Chapter 1261 I Believe in Your Skills

Jenny recalled Graham's attitude toward Alec and nodded. "He probably does. They're already talking about the wedding arrangements." "Really? That's great." Stephanie was happy. "Now it looks like you and Alec will marry very quickly."

"Not necessarily. My dad insists on getting a priest to tell us when we should marry. Who knows what the date will be." Jenny knew what Stephanie was thinking. She wanted to solidify things between her and Leoanrd after Jenny and Alec married.

Stephanie smiled. She didn't think there was anything wrong with that. "You should get a nice date. Your marriage from before was sloppy. Now you have to take it seriously."

As Jenny's best friend, Stephanie wanted her to be happy. Hence, she didn't think there was anything wrong with waiting for a bit.

They talked in the coffee shop until night fell over the city. Jenny had to check on Alec's condition, so she didn't eat with Stephanie.

Chapter 1262 There Should Be Good News

Although Jenny and Alec had gotten engaged, it didn't make much of a difference to her. She still went to work the next day.

Possibly because of Alec's donations, the hospital hired a few more doctors. Even if Jenny didn't see the patients, they would be able to be treated.

Jenny was satisfied with this. She was much more relaxed now.

At night, Jenny received a call from Graham telling them about their wedding date. Apparently, the only time they could marry this year was in three months.

Jenny was exasperated. She knew that the date would be beyond their expectations.

Three months. She told Alec about it, who didn't have much of an issue with it. Three months was enough time for the wedding dress and the rings to arrive.

Warrens smiled and quickly went to make the arrangements. He soon returned to Old Mr. Faust's side. "You can rest easy now, Mr. Faust." "Yes, I can." Old Mr. Faust had held on for a long time because he was worried that Alec would end up lonely. Now, even if he left this world, novelxo Alec would have his own family.

"When they first divorced, I didn't think I'd see this day coming." Warren remembered arranging the wedding for Alec. Back then, he thought that it was all a pity. Jenny was such a good person, but Alec didn't know how to cherish her.

Who would have thought that after so many years, they would still end up together, with a stronger relationship than ever before?

Old Mr. Faust was happy. "I think that they're very compatible with each other. It seems that God thinks the same as I do."

"Yes. You are wise indeed, Mr. Faust," Warren said.

As they spoke, Jenny was finished checking on novelxo all the patients, and Alec had gone to the hospital to bring her home.

After dinner, Alec went to his study once more to work on his sketch.

Jenny didn't disturb him. She read in her bedroom. However, Gilbert suddenly called. "Gilbert, what's up?"

"Well, it's actually nothing," Gilbert said, hesitant to continue.

Jenny could tell that something was novelxo amiss and asked, "Gilbert, you can tell me anything. We don't keep anything from each other."

"I just want to ask you if Marigold has been to your hospital to do any checkups," Gilbert said after taking a deep breath.

Jenny was surprised. She sat up at once. "Gilbert, why are you suddenly so concerned about her?"

After he gave her that paycheck, they cut off all ties. Jenny thought Gilbert was truly that cold and never brought up Marigold to him again. But now, he was asking about her on his own.

When Jenny asked him that question, he didn't know what to say. "I'm just Jenny couldn't see Gilbert's expression and didn't After exchanging a feeling worried. Could something she was deep in thought, footsteps sounded from outside the bedroom. Alec walked in.

Chapter 1265 Whatever You Say

That was true, but Jenny still wanted him to sleep in his own room. "We'll be able to sleep together in the future. We should keep our distance now and enjoy whatever little time we have to ourselves." "Fine. Whatever you say." Alec didn't force it. He already guessed that Jenny wouldn't agree to it. He walked out. "Goodnight."

"Goodnight," Jenny said, waving to him as if shooing him away.

With a thud, Alec's door shut.

Jenny smiled and lay down, falling asleep quickly.

On the other side of town, after Gilbert novelxo ended the call with Jenny, he went straight home.

When Marigold heard his familiar voice, she knew for sure that she wasn't hallucinating. Her first instinct wasn't joy novel.xo but rather fear. She stepped back at once and looked at him warily. "Why are you here? What do you want?"

Her reaction was loud. Gilbert wasn't expecting that. "I was passing by."

Passing by? Marigold didn't believe it. She was novelxo far from the city center. Gilbert's activities would never lead him here.

"You haven't answered my question. I gave you all that money. Why are you living here?" Gilbert asked. His eyebrows were tightly knitted.

Marigold took a deep breath, maintaining some distance from him. Then, she replied, "Since you've given me the money, I can live wherever I want. Do I need your permission for that?"

In Parrington, Jenny and Alec walked out of the novelxo airport and sat in Warren's car.

"Hello, Mr. and Mrs. Faust," Warren said, smiling.

Jenny was stunned. This manner of greeting her seemed familiar yet foreign. "We're not married yet, Warren. You can just call me Jenny."

"You were always Mrs. Faust. But something happened before, nØvelxo and now you're back on track. Of course, I'd call you Mrs. Faust." Warren was happy. He witnessed Alec and Jenny coming together.

Even though they hadn't married yet, it didn't matter to him. Even before, when Alec and Jenny started dating, Warren had the same thoughts in mind.

Jenny wanted to speak, but Alec spoke first. "Warren is right. You're destined to be Mrs. Faust. It's not wrong of him to call you that."

Jenny couldn't help wanting to laugh when she saw Old Mr. Faust disciplining Alec. "Don't worry, Grandpa. If he fails to cherish me again, I won't give him any more chances."

This was Alec's last chance.

He'd finally pursued her after so many hardships. Now they were about to marry. Why wouldn't he cherish her? In fact, he wanted to tie her up in his room and lock her up forever.

"Alright, alright. You can go to the kitchen to see how things are going. I'll talk with Jenny." Old Mr. Faust waved his hands, shooing Alec off to the kitchen.

Chapter 1269 In Just A Few Months

As his father, Old Mr. Faust knew what Mortimer was like very well. If he stayed by Alfred's side forever, he would ruin the young man's life.

On top of that, Mortimer was his son. No matter how unpleasant their shared history was, at this age, Old Mr. Faust had let go of many things and no longer wished to care about all that.

"Do you want him to come back?" Jenny was surprised. She thought that Old Mr. Faust still held a grudge against Mortimer.

He sighed, "He's my son, after all. There's nothing wrong in letting him take care of me. And with him under my watch, he won't cause trouble for you."

"Alright. We'll tell him what you said once we're back in Bardoff City. I won't guarantee whether he'll want to come back." Mortimer might actually refuse to return.

When Old Mr. Faust heard they wanted to go to Orchid Village the next day, he suggested following them along. Alec didn't really agree with that.

"You'd better not go, Grandpa. It's too far." They had to drive for several hours, and Alec was worried about his health.

Old Mr. Faust knew what Alec meant, novelxo but he was insistent. "If I don't go now, I might not be able to again. I need to pay my respects to my friend."

Jenny's grandfather was his friend for many years. novelxo It was he who told him of Jenny's identity, and that was when they arranged for Alec and Jenny's marriage. When he died. Old Mr. Faust had no means to attend the funeral when he died. Now that he was at his end, he had to at least pay his respects. Otherwise, he wouldn't know what to say to him when they met in the afterlife.
