Chapter 1141 What Have I Done Wrong?

They came quickly. As Jenny had suspected, Max was next to Jade when she called. Hence, he came, too.

"It's been a while since we've met, Jenny." Max was still the charming man he was. However, he looked easier on the eyes. It could be a psychological thing.

Jenny couldn't help teasing him. "Yeah. I remember that you even wanted to pursue me before. What a pity you gave up in the end."

Max was speechless. He snuck a glance at Jade and coughed dryly. "I was just playing you. You're not even my type."

"Oh really? You seemed pretty serious about it at the time. Aren't I right, Alec?" Jenny looked at Alec, who had long been by her side.

Alec nodded solemnly. "I was afraid that you'd actually end up with her."

Max wanted to cry. "What have I done wrong? Why are you torturing me?"

Jenny did not say anything to that. They seemed to have already prepared everything. "Is there anything that you need me to help with?"

"We actually do," Max said, smiling.

But then, Jade continued for him, "We've already planned out the wedding, but I haven't found my bridesmaids yet. So, I was thinking of making you and Stephanie my bridesmaids.'

"Of course, I can!" Jenny agreed at once. She would gladly do it. But then, she asked, "I've divorced. Wouldn't that affect anything? Bridesmaids are supposed to be unmarried."

"It's okay. I don't care about all that." What Jade wanted was to have her friends be her bridesmaids. She didn't care if they were divorced or married.

Jenny had no reason to refuse now. "That's settled, then."

Then, she said, "Are the groomsmen decided?"

Max nodded. "Yup."

Jenny nodded in satisfaction at his attitude. "Jade is my family. If you make her suffer, 111 beat you up!"

The Walters could easily defeat the Pearsons. Of course, Jenny didn't want that to happen. She would prefer to see Jade and Max happily married.

"You're worrying too much." Max smiled. "Why would I be in such a hurry to marry her if I didn't like her?' He couldn't wait to marry Jade. He loved her that much and wouldn't let anyone object.

"How come I've never seen you so deeply in love?" Jenny teased. Perhaps she was still biased against Max.

After all, Max had given her the impression that he was a player. If he had just been honest from the start, this wouldn't be a problem now.

"Well, maybe it's because..." Max cocked his head and looked at her, "you're not the person I like."

Jenny was speechless.

She no longer turned the pages of the book she was reading. She merely stared at him as if she just couldn't get enough of him.

Her gaze was scorching. Even Alec, who was preoccupied with work, could feel it. However, he said nothing and pretended not to notice. He kept on working, albeit a little distracted.

While preoccupied, Jenny had gone up to his desk. She knocked on his table. "You're daydreaming."

Alec looked at her. Right now, Jenny looked mesmerizing. "Your gaze was distracting me."

"Are you done with work?" she asked.

"I'm fine," he replied.

"But you needn't worry. Warren is looking after him. Normally, nothing really happens." Alec didn't know who he was comforting—Jenny or himself.

Jenny didn't talk about it anymore. She was thinking of coming there often to see him so that they would have no regrets in the future.

She couldn't help thinking of her own grandfather. Although he wasn't really her biological grandfather, Jenny still cared for him a lot. She was grateful that when he died, she was by his side. 1

The plane landed, and they walked out of the airport. They sat in the car that Warren had prepared for them.

"Mr. Alec. Miss Jenny." Warren was in a good mood seeing them both.

When he saw Jenny, he felt conflicted. Back then, he drove Jenny to City Hall to get her divorce agreement. He used to think she and Alec were not fated to be together. Who would have thought that their fate was already written in the stars?

Alec smiled softly and looked at Jenny. "Grandpa, I only want Jenny as my wife. Of course, I won't let go of her."

"Haha!" Old Mr. Faust laughed heartily. "See, you're creating trouble for yourself! Had you listened to me, things wouldn't have ended up this complicated!"

Alec had only succeeded in making Jenny his girlfriend after the winding detour, which was still a far cry from her wife status in the past.

Looking embarrassed, he rubbed his nose and said, "This shows that Jenny and I are destined to be. No matter how much we've gone through, we still end up together."

Old Mr. Faust did not reply, as he had decided to close an eye on Alec's remark. After all, his grandson would never admit that he had been making dumb decisions in his relationship with Jenny.

Chapter 1147 It's All in the Past Now

Jenny was surprised when Old Mr. Faust brought up the issue. She knew about his intention early on, but evidently, she didn't care because she never bothered to bring it up anymore. Of course, she hated being a pawn in someone's game, but she acknowledged that Old Mr. Faust treated her well during her two-year marriage. Moreover, she was the one who gave the final nod to the marriage after Old Mr. Faust and her grandpa discussed it. Therefore, she had no one to blame.

"Grandpa, why are you bringing it up? It's all in the past now." She smiled at him with a calm look on her face, much to his relief.

He insisted, "It doesn't matter. I was in the wrong. I had wanted to find a chance to apologize, and I feel better now that I have done it."

In reality, he insisted on apologizing to her because he feared Jenny would hold a grudge against the Fausts due to his selfish intentions from years ago.

"It's all in the past," she repeated. Yes, everything was in the past. Old Mr. Faust might have been calculative, but that was years ago. She trusted that Alec was honest with her.

They chatted for a bit, and he learned that Alec and Jenny would visit Orchid

Chapter 1148 Faye's Letter

The three of them were chatting over dinner at the dining table. Suddenly, Old Mr. Faust thought of something and waved at Warren. He then whispered something to the butler when he leaned in. Warren left very quickly, but he appeared again before long.

Jenny saw that the thing Warren brought over was a letter. That was quite unexpected.

"I suddenly remembered that we received a letter after you moved to Bardoff City. It's from Faye." He had not opened it and had no intention of giving it to Alec either before this. He was mainly worried that it might affect Jenny and Alec's relationship.

However, Old Mr. Faust felt there was no need for him to be so concerned anymore. Their relationship was much better than he had expected.

Therefore, he decided to hand the letter to Alec. After all, it was meant for him. He was Alec's grandfather, but he had no right to stop the letter from getting to him.

Jenny felt like it was only yesterday that everything had happened when she heard Faye's name.

He was so straightforward that Jenny didn't know what to say for a moment. "Are you sure? She was the person your savior had asked you to take care of."

"So what if he had saved my life? Do you think I'm—" Alec stopped midsentence. "In any case, I won't sacrifice my lifetime of happiness for her."

Jenny knew what he wanted to say. He wanted to bring up the fact that she had promised to take care of Evan. She pursed her lips and said nothing anymore. In any case, Alec better kept his word. Otherwise, she should not be blamed for showing no mercy.

Old Mr. Faust glanced at the two of them. Seeing they didn't get mad, he said satisfactorily, "That's right. You should just talk it through if there are any issues. I've never liked Faye."

He had always felt back then that Alec had taken too much care of Faye. However, no matter what he said back then, Alec wouldn't listen.

Fortunately, Alec had regained his senses at that moment. He was no longer as foolish as he was before.

Old Mr. Faust sneered a few times. He finally let Alec go after warning him once again.

When Alec came downstairs, Jenny was lying on the couch in the living room while tapping away on the phone. She was most probably chatting with someone as she was smiling.

"What are you talking about?" Alec walked over and stood behind her.

Jenny did not hide from him. While sending the message, she replied, "I'm discussing with Steph and Jade what kind of bridesmaid dresses to choose. We want something that looks good without stealing the bride's thunder."

"Any results? Let me have a look." Alec smiled and shook his head. He was thinking that women had plenty of choices, unlike men, who did not even need to choose. A black suit for all would do the job.

Jenny put her phone in front of Alec. "What do you think of this?"

Alec took a closer look at it. It was a long, green dress that might not be flattering on everybody. However, he glanced at Jenny's figure and complexion and felt that she would probably look good in it.
