Chapter 632 I've Got My Eyes on You

Alec was confused. "Why would he suddenly make such a decision?" "I don't know," Blake replied. "Maybe it's because he feels guilty about what your grandfather did for him. Perhaps he's trying to make up for it now?"

She didn't know the real reason.

Perhaps giving Alec the opportunity to compete among the Faust family was a form of compensation, especially since the opportunity was rare. However, Alec didn't think the head of the Faustus in Bardoff City was so kind.

It was likely that he was using him to sharpen the skills of the eldest sons and grandsons of the Faustus. They weren't qualified to inherit the Faust family if they couldn't handle the challenge. However, if they came out on top, it would show they were capable and worthy. Naturally, the current head of the family would trust them to take over the reins. As for an outsider like Alec, could the Faustus entrust themselves to him?

Alec's eyes, however, shone brightly. It was still an excellent opportunity. If he didn't cherish it, it would be a waste. He had to seize this chance to establish his position within the Faustus!

Alec contacted his friends and family in Parrington, including Old Mr.

Faust, Vincent, and even Paul, but not Jenny. It wasn't until the next day that Jenny learned from Vincent that Alec was still alive. She couldn't believe it, feeling both happy and finding it surreal.

Jenny and the Windsors had just implemented their plan to take down the Glasses. Before she even had a chance to investigate the Glasses, she was told that Alec was fine. She wondered if it was a work of the Glasses or if Alec had escaped from them on his own.

Jenny had many questions to ask, but above all that, she was eager to see Alec. After the call with Vincent, she was about to call Alec when it finally hit her. Vincent had told her that Alec had contacted them a few days ago, so why hadn't he contacted her?

Feeling a little suspicious, she eventually dialed Alec's number. She had to confirm whether he was really safe. The phone rang for a long time before he answered.

Even though Alec had lost his memory, he had seen pictures of Jenny, so he recognized her the moment she appeared. He had the impulse to rush over and hug her, but he resisted. On the one hand, it was because they were in Faust Manor, and on the other hand, he chalked his desire to embrace as his unresolved psychological issue.

"What are you doing here?" he asked coldly.

He had no intention of telling anyone about his amnesia as he thought it was unnecessary since he could learn everything about himself from the information he had been given. If others knew about his amnesia, they might do something to him.

Jenny didn't understand why he was being so cold. He had only been missing for a few days, so why did it seem like he had changed completely? She had already decided to reconcile with him, but he behaved as if he didn't like her one bit, as if his previous affection had been forced.

Zeke nodded. Without warning, his tone turned sharp as he said, "Since you've divorced, it means you're not meant to be together. It's better to keep your distance from each other in the future."

"Mr. Faust, this is a matter between Alec and me. You're interfering too much." She was already angry with Alec. Hence, hearing Zeke say that only made her more furious.

"Alec is a good kid. He is a capable person who knows his limits. I have high hopes for him, and I don't want him to be disturbed."

Zeke was not upset by Jenny's angry rebuttal. If a few words from a young person could anger a person of his age, he would have learned nothing during all the time he had lived.

While Jenny didn't understand the relationship between Alec and the Faustus, she understood what Zeke meant. He was telling her that she was not worthy of Alec.

It made sense to her as the Faustus were at the top of the Ten Elites in Bardoff City while the Walters lagged. Hence, it was expected that he would look down on her family.

After a moment of silence, Zeke smiled and said, "This can only mean that either he was putting on an act in the past or the act is happening now."

The butler thought for a while before expressing his opinion. "I think he was pretending before. Perhaps he never really liked Jenny and was only clinging to her because he knew she was the daughter of the Walters. Now that he is part of the Fausts, he must feel that he is out of her league, so there's no need to pretend anymore."

There were many people like that who only cared about their own interests and benefits. It didn't matter to them whether they liked what they were doing or the people they were associated with.

His butler's suggestion made sense to Zeke.

"Keep an eye on him," Zeke instructed. "Whether he is pretending or not, it will become clear over time."

"But sir, why do you insist on bringing back those Fausts who are outsiders? Are you really planning to hand over the Faust family to them?" The butler was confused. He had been with Zeke for many years and thought he understood him well. However, he could not understand the decision he had made.

Chapter 637 What Do You Want?

"What do you want?" Jenny asked. She didn't have time to participate in the act he was putting on.

The Fausts seemed really complicated. She had just met with Alec, and Zeke had pulled her aside for a talk. Now an innocent-looking young man appeared out of nowhere, but who knew what he was up to?

Julian Faust was embarrassed by her bluntness. When he stayed silent, Jenny was about to enter the car and leave. However, Julian didn't intend to give up just yet. He stopped Jenny again and said, "I really just want to hitch a ride with you. I'm not up to anything else."

"Does the Fausts not have a driver? Even if there is no driver, you expect me to believe you can't afford to buy a car?" Jenny sneered, finding his lack of intelligence amusing.

The way she ruthlessly tore into him made Julian more embarrassed. "Just because we have a car doesn't mean we can't hitch a ride. I think you're very charming. What's wrong with trying to hitch a ride with you?"

Jenny just looked at him silently. Julian couldn't even defend his actions.

At the dining table, Jenny was not in a good mood because of what had transpired with Alec. Meanwhile, Jolene was in a good mood. Seating between James and Brandon, she alternated between enquiring about James's well-being and putting food on Brandon's plate.

Glancing at her, Jenny wondered how stupid Jolene was exactly. Did she think both of them would be interested in her?

Jolene's actions wouldn't make James like her. In fact, they would make Brandon uncomfortable. It was a lose-lose situation. However, Jenny didn't voice her opinion. After all, Jolene and Brandon's relationship would be elevated to the next level that day.

During dinner, Brandon professed his love for Jolene before Graham and Rowena and expressed wanting to marry her. Jolene wasn't very happy, and an unpleasant expression formed on her face.

She glared at Brandon, wondering why he had to do that when James was watching. If James misunderstood, wouldn't she lose her chance with him?

James was worried about Jenny, but since she remained quiet, it was difficult for him to ask more.

"Jenny, are you really not going to consider me? I'm not saying I'm great, but I'm not too bad either," James asked again, thinking he should give it another try.

Jenny had a headache upon hearing that. She thought that after rejecting James, he wouldn't try again.

"James, I'm not open to romance now," Jenny said; she didn't want their relationship to be anything different from what it currently was. If she were to get together with James and break up later, they would eventually become strangers.

James didn't get angry when she rejected him again, as he had expected that outcome.

Jenny had called him previously, instructing him to act like he didn't believe Jolene regardless of what she said. Jenny did not tell him the reason. All she said was that if he did it, he would be able to marry Jolene. Now that Jolene was in his arms, Brandon began to admire Jenny although their marriage had not been confirmed yet.

Jolene and Brandon didn't notice Jenny and Graham standing nearby, watching them embrace each other.

Jenny grinned. As she had expected, Jolene would never let go of a valuable asset like Brandon. Therefore, when Brandon seemed to distrust her, Jolene had to do something. Although it was just a hug, it was enough to make Graham believe that Jolene liked Brandon.

"I told you earlier that Jolene was interested in Brandon, but you didn't believe me," Jenny told Graham.
