

Be Yours 471

Chapter 471 Thanks Anyway

Even with that, Old Mr. Faust still told Jenny truthfully, 'Actually, I don't know much about it either. I just happened to be in Parrington when this incident occurred, so I learned about it by chance.'

"By chance?" Jenny didn't believe there could be such a coincidence.

"Ah, never mind. It was actually because of your grandfather that I knew. He told me about it when he was still the Walters' servant." Old Mr. Faust knew that Jenny didn't believe him, so he decided to be honest. Since Jenny had already found out that much, there was no longer a need to hide anything.

"My grandfather? Why would he tell you?" Jenny didn't understand. Under reasonable circumstances, her grandfather should have kept this a secret and not told Old Mr. Faust.

"Your grandfather and I were good friends in Bardoff City. Later, when he brought you to Orchid Village, he couldn't ask the Walters to provide it would attract attention. So, I was the one who had been little better as she listened. However, she immediately thought of something and can consider it your grandfather's repayment to me. Then again, it's not quite accurate to say that. It's more like your grandfather's way of protecting you," Old Mr. Faust sighed. He paused briefly and continued, "At that time, no one knew when grandfather made that decision because we of what Old Mr. Faust had told her. He might not be her biological grandfather, but after so many finally said, "What about my mother? After she seems she's dead," Old Mr. Faust said. He knew that his words might sting, frowned, wondering why he couldn't give a definite answer on whether and explained, "Your father was the only one present at that time. He said she was dead, and there was had passed away. If she hadn't, her father

Jenny nodded, feeling like she had asked all the questions she could possibly ask. She didn't know what other question she could raise at

Chapter 472 Divorce if There Is No Love

'There's no need to thank me. You already know everything anyway, don't you? You'll know the specifics sooner or later.' Zachary was helpless. If it hadn't been for the fact Jenny had found out about almost everything, he wouldn't have taken the initiative to tell her about all that.

Jenny smiled when she heard that, but her smile was a weak and slightly guilty one. She didn't dare to tell Zachary she was just trying her luck by pretending to have found out about her true identity. In fact, she didn't ask about anything when she went to Bardoff City. On top of that, Mr. Spade had already gone to the hospital before she could get to him.

Meanwhile, in the kitchen downstairs, Alec instructed the chef to cook the dishes that Jenny liked. Mortimer also walked into the kitchen and looked at Alec coldly.

"Why do you insist on being with that woman?"

Alec was slightly stunned when he heard this, and did not turn his head to look at Mortimer. He continued to give the chef instructions.

"She's not a good match for you. I'm telling you this for your own good," Mortimer continued.

walked toward him. He stopped right before Mortimer and a little taken exist at all. What is your reason for opposition?" Alec looked him in the eyes. He stared at Mortimer intently, as if he wanted to your relationship with her because I think you're not suitable for each other. It has but burst out laughing. He couldn't comprehend how you think Alfred is right for her, don't you?" Alec asked with a frosty expression. Evidently, he could see through to benefits and interests. Back then, Jenny could not bring anything to the table in his eyes, so he naturally wouldn't agree reason to object. However, mentioned Alfred, Mortimer was not surprised. He didn't plan to hide it looking into Mortimer's eyes as Chapter 473 Why Do You Like Me?

When the two were in a stalemate, Jenny came down from upstairs. Alec ignored Mortimer right away and walked over to her.

"Are you done talking to Grandpa?" he asked.

Jenny nodded and glanced at Alec meaningfully but didn't say anything. Alec could feel the emotion in her eyes, but if she didn't want to tell him about it, he wouldn't ask—at least, not now.

Not long after, Old Mr. Faust came down too. "Let's eat."

Soon, the four of them sat at the dining table. Perhaps the atmosphere became a little awkward because of Jenny's presence. Old Mr. Faust knew that Jenny wasn't happy about what he'd told her, but he didn't offer her words of advice. He figured she would have to get over it by herself, and there was no point in others persuading her. It would only make her pull away even further.

He then glanced at his grandson and saw that he'd been staring at Jenny. He could only sigh helplessly. Alec was exceptional in every aspect; his only flaw was he loved too deeply when he fell for someone. Old Mr. Faust wondered how much more he would have to suffer at Jenny's hand.

it wasn't his place to worry anymore. They were all adults, so they should in your company. Please offer him your guidance," Mortimer said suddenly, surprising the other three people at the surprised. "Why are you admitting so openly that Alfred is your son? Don't you care about Old Mr. Faust and Alec's feelings?" she wondered usual. He carried her senses, Jenny smiled politely and neutrally. "If Alfred is capable, he'll naturally get to where he deserves to be; if not, even if you pave the way for him as a father, I'm afraid you'll just waste your time in the everything from Old Mr. Faust, Alfred suddenly came to work in her company. The turn of events definitely had something to do with her identity. Everyone approached her with ulterior motives. Under such a he didn't expect Jenny would respond to him so pay any attention to him. She focused on eating her food and didn't give a damn Alec walked out of the Old Mansion with her. On the way back to the apartment, Jenny didn't speak. Her silence made Alec a little your birth and origin, right?" Alec asked, feeling scenery outside and looked at

Chapter 474 Zero Trustworthiness

The brakes sounded, and the car stopped at the side of the road. Jenny was about to ask Alec what was going on when she saw him looking at her intently. His look seemed to suggest that she had hurt his feelings.

"I should be the one feeling hurt," Jenny thought.

'Jenny, am I such a terrible person in your eyes?" Alec asked in a low voice after some time; the tone of his voice was indescribably sad.

The sight of Alec looking so broken tugged at Jenny's heartstrings, but she still smiled and said, "To tell you the truth, Alec; your trustworthiness is basically zero."

Alec smiled bitterly, knowing that this was all his own doing. "I'm sorry..."

"You don't have to apologize to me, even if you really had ulterior motives at the beginning, I don't care. After all, I know you meant it when you showed me you genuinely loved me, and I really did feel happiness during those times."

She looked at Alec with a faint smile as she said that. However, those words cut at Alec's heart like knives, bringing him immense torment.

"Jenny..."

getting late. You should continue the window again. It was as if she didn't want to continue talking. Alec felt helpless, he'd known about it for some elevator one after the other, but no one spoke. Soon, Jenny arrived at her door, and Alec felt that if he didn't say something, he would lose his

he called around and like you, and it has nothing to do with your background. Sometimes I hope you were really an he could like her, and no one could say anything about it. Unfortunately, she wasn't, so it became much more difficult for them him and saw the sincerity in his eyes, but she couldn't believe in him anymore. "Maybe. Actually, I was her grandfather and her two brothers. As for her biological parents, she couldn't care less. Since she had no feelings for them, they naturally knowing that Jenny apprehensive, afraid that Jenny could no longer trust yourself, why would you care whether others believed Chapter 475 Are You Going Back to the Walters?

"I've found out about everything," Jenny said lightly. Through the phone, the tone of her voice didn't seem to carry any emotion.

Gilbert wanted to ask what she knew. Right when he was about to, he suddenly thought of something, and he couldn't help but clench his phone a little harder. "About your background?"

"Yeah." She told Gilbert because she wanted to see if she could get some other information that she didn't know about from him.

This time, it was Gilbert's turn to be silent. As he didn't say anything, it made Jenny a little perplexed. "Gilbert, tell me everything you know."

After another round of silence, Gilbert sighed and replied a little helplessly, "I knew that once you found out you weren't Grandpa's biological granddaughter, you would definitely figure things out. I just didn't expect you to be so fast."

the truth, but he didn't expect it to be my relief—that was the he knew. However, what he knew was similar to what Old Mr. Faust had told her, so it but ask, "Do you plan to go back to far from being as peaceful as it seemed to outsiders, especially the woman Jenny's father married—she definitely had some tricks up her sleeve. If Jenny went need to know whether my mom is still alive." Although Zachary said her mother had probably died, Jenny still held a glimmer asked different teachers to teach her over the years. He must have done it for a reason. Even if she didn't go and she preferred to have everything in her control. Therefore, she decided to settle the matters on her end first, and then she would take the initiative to meet her father, whom her decision. It was even kind of expected. ' Don't worry, I'll come back soon. I'll Jenny didn't refuse him since she would feel bad turning down his offer to accompany her. Given that Gilbert decided to come back, he'd figured everything out. If that were the case, she would welcome

Chapter 476 Flabbergasted

Jenny nodded, guessing that the people sitting in that row should all be excellent alumni. A few of them were even famous figures that Jenny had already known when she was still studying. It was just that she didn't care much back then, as she immersed herself in studying. Her relationship with her classmates was average at best. Now that she had come, there were only a few people whom she really knew.

"Hello, I'm Jenny Walter." She nodded politely, not meaning to continue the conversation with the other person.

However, Derrick obviously didn't intend to stop there. Still seated next to Jenny, he said, "You're so young. You just graduated not long ago, right? You must be excellent to be invited back to the anniversary celebration as an outstanding graduate. So, what scientific research experience do you have? Which hospital are you working at?"

Those seated there either had prolific scientific research experience or worked in top hospitals; in Derrick's case, he was the latter. He was the chief physician of Bardoff Hospital and had always been very proud of it.

they were all published when she was abroad. Not only that, but she was also were very curious about how the university determined who were outstanding graduates. Upon hearing that Jenny was working in Parrington Hospital, many people's expressions changed subtly. There was a hint of condescension in the way they looked at her. Parrington Hospital may be considered a top hospital in Parrington itself, but within the country, it could only be regarded as an ordinary she couldn't care less about them. Turning her attention to the high platform in front of her, she saw that the university's president had already gone up to on stage to speak. That person shared that they worked in the laboratory of a certain didn't care about all that. She couldn't wait to leave after attending the celebration. However, she didn't get her wish. After all that, the dean invited all the outstanding graduates to a private dinner. In this case, Jenny could only follow even restaurant, in a private room, many people chatted freely with the dean. Probably because they'd achieved something over the years, they weren't so afraid anymore when they saw the dean who was once intimidating.

ate her food silently. Being a wallflower

Chapter 477 Different Light

What surprised everyone even more was that after the dean called upon Jenny, he got up and walked to her. He then said with a smile, "You've been the best student at our university for so many years. I've always been proud of you."

Jenny was immensely surprised when by that. She hurriedly got up. "Dean Howard, you flatter me too much. Everyone here is equally excellent."

Others were naturally dissatisfied when they heard the dean's words, but they couldn't lose their temper on such an occasion. They could only comment disparagingly, "Dean Howard, although Parrington Hospital is quite good. It's not exactly difficult to land a job there."

If they wanted to work in Parrington Hospital, they could all get in quite easily. It definitely wasn't as difficult as entering Bardoff Hospital.

yet the dean didn't even bat an eyelash at him. "Don't say that. She probably irony in his words. Jenny, of course, detected the sarcasm in his words and frowned in response.

what they were all thinking. He announced with a light smile, "Although Miss Walter is young, many of you here are her juniors. She graduated with a doctorate at 22 and is age of 22 was impressive; however, that didn't make everyone change their opinion of her. After all, this could only prove that Jenny was very good at studying and was a top student; it didn't say anything about her

Recently, there seems to be a new breakthrough in his laboratory, and he'll be invited dean's words. "Thank you for your kind of an excellent graduate like you. I believe your future achievements will definitely not pale in comparison to your teacher's." The dean was just being polite when he said that. If one knew who Jenny's teacher was, one would know surpassing that person was close believed that Dean Howard wasn't a fool. If Jenny was just an ordinary doctor at Parrington Hospital, even if she was the deputy found out who

Chapter 478 Good Relationship

After dinner was over, Jenny walked out of the restaurant and took a deep breath. She felt much more relaxed after taking in some fresh air. She was still uncomfortable with social settings like these. Burying her head in surgery or scientific research was more suitable for her.

As she was thinking about that, Derrick walked to her side without her noticing. He seemed to have something to say to her but found it difficult to find the words. "Miss Walter."

Jenny graduated earlier than him, so she was his senior. He felt awkward about that fact.

On the other hand, Jenny wasn't bothered about things like that. She turned to look at him. "What do you need?"

"Nothing, really." Derrick smiled awkwardly, not daring to look into Jenny's eyes. "I haven't come to Parrington for several years, and I feel that this place has changed a lot. I'm no longer familiar with this city."

Jenny thought to herself, "So?" you have time tomorrow? Can you show me around Parrington?" In the end, he endured his embarrassment introduced by his family were not worthy although he wasn't as good as Jenny, he was still not too shabby. After all, he worked in Bardoff Hospital, which was definitely better than Jenny working in Parrington Hospital. At that moment, he didn't done in the hospital. I don't think I have the time to accompany you. But you can ask the other alumni. They should also be here in Parrington; you can join his invitation, so Derrick left it at that. "Okay, that is understandable. I'll contact you again in a few more days."

Obviously, he'd been waiting there for a long time. Jenny didn't you." Derrick quickly nodded and watched Jenny walk

Derrick felt a certain emotion in his heart he couldn't quite put his finger on.

finally met someone who was on par with him and deserved his companionship. Alas, she already had a boyfriend, or perhaps

He was obviously not in a good mood. Jenny intending to explain anything. She wanted to see

Chapter 479 I Just Want Your Life

Jenny chuckled and didn't take it seriously. "Who knows? I'm not interested in him anyway."

She wasn't joking; she really wasn't interested in Derrick. Hence, she didn't care about what he was up to. It had nothing to do with her as far as she was concerned.

Upon hearing Jenny's words, Alec inexplicably breathed a sigh of relief once more. It was good that she wasn't interested in him. He was dreading that Jenny might somehow be interested.

Alec drove at a consistent speed. Soon, they arrived at the entrance of Perry Residence. After Jenny got out of the car in the underground parking lot, she noticed that Alec was still inside and hadn't gotten out yet. She asked, "Do you have something else to do?"

"Yeah. There's still some work at the company," Alec replied.

"Since you had something to do, you didn't have to come and pick me up. It was troublesome for you to make that extra trip." Jenny felt a little guilty. She thought Alec had come to pick her up after finishing his work.

he said to her, "It's no trouble at all. The time spent with you is the most relaxing time in my day. I wish I could be

Alec meant every and glared at him. exasperatedly. "Who wants to be with you every day? Just because you have the she remembered correctly, she hadn't forgiven this his feelings, that was enough. "Go back quickly. I'll leave and then turned to enter the elevator, pressing the button for her floor. While waiting for the elevator, Jenny kept thinking forward to it. But if she said she liked him, she couldn't get over the fact that he had deceived her before. She sighed, unable to figure it out. Therefore, she decided to just let it

Someone stood beside her, seemingly also waiting was just a neighbor from the same residential building. However, as soon as again."

same. Although the woman didn't kill her when they last kill her now, Jenny might not be able to put up

Chapter 480 One Last Question

The woman pouted and said helplessly, "I don't want to do things for others. I feel uncomfortable at being ordered around. But there is no other way since I owe it to them. Fortunately, after killing you, all of my debts with that person will be written off."

A debt of gratitude was the most difficult to repay, and she could finally pay it off after many years. Owing to that, she wouldn't let Jenny off this time.

Jenny was speechless. "Well, good for you. You can pay back your debt. But you're paying for it with my life!" Jenny cursed internally.

The woman wasn't interested in chatting with Jenny anymore. She sighed, "Don't waste my time. Let's just go somewhere deserted and fight. You can go if you win, but if you lose...your life is mine.

"Fine." Jenny didn't refuse. She didn't want to fight the woman in the lobby of Perry Residence anyway.

The two left the area and headed to the river behind it. Fewer people were there at night, so they wouldn't be discovered if they fought there.

even if it wasn't likely the woman would tell her. Jenny thought she could try her luck because the woman didn't seem like someone who played by the rules.

woman answered right away without thinking.

she couldn't believe it. "The Walters? Did not understanding why a while, Jenny returned to her senses. She gritted her teeth and asked, "So, the last time you came after me was also because of basically dead to her, so it didn't matter if she told her that information. She was going to say nothing about it if Jenny didn't ask. However, since she did, then she didn't mind telling time?" That was something that woman was silent for a moment and seemed hesitant to answer that question.

Jenny deliberately provoked her by saying, "You've already told me who's after me anyway. Is there anything else that you can't tell me? Could it be that you're

The woman questioned in disdain. "That person just asked me to take some of your blood. Why? I that. She just wanted to pay off the debt as soon as possible.

wondered in bewilderment. She was stunned for a moment, and then she made a guess.

she was his daughter? Otherwise, he wouldn't have arranged for so many people to nurture her

"That person..."