Chapter 1011 Don't You Think It's Selfish?

"There's no need. I'll go over by myself,' Jenny declined quickly. Things were incredibly awkward.

Unfortunately, Evan refused to leave. "I'm already downstairs. Aren't you going to let me go up? Besides, you have to move all your things. Can you handle them?'

God knew how happy Evan was when Jenny agreed to move in with him. He'd come there early to personally bring her over.

Jenny wanted to say that she could, but he was already downstairs. He wouldn't leave no matter what she said. "I'll come down to get you."

"It's alright. I have an assistant. Just tell me which floor you're on.' Evan didn't want to trouble Jenny. He was wheelchair-bound, but that didn't mean he had completely lost his mobility.

Jenny had no choice but to tell him which floor she was on. She hung up and looked at Alec anxiously.

"Evan is coming up. Why don't you..." Jenny opened her mouth to speak but didn't know how to express what she wanted. Alec had made this breakfast. How could she chase him out?

He said it sincerely. Jenny's eyes reddened as she listened.

But Alec wanted to laugh. Evan's words sounded sweet, but he wouldn't have said things like that if he didn't want her to stay with him. He was saying it only because he was sure that she would agree.

"You don't have to say anymore, Evan. I'm taking care of you voluntarily," Jenny replied. She wasn't cold and ruthless. Evan had sacrificed his life for her. Couldn't she take care of him?

Alec said that Evan was being selfish. Jenny felt that if she were to decline Evan, she'd be the selfish one.

Jenny's response was just as Alec expected. He glared at Evan coldly. Why hadn't he realized how sly this person was before?

When Jenny heard that, she opened her mouth, yet was at a loss for words. She chose to remain silent.

Not long after, they reached Evan's villa. Howard helped her bring her things inside.

"Jenny, go pick out a room that you like." There were many rooms in the villa. Besides the master bedroom where he slept, every other room was empty.

"I'll just stay in the room next to yours.=", " Jenny said. "It'll be easier for me to care for you."

"Alright." Evan nodded and looked at Howard. "Put Jenny's things in the room."

"Alright." Howard took her suitcases upstairs.

Jenny stared as Howard left. It was then that Evan introduced him to her. " He was my assistant when I was overseas. When he heard about the incident, he flew over to see me. You can order him around in the future."

Howard didn't fret about the matter. He looked at the room next door, seemingly struggling to find the words to say. "Do you really like Jenny, sir?"

"I'm warning you, don't you dare harbor any ill-intentions toward her." Evan's face turned sour. He would not allow anyone to lay their hands on Jenny, not even Howard.

Howard turned pale, understanding what Evan meant. "You care too much for her. That's not good."

If he cared too much about her, she would become his weakness. If Evan had a weakness, he would not be able to be the commander of his assassins.

"This is my personal business. It's none of yours." Evan waved him off, clearly not wanting to talk about it anymore.

Howard had no choice but to stay silent.

"You may leave." Evan sat in his wheelchair once more, becoming immobile.

Chapter 1015 Mortimer Is About to Waken

Alec wasn't too surprised. It was to be expected. "There are many families in Bardoff City. Plenty of them have their sights set on the Fausts. They never had the chance to strike before, but now they do. Of course, they'd have to kick them down. We'll just wait. As long as Zeke does not think of a plan quickly, those people will only grow more aggressive, and the Fausts will be destroyed."

When that time came, they might even be bankrupt. After all, the Fausts were not doing clean work.

"What if Zeke would rather let the Fausts be destroyed than look for your help?" Vincent knew that Alec's ultimate goal was to inherit the Fausts. He was afraid that Zeke would be stubborn.

Alec sneered, not worried at all. "Relax. He'd never sit by and watch if that happened."

Alec knew how much Zeke valued the Fausts. That was precisely the reason Alec was sure he would become their last hope.

"Okay." Vincent harbored no doubts. He trusted Alec's abilities fully.

"I just moved in. I'll be your neighbor from now on." He didn't want Jenny to put all of her effort into taking care of Evan. It didn't matter if she had no feelings for him now. They could develop in the future.

In Alec's eyes, after what had happened the previous night, Jenny was already his. Evan was trying to fight him for her. Well, that would depend on whether he could Jenny was speechless. Alec was on the second floor of the villa next to them. He wasn't kidding.

"You've got too much time on your hands, Mr. Faust." Evan sneered, suppressing the anger in his chest.

"Not really. I'm just rich." Although Alec still hadn't inherited the Fausts, money was not a problem.

His words incensed Evan. Alec was rich; that was true. Evan busted his ass off overseas, sacrificing his life for money, and was still nowhere as rich as Alec.

"What are you doing, Alec?" Jenny glared at him. She hadn't expected him to move and to be so near.

Alec smiled at her. This villa was built in the perfect spot. Even if Jenny and Evan stayed in the same room, he would be able to see their movements. It was so convenient.

"Have you had your lunch?" Alec asked.

Jenny nodded, thinking that he simply had nothing to do. "You look carefree."

"Not really. I just miss you," Alec said those tender words with a tender look on his face. Jenny blushed, unable to describe what she was feeling.

Just before she was about to speak, Evan pushed his window open next door. He glared at Alec coldly and said, ' Do you know what being a public nuisance means?"

"Was I being that loud? Were you tossing and turning in bed, perhaps?" Alec mocked. He hadn't even been able to talk with Jenny.

Once the formalities were over, Jenny looked at Evan excitedly. "With Dr. Gaarder's help, Evan, you'll definitely recover."

However, Evan didn't reply. He had not expected Alec to put in so much effort in finding treatment for him.

Of course, Evan didn't think Alec was doing this for his own good. He just wanted to steal Jenny away from him.

His face darkened, and he said calmly, "There's no need. I believe in the doctors at Bardoff Hospital. They will find a way to treat me. I don't trust anyone that Alec brings me."

"Don't be too cocky, Evan!" Alec roared.

Jenny rushed over to advise him as well. "Evan, Dr. Gaarder is a specialist in this field. Just let him examine you."

He looked at Dr. Gaarder. "Thank you for coming here personally. However, I was not angry. He'd seen many things in his old age, nothing, merely looking at Alec next to him. He was the one who brought him there, after it because you don't dare Alec?" Evan met his gaze with Alec's expression shifted when he walked out of Evan's villa.

Alec didn't expect Evan to be so unwilling to let Dr. Gaarder check his injuries. He turned and said to the doctor, "I'm sorry. I'm making you stay in Bardoff City for a few more days."

"It's fine. It's been a while since I've been in the country. I could walk around the city for a bit." Dr. Gaarder didn't mind. He looked at Alec and said, "That gentleman seemed very resistant to my treatment."

"Yes. But it has nothing to do with you. It's a personal strife between us," Alec said.

Dr. Gaarder smiled. He considered Evan's condition based on what he saw and said, "Although I have not performed a check-up on him, I think it's odd. N

"Really? What is?" Alec halted his footsteps and looked at him.

"From the records you showed me, Mr. Clarke's injuries should be very serious. Even if he could sit in a wheelchair, he would not have been as animated as he was today," Dr. Gaarder said.

Evan said nothing. She continued, "I know you don't like Alec, but Dr. Gaarder is truly a specialist in his field. He's seriously amazing. I hope you'll let him examine you. Maybe there's a chance for you to recover after all."

"Is Alec that nice? Jenny, you know of the animosity between us. I don't trust him," Evan said.

"He just wants you to recover quickly." Jenny knew Alec's character very well. He wanted Evan to get better quickly so she would not have to stay by his side forever. She believed that Alec was not harboring any ill intentions. However, talking sense into Evan would prove to be a challenge.

Evan looked at Jenny and asked, "Would you leave me if I never recovered? n
