Chapter 511 Relocating Headquarters

Jenny was actually very busy. She had decided to place the company headquarters in Bardoff City. That way, she would be able to develop her company better. Hence, yesterday, she asked Jade and Alfred to come to Bardoff City.

They were important people in the company. Jenny would have to discuss it with them beforehand.

As for why she called on Alfred despite knowing of his twisted intentions, it was because she didn't have much manpower. Alfred's resume was brilliant. Besides, he hadn't done anything overboard. Jenny decided to ignore it for now and keep him at arm's length.

Jenny picked them up from the airport.

"Miss Walter."

Jade nodded when she heard Jenny's words. She thought that they made sense. "That's true. The Walters are part of the Ten Elites. Those people would be afraid of them. They probably wouldn't go against you."

"It's settled then." Jenny had made her decision. "The only thing you guys have to do in Bardoff City for these few days is to look for an office complex for Jeneration Group."

She could do it herself, but she had to take care of things in the Walter family. She simply didn't have the time.

"No problem." Jade nodded.

Jenny took two agreements out of her bag and placed them on the table. "These are the two companies that are now under my name. Take them and place them under Jeneration Group."

Jade and Alfred each took one of the documents. They were surprised. "You're certainly ambitious. You want to be part of even these industries."

He couldn't let it go. All these years, he tried to surpass Alec to prove he was nothing less than him. However, he hadn't succeeded. He was just an illegitimate child. At least Jenny was publicly recognized. Alfred could only hide in the shadows, something the Faustus had to hide.

"Alec isn't your enemy, Alfred. He didn't cause what you went through." Jenny spoke slowly in a calm manner. "If I were you, I'd figure out how to make myself stronger and stop wanting to return to the Faust family. It doesn't mean that you have to be associated with the Faustus your whole life. just because of your name. With your talents, you could build your own empire."

Jenny felt that if Alfred put his efforts on the right path, he'd be able to forge a future for himself.

Alfred said nothing. She continued, "What your parents did has nothing to do with you. You can choose to steer your own life."

Confidence? Alfred had it.

He was always very confident in his abilities. He was just unsure of whether he wanted to work for Jenny.

"As long as you don't do anything to harm the company, I will not interfere in any of your decisions. This is my sincerity. As for whether you're willing to accept it, you can think about it slowly." Jenny didn't want to keep talking about it.

It'd be futile for her to waste her breath if Alfred still insisted on rivaling Alec. She'd be better off telling him to fuck off.

Jenny retracted her hand quickly and looked at him like he had a tail. "I think nothing of it." "I'm serious. We're both single. And although my family doesn't compare to the Walters, I believe I'm quite worthy of you, ability-wise." Alfred didn't give up. He was honestly a little intrigued

Chapter 515 You're so Shameless

Jenny left the hotel after finishing her talk with Alfred. She needn't worry about what would come next. What she had to worry about now was how to tackle the party tonight.

Although the party hadn't yet started, Jenny could guess that it would be a battlefield. Rowena and Jolene would never let her go. They'd be causing trouble for her.

But Jenny need not worry. She'd put out the fires one by one. She wasn't really concerned about that duo.

But what she couldn't do tonight was give them their satisfaction. This was her first time showing herself before Bardoff City's elites. She couldn't disappoint anyone.

Her phone rang. It was a stranger's number. She hesitated for a while before picking up. "Who is it?"

"It's me, Jolene." Jolene's voice sounded through the speaker, oozing honey. Someone else might think it was cute, but Jenny thought it was gross.

She wanted to burst into anger, but the moment had passed. If she exploded now, she would seem stupid. She had no choice but to gnash her teeth and glare at Jenny in hatred.

Indeed, Jenny did not think she was very smart at all. She didn't care even if Jolene glared at her. She scrolled on her phone, ignoring her.

Soon after, the car arrived at the styling salon. It seemed famous in Bardoff City. When Jenny arrived, a lot of people were already there.

But Jolene was an exclusive VIP in the salon; she had special privileges. They had a private dressing room all to themselves. Shockingly, there were other people in it.

"Why are you only arriving just now, Jolene? We've been waiting for you.' Someone walked up to Jolene and wrapped their arm around hers affectionately. They were all Jolene's friends. They had come here to stand up for her.

Jolene glared at Jenny, then said innocently, "Oh, you guys know that my sister just arrived in Bardoff City. She's not too familiar with the roads here. My father made me bring her."

Jenny turned and looked over at Jolene. Coldly, she said, "Need I report everything to you?"

"You!" Jolene was angered once more. Jenny was her arch-nemesis!

"The stylists here are all professional, Jolene's sister. You must believe in their tastes. You can do it yourself if you don't trust them," someone said huffily, pointing at the equipment next to them.

Jenny let go of the stylist's hand and sneered. 'Alright. I'll do it myself."

It was just hair. It was easy for her. She'd rather do it herself than rely on these tasteless people.

Jenny walked over to her dressing table, then turned and looked at the person who had spoken. "By the way, please call me by my name in the future. Or, call me Miss Jenny Walter."

Jolene's friends stared at Jenny in dissatisfaction. "Jolene, your sister is too much. She doesn't like a single dress from those racks. She has high standards."

"That's understandable. She's never seen the finer things in life. Now that she has, she just can't get enough." Jolene smirked. "This is how poor people act when they suddenly become rich."

"That's exactly it. She's gone from rags to riches." They jeered, looking at Jenny at the entrance. They all looked disdainful.

Jenny ignored them. Not long after, Alec's car stopped in front of her. He came down with a box in his hands. Before she could ask about its contents, he handed it to her. "Try it on."

Jenny opened the box. There was a light blue gown in it. It was so beautiful that her gaze lingered on it. After a while, she came back to her senses." Did you come all this way to deliver this gown to me?"

"It's your first time meeting all these people in Bardoff City. I can't let them look down on you."

Although he didn't want anyone else to see how beautiful she was, he knew clearly what was good for her. Love could not be selfish. That was what he learned.

"How do I look?" Jenny walked toward Alec, asking for his opinion.

Alec came back to his senses and smiled, nodding. "Beautiful. You look good in everything."

Jenny was blushing slightly. She felt a little embarrassed by his compliment.

"Who is this, sister?" Jolene cut them off. She couldn't stand it. Someone as handsome as him should not be wasting his time on her.

Didn't he care that Jenny was divorced?

Jenny had almost forgotten about them. "Are you interested in him?"

She smiled dryly. "You said it. I'm just worried about you. Your identity is no longer like before. You can't mingle

Chapter 520 Make It Up to You

Jolene was incredulous that someone would dare to talk to her like that. She stared at Alec and Jenny, realizing that neither of them respected her as the daughter of the Walter family. It made her feel like a joke.

"Okay, fine! I'll remember you.' Jolene seethed, trying to restrain herself.

She didn't know Alec's identity, so she didn't dare lay a finger on him. Nonetheless, she wouldn't let him off the hook so easily. If he was just an ordinary person, Jolene had already thought of a hundred ways to end him. She left the store with a cold snort, and her friends followed suit. Since Jolene didn't dare confront Jenny, neither did they.

Once they were gone, Jenny and Alec were left alone, and the place became quiet instantly. Jenny stared at the box. She didn't seem as happy as she had appeared in front of Jolene.

"What does he mean? Does he really value me that much?" Jenny asked.

Jenny didn't think she was special in any way. She was no different from Jolene as she was also a daughter. Since Jolene grew up by Graham's side, he had all the reasons to like Jolene more.
