Chapter 1251 Be Careful in the Future

In the following days, Jenny went to work as usual. However, she would check in on Leonard every day. Although Leonard was not her patient, he was her best friend's boyfriend. She had to watch out. If anything happened to him, Stephanie would have her head.

Thankfully, Leonard healed up quickly. He was ready to be discharged in a week.

The day he was discharged, Jenny saw him and Stephanie walking together. Their relationship blossomed during the days of Leonard's hospitalization. They had obviously fallen more in love with each other.

"You can go back to work, Jenny. I'll send him back," Stephanie said.

Jenny nodded and looked at Leonard. "Be careful in the future. You may not care about your life, but you must consider how others will feel."

"I know." Leonard knew what Jenny meant by that, and he had nothing to say in return. He felt that she was right.

Once she packed up all her things, she followed Alec out of the hospital, and they drove to the restaurant.

"What are we eating?" Jenny was in a good mood. After all, she had worked the whole day and attended to no. velxo a lot of patients. She felt accomplished and satisfied, so much so that she forgot all about the exhaustion in her bones.

Alec looked at her. "What do you feel like eating?"

"I'm fine with anything," Jenny said.

"Then you will go wherever I go."

"Okay." Jenny had no objections to that. She didn't notice anything different with Alec's gaze. If she had any inkling of what would happen after, novelxo she would not be this calm.

The car arrived at the entrance of the restaurant. It was a place they often came to eat because of the great food and good ambiance.

Jenny didn't think there was anything no. velxo off about it. She followed him into the restaurant, which was when she realized that it was far too quiet. "Why is no one here?"

Chapter 1253 Go Away

Although Jenny could guess what Alec was up to when she saw Stephanie and the others, seeing him actually get down on one knee and present the ring to her was a thrilling experience. She'd fantasized about this scenario more than once, and now it was finally coming true. She had to admit that she was overjoyed.

Although she and Alec shared a tumultuous history, they finally ended up together. She had long fallen in love with him, so this marriage would not be like the first. In fact, in Jenny's eyes, this was the real marriage.

"Jenny?"

Jenny was just staring at Alec with seemingly no intention of accepting. Alec couldn't help getting worried. "I know I was an asshole in the past and didn't treat you well. But this time, I swear to be better to you. Whatever happened before will not happen again."

A huge misunderstanding had been committed between them. If they hadn't married and then divorced in a haze, he and Jenny would not have had such a hard time getting together.

Alec scolded him inwardly for being so immature, then said coldly, "I'd advise you to be more careful with your words in the future. You're married now. Jade might run after you with a rolling pin one day."

Max glanced nervously at Jade for a second. However, she didn't look angry. He retorted, 'Jade and I are on great terms. She wouldn't mind.'

"That's enough. Eat your food." Jade rolled her eyes. Although she knew Max didn't really have feelings for Jenny, she felt it was best if he shut up now, in case he killed the vibe.

Max instantly looked at Jade pitifully as if wanting to object. But when he saw her warning glare, he shut up.

Jenny didn't expect the flamboyant Max to be subdued after his marriage to Jade. He was a family guy now, nothing like the arrogant bastard he was before.

Melanie was straightforward. She said whatever she wanted. Even before Paul, she didn't have any intentions to lie or pretend. She didn't care what sort of person Paul was. It was enough that she liked him.

Paul said nothing, merely snatching his glass back. "Unfortunately, I don't like you back."

"Why not? Is it because I'm not as pretty as Stephanie? Or is it because you think I'm no match for her?" Melanie couldn't understand why Paul still hadn't let go even though Stephanie and Leonard were already together. He had no hope at all. Wasn't he tired?

Paul kept on drinking, sweeping his gaze over Stephanie and Leonard. Stephanie was leaning against his shoulder. Although Paul had verbally let her go, he couldn't help feeling an ache in his heart when he saw her.

Melanie noticed his gaze and waved her hands in front of him. "Stop looking. She won't be yours no matter how long you look."

Then, they saw Melanie cradling Paul's arm. She said, "Everyone, let me introduce us. This is my boyfriend, Paul Wagner." She smiled novel.xo brightly no.velxo as if she had won a fabulous prize.

Everyone was stunned. Alec clapped first, to which Jenny seconded." Congratulations."

It was worth celebrating.

If Paul could hit it off with Melanie, Stephanie no.velxo would no longer be plagued with worries.

Jenny looked at Alec, sensing that he had relaxed tremendously. Maybe he knew it was alright that Paul most likely had agreed to be novel.xo Melanie's boyfriend even though he had no feelings for her, as long as he was willing to take that first step. What did it matter if their feelings were genuine or not?

Stephanie looked at them and smiled at Melanie. She even gave her a "good luck" gesture. She and Melanie chatted sometimes. novelxo Although Melanie knew Paul liked Stephanie, she had not shown animosity towards her. Hence, Stephanie felt that she was a good person.

Alec was truly drunk this time. In fact, he was losing some of his consciousness. However, there was a smile on his lips. no.velxo He knew who was next to him.

"Jenny, do you know how happy I am?" He smiled, murmuring.

Jenny smiled. "I do."

Anyone would be able to tell based on what he was like now.

Once she carried him into the room, she threw him on the bed and sighed in relief. "You have to cut down on the drinks in the future. I'll let this pass tonight, but I won't care about you in the future."

It was tiring carrying someone so wasted around.

"Alright. I promise." Alec rubbed his forehead, sitting up with great effort.

"I'll wait for you downstairs." Alec had woken up early, and he had already washed up. He just hadn't woken her up.

Alec left the room. Jenny sat on the bed, staring into the distance for a while. Then, she got off the bed and went into the washroom.

Soon, Jenny went downstairs. Alec was already waiting for her in the living room, and breakfast was ready on the table. This scene alone made no.velxo it feel like they had already been married for a long time.

"And since she has accepted your proposal, I suppose that you two are ready for marriage," Graham said, this time looking at Jenny.

Alec obviously wanted to marry, but Graham wasn't so sure if Jenny wanted to. After all, she'd had a failed marriage before. He thought that she would take marriage more seriously.

Jenny was stunned. She looked at Alec, who was looking right back at her. She was silent for a moment. Then, she nodded determinedly. 'Yes. I'm ready to marry.'

Graham was serious. Alec was just about to nod when Jenny said, "Dad, you're worrying too much. If he ever mistreats me, I'll punish him myself." She was never one to accept the crap that life threw at her.

She'd already divorced once. She wouldn't be afraid to do it again.

"Don't worry, Mr. Walter. I'll treat her well." Alec honestly didn't know how else he could be good to her. He was already willing to give her his entire heart.

Afterward, Graham and Alec talked about the rough concept of the wedding. Jenny wasn't too interested in these things, so she went for a stroll.

It was summer, and flowers adorned Walter Castle. While Jenny admired them, footsteps sounded behind her. She didn't need to look back to know that it was Lynette.
