he said coldly, "No need for that. You and I have nothing to do with each other. Now, you can take care of whomever you want. I have no right to interfere."

"He saved me..."

"Yes! He saved you! I damn well wish it was me who saved you at that time! H

Even if he had to spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair, Alec wished he was the one who saved her. He rarely got angry, especially not in front of Jenny, but he couldn't hold back that day.

Jenny had promised to take care of Evan, which basically meant she wouldn't be able to be with him. He was already preparing to confess his feelings to her, but he didn't foresee things would turn out that way.

After a long time, Jenny regained her composure and raised her head. "You need to calm down first. It might not stay this way forever."

They'd already contacted the best doctors. Perhaps, there was another way.

When Vincent rushed to the bar, Paul was desperately trying to stop Alec from drinking. Pushing open the door to the private room, Vincent was a little stunned to see the scene before him.

"Mr. Faust, are you okay?" Vincent asked.

Both of them turned to look at him when they heard his voice. "What could be wrong with me?" Alec replied.

"Miss Walter called me and said you had a disagreement with her. She was worried about you," Vincent said.

Alec sneered at his words and finally stopped trying to grab the wine glass from Paul. "Worried about me? Does she think I'll die because of her or something?"

Vincent felt awkward as he thought, "Isn't that what you're doing now?"

When Alec returned to the hospital, he found out that Jenny had already completed her discharge procedures; her ward was empty. He went straight to the ward where Evan was located, and as he had expected, Jenny was there. However, besides Jenny and Evan, Gilbert was there too. He had probably come to visit because he had heard about Evan's situation.

Alec didn't go in and sat on a bench outside the door. He didn't know what he could do at the moment, but he couldn't just sit back and do nothing either. It made him feel a bit frustrated.

Inside the ward, Gilbert looked at Evan with a complicated expression and said, "Don't be too disheartened. There must be another solution."

"Yeah," Evan responded with little emotion.

"Regardless of what happens, you saved Jenny. If you really have to spend the rest of your life in a wheelchair, we will take responsibility for it," Gilbert said.

"Yes. Are you blaming me right now?" Alec wanted to laugh, but he couldn't.

It hadn't been long since all of it happened. Was Jenny protecting Evan just because he was injured?

Jenny opened her mouth but ultimately didn't say anything. Instead, she looked at Gilbert and said, "Evan has just woken up. Why are you talking to him like that? What if something happens to him because of how you talked to him?"

"Just because he saved you, he thinks he can make such an unreasonable demand now?" Gilbert regretted bringing Evan back in the first place.

But then, he thought that if Evan hadn't been there, then Jenny would have been the one who got hurt yesterday. That was not the outcome he wanted to see either.

Jenny sighed. "Gilbert, Evan didn't ask anything of me. I volunteered."

"Liar. I heard him make the request." Alec spoke up from the side. If Evan didn't make such a request?

he finished speaking, Jenny glared at him and said, "Can't you keep your mouth his lips and didn't say anything else. He continued to sit there and we can find other ways to do it. Even if I have to support him for the rest of his life, I won't said, "Gilbert, I understand what you mean, but Evan ended up like this because of me. Even if we can provide him with side. It was simply to make himself feel better. She knew such a doctor you are, Dr. rolled her eyes at him and couldn't be bothered of his life, you'll have to take care of him for the rest of your life. Then your own first, but she gradually realized the implications as they discussed the matter. "I know, but if it hadn't been for Evan saving me, I might have died back life, the fact remained that she was still alive, and she owed so hopelessly stubborn!" Alec couldn't help mouth!"

Chapter 1005 Delusional

After Alec was some distance away, Gilbert finally spoke up and asked Jenny, 'You should know what it means for you and Evan if you choose to take care of him for the rest of your life, right?'

"I know." Jenny nodded and turned her gaze away from Alec's back.

"Maybe we're just not meant to be," she added.

In fact, Jenny was ready to accept Alec's confession and become his girlfriend. She hadn't expected this turn of events.

Gilbert sighed. He used to be opposed to Jenny getting together with Alec. But now that they really couldn't be together with each other, he felt a little saddened. Perhaps it was because this wasn't what Jenny had chosen voluntarily.

"I still hope you think it over carefully. There are many ways to repay him. It's not necessary to resort to such an extreme arrangement," Gilbert advised. To him, this kind of lifelong commitment was far too much.

Upon hearing that, Zeke's frown deepened immensely. "He may not be able to resolve everything now, but you should take into account the fact that I'm not dead yet!"

"How can he be so sure that Yakov won't be able to sort out our family's mess with me watching over him? What arrogance!" Zeke fumed inwardly.

"Since you don't believe me, let's wait and see." Alec stood up. He didn't intend to do anything to Zeke right then; he just wanted to vent.

As he reached the door, Alec stopped in his tracks and turned back. "You're old now. There are many things that you can't do anymore."

Zeke's face turned ashen instantly, and he stared coldly in the direction Alec left.

Alec quickly disappeared from Faust Manor. He seemed to have come over just to say those words on purpose, and Zeke was baffled about his intentions.

Alec was amused by her words and stared at her with a hint of derision. "Do you think we're that close?"

"Alec, I know you're upset because of Jenny, but you don't have to take it out on me." Blake was displeased. No matter what, she was still a daughter of an affluent family. Although she didn't have much presence within the family, no one else dared to talk to her so rudely.

Unfortunately for her, Alec never cared about her status or upbringing.

He looked at her impassively, and Blake felt a shiver run down her spine. "I know about Jenny's situation, but I swear it has nothing to do with the Watkins. They wouldn't want to mess with the Walters."

Even until now, the Fausts were still keeping an eye on the Watkins. If the Watkins dared to offend the Walters at this time, they would be seeking death.

Blake was speechless hearing Alec's words. She didn't expect Jenny would decide to take care of Evan for the rest of his life. If that was the case, she couldn't do anything about it. "I can't possibly ask Jenny to give up on that idea, can I?" Blake started racking her brain for a solution.

While she was nagging about the impossibility of it all internally, Alec suddenly spoke up.

"If you want me to help you take over the Watkins family, it's not entirely impossible.'

Upon hearing that, Blake's eyes lit up. "Are you agreeing to help me?" she asked.

"I can help you take control over the Watkins on the condition that I can successfully gain control over the Faustus. So, you have to find a way for the Watkins to stir up some trouble, do you know what I mean?"

Blake was stunned for a moment, but she soon understood what Alec was hinting at. The Faustus were already in trouble, and giving them more trouble at this time would double the pressure on Yakov and render him unable to cope with it all.

However, Blake also had her own difficulties. 'I don't have much say in the Watkins."

Soon, her hair was blown dry. Alec then asked, "Have you had dinner?"

"Not yet." She'd just come home from the hospital, and all she'd wanted was a shower and good sleep. She hadn't been getting good rest these few days.

"I'll make something for you." Alec got up, wanting to go into the kitchen.

Jenny grabbed him quickly. "There's no need. There aren't a lot of ingredients here. Let's just order takeout."

She could smell the alcohol on Alec. He'd just come home and had to be exhausted. She couldn't bear to let him cook for her.

"That's fine too." Alec did not insist on cooking. He was actually feeling dizzy, but that didn't stop him from cooking for her if needed.

They went back to the living room, and Alec shut her door, saying, "You should be more careful in the future. What if someone else besides me were to walk in? That would be dangerous."

Chapter 1010 Gone Mad

Maybe her feelings had been suppressed for too long. Jenny didn't know what was going through her mind. When Alec prepared to leave, she pulled him back and kissed him on the lips.

She felt that she had gone mad.

But then Alec pushed her away and stared into her eyes. "Do you know what you're doing?"

"I don't. I don't know anything at all." She didn't want to know, either, and she didn't want to think. She was only following her heart.

"You'll have to remember that you brought this on yourself." Before Jenny could respond, Alec leaned in and kissed her passionately.

How they got to the bedroom and ended up lying on the bed was just a blur in Jenny's head. But when she woke up the next morning, her body ached all over as if a tank had run over her in the night.

She came to her senses and stared at the empty bedroom, their clothes scattered all over the floor. It was then that she understood what had happened last night.
