

Be Yours 911

Chapter 911 Are You Still in Contact with Her?

Sensing her rage, Alec burst out in laughter and handed Jenny a glass of cocktail. "Try this."

She accepted it and took a sip. Then, she complimented his skills, "It's nice. But the alcohol isn't too strong. It tastes like juice instead."

"Yeah, it's not good to overdrink." He deliberately added only a little alcohol into her cocktail so as to not affect her sleep.

Jenny looked amused but said nothing as she slowly sipped on the drink.

Alec made himself a cocktail and asked, "Has Walter Inc told you about the charity fund?" His staff had visited Walter Inc on the matter, but he was unsure if Jenny was briefed on the progress.

me about it."

She's able to undergo surgery without worries, right?" he asked, but his only goal was surgery, and I'll be her surgeon," she look, which showed that she was confident. He said, "Well, the surgery will go well if you're on the case. You handled Faye Lawrence's tough case excellently, so

Faye, are you still in contact before regretting bringing up Faye-he was digging his his mind and chuckled. "Don't worry. I don't mean to interrogate was a success, there was a chance of relapse. Therefore, she casually asked him about Faye's studying abroad. She finds the environment more suitable for her." Even though he was totally disappointed with Faye after all her wrongdoings, he had

Chapter 912 Get Rid of Them All

"Did you just wake up?" Alec asked with a smile, breakfast in hand. Jenny nodded and moved to the side to make room for him. He entered her living room and placed the breakfast on the dining table. "Do you want to wash up first?"

"Alright." She returned to her senses and rushed toward the bathroom.

Alec watched on with a huge grin. He could tell that Jenny had a girly side despite putting up a cold and independent front. However, she'd only show her true side in front of people she trusted.

He believed that his hard work had resulted in progress because Jenny never behaved in that way in front of him before. This proved that she trusted him to some extent. It was good news, but he still had work to do to win her heart.

her pajamas, she joined him in the living room, the blush not his habit at all. Jenny woke up at an average time in the morning, the table. "You don't have to go to the habit of doing a morning round at the hospital, especially checking in on the was working too hard. "Do you plan it nice?" She liked her stable job. Her hours could be quite long and hectic, but it was who didn't know might think you're just another doctor." He smiled gently at her. She stuck to a routine and did not practice excessive spending. One wouldn't know accomplishment from doing so." It would be wrong to say that she wanted nothing out of her job—perhaps, she was after from the others." He beamed at

Chapter 913 I'll Deal with Him on My Own

"Grandpa, did the Watkins really kill Dad?" Luke was doubtful about the theory. Even though the Faustus didn't interact much with the Watkins, the two families had no major conflict with each other either. Logically, the Watkins wouldn't have committed the heinous act.

However, he poured over the information that Alec provided him with and ran his investigation. It was confirmed that the Watkins had been in contact with the two assassins, who likely died at the Watkins' hands as well. Despite the solid evidence, he still felt that something was off.

Zeke lifted his gaze but didn't answer. Instead, he asked, "What do you think?"

"All evidence pointed to the Watkins, but I still think it's strange." However, Luke couldn't quite pinpoint the reason for his doubt.

Zeke chuckled softly and looked away as he said coldly, "Of course, it's strange because the Watkins family isn't behind the murder."

do it? But the two assassins. But who could be sure that they murder, why did they get into contact with the assassins? They even asked the assassins to of the situation and frame Alec.' Zeke, experienced with the workings of the real world, harbored a was surprised, followed by confusion. "If the Watkins weren't the mastermind, that would leave Alec as the main suspect. Had the Watkins not Zeke scoffed at how the Watkins failed to think logically and wondered how was planning to get rid of Alec. In their eyes, they suspected that Yakov was behind Xavier's death. After all, the two brothers were the main competitors in the race to be the family heir. Everyone understood that it was impossible for Zeke to hand the Faustus to Alec unless he was out of his mind. Still, the Watkins, worried that Zeke wouldn't investigate further into Xavier's death, decided to do we do now? We can't just let it slip, right?' Luke trembled in anger when he was reminded of the fact that Alec had killed his father. As a Faust, he never encountered once considered sparing Alec as long as he behaved,

Chapter 914 Don't Overwork Yourself

Jenny was done with the morning rounds. She chatted with the patients scheduled for surgery the following Monday to make sure they were okay before she left the hospital.

Two hours before noon, she stood at the hospital entrance, looking lost. She didn't know where else to go after that. A gust of cold breeze lifted the hem of her skirt. She shivered, and her mind was instantly clearer.

She recalled that Alfred told her about Jade's struggles, and she decided to check in with Jade in case her friend needed help. However, she didn't find Jade in the office, and according to the assistant, she had gone to a client meeting.

Jenny shook her head in defeat. As the boss, she didn't work as hard as Jade and felt a little guilty. Was she too laid back for a company CEO?

Group. The CEO's office was also located in the best spot on the top floor. The floor only had two offices-hers and the general all the say in Jeneration Group. Jenny handed over the management work to him with full trust. She understood that Alfred was newly installed digital lock on the door. She didn't know the

That was awkward.

She realized that the serious look on Alfred's face when he was at work bore some up when he sensed the silence. He was taken about the passcode of my office." She chuckled wryly, feeling a little embarrassed. He purposely laughed at her." Oh, CEO full trust in you." She coughed, feeling a little guilty for not being to say against her remark because she was right. He'd have quit the company if Jenny had come to the office and

Chapter 915 I'll Get Someone to Look Into It

By noon, Jade was not back yet, and that got Jenny worried. Which client was she meeting, and why did she spend the entire morning there?

Feeling anxious, she went to Jade's assistant to ask about the client. Unfortunately, the assistant had no clue, which only fueled her worries. She called Jade without even thinking if she might interrupt the meeting. To her dismay, Jade didn't pick up.

Jenny had a bad feeling that something had happened to Jade, for she always took her call. She wasn't too concerned at first, but the unanswered call worried her. She rushed to Alfred's office and instructed him to look into Jade's client. At the same time, she ordered Melissa to pin down Jade's whereabouts. As long as Jade was within Bardoff City, they should be able to trace her down fairly soon. Even after making the arrangements, she felt perturbed.

Alfred made some calls to get someone to look into Jade's whereabouts. He saw how worried Jenny was and reassured her, "Don't worry. Jade has always been dependable. She wouldn't get herself into trouble. Maybe she didn't pick up because her phone was in silent mode for the meeting."

That was a possibility, but Jenny trusted her instinct more than his words. Even so, there was no use debating about Jade's safety. All they could do was wait for the information they requested.

the client and the location of the meeting. Without further ado, she immediately wasn't too worried about Jade; in fact,

Jenny was fine with that, they left the office and drove to the cafe where Jade was meeting with the client. Once Alfred parked the and even provided them with the number of the private lounge room Jade was in. It didn't take long before door, but there was no response from within. Feeling impatient, she opened the door, only to want to call her now?" Alfred suggested. She followed the advice and called Jade, praying fervently that Jade was safe and that it was Jenny instinctively knew that her hunch was correct. Something had happened he entered the lounge and found Jade's phone lying in a corner, his expression turned serious. "I'll to look for the receptionist. "Where are

Chapter 916 Think Very Carefully

"What do you think you're doing?! Let me go!' The receptionist screeched, pinned under Alfred's hold.

Irritated by her voice, Jenny was about to shoot Alfred a look to make him shut the woman up when he instantly shoved a tablecloth into her mouth. Silence settled in the space.

Jenny soon found the footage clip depicting Jade and the client she had come to discuss the business deal with. To her surprise, there was more than one client, the other turning out to be Jade's ex-husband, Hayden Lowe.

Jenny had heard much from Jade about this man, so she could recognize him from the footage. She never imagined he'd have the guts to see Jade.

As the panic in her heart picked up, Jenny continued fast-forwarding the video.

The client soon left the private room, leaving only Jade and Hayden within, which was strange as there wouldn't be much to discuss between the two.

What happened next pretty much hit the core of Jenny's anxiety.

out from the room, who looked very much like she was drunk. Yet Jenny knew Jade would ever reappear again on the first floor. There were no cameras upstairs, so Jenny didn't know which room Jade had to say. You know that man is committing a felony. Are you sure you want to be convicted as an accomplice?' Jenny warned, because the man was a regular. She'd even quelled her suspicions when she saw the heck, she wasn't about to become a criminal just to not upset upstairs to the room, kicking the door were already up, ready to attack at a moment's notice, though curled up in a man's chest, sobbing quietly. She looked over the

"Where are they?"

"I don't kn-'

the

she saw it was Max that Jade was holding

Chapter 917 Is That All I Get?

Jade hurriedly shook her head. 'This has nothing to do with Jenny. It's my fault, really. I should've been more careful.'

She only fell for Hayden's trap because she was desperate to prove to herself that she had surpassed him.

Max said nothing else. He didn't really blame Jenny; he was still upset, was all.

After checking to make sure Jade was really alright, Jenny suddenly felt like the third wheel in the room. Max's prickly expression and persistent weird looks at her affirmed her guess that he had planned to further" console" Jade.

Jenny chuckled dryly and said, "Get some rest then, Jade. You deserve it. I'll mark you down for leave for next week, so you don't need to come to work. I'll handle things with the police too. Don't you worry."

"But I'm fine-" Before Jade could argue, Jenny was already leaving the room with Alfred, shutting the door behind them.

just her and in need of safety, but now that she'd recovered some,

cleared her throat awkwardly.

"What for?"

don't know what would've happened gave her an exhausted look. "Why didn't you leave the moment you dragged all the way here. Her lack of self-preservation was really concerning to had clearly wanted her to deal with Hayden. If she'd left, the deal Hayden to do something as lowly as to roofie here. If it weren't for Max coming thankful you saved me in he was still protecting her however he could. Jade couldn't
I get?' Max

Chapter 918 Here's Some Advice

Jenny snorted aloud, finding the receptionist ridiculous. She wasn't this concerned about the police when helping Hayden attempt to rape Jade earlier. Did she never imagine herself getting caught one day?

"Don't worry. You just need to make a statement, that's all." Jenny replied.

To Jenny, people like this receptionist, who knew exactly what Hayden had planned to do yet did nothing to stop him, were no more than accessories to the crime.

What was most important was making sure Hayden was punished, though. As long as the woman made her statement honestly, there was nowhere Hayden could run to.

The receptionist heaved a sigh of relief upon hearing she only needed to make a statement. She still asked hesitantly, 'Are you sure that's it?'

"Of course. You didn't actually commit a crime, did you?' Jenny sneered.

"N-no, of course not" The receptionist hurriedly shook her head.

the hotel with Alfred behind her. The man wasn't in a hurry to leave. He ended up driving both Jenny and the station, loud, annoying screeches grated on her ears. 'No! No way in hell! My husband would never do that! He must've been set up by Jade Weston. He must have! That bitch has had nearly perfect, Jenny thought. If only Hayden was the victim here, then the woman's of laughter as the victim on his behalf is going to help his case right now?"

met the woman, figuring out who she was didn't take much.

glanced at Jenny, looking upset. "Who are you to butt her, turning to the cop she'd been speaking to. "This is the receptionist from the site of the briefly wanted to run away, but still brought away to make her statement. No way in hell would Hayden escape the law now, Jenny was even a witness to the

was then colored with Hayden still had feelings for you're Hayden Lowe's wife?" Jenny

Chapter 919 Did Jenny Send You?

"Really?" Maria asked, still cautious about Jenny's intentions.

"I don't stand to gain from lying to you. You can choose not to believe me, but it's your loss." Jenny shrugged. Her plan was to liquidate Hayden's company, ensuring he never had a chance to rise again once he fulfilled his sentence. Not having Maria sell her those shares would only be a small bump in her journey to destroy the company-she could just employ other ways."

"L.I'll do it!" No way would Maria go down with Hayden Lowe!

Jenny snorted, then gave Maria her number before leaving the station. She needn't concern herself with what Maria chose to do next.

After leaving and seeing that Alfred was still outside waiting for her, Jenny nodded gently, "Thank you for waiting on me."

Jade is my colleague, after had Alfred drive her back, then he returned to lying in her ward. Brandon had entirely abandoned her, while things only seemed to be improving for Jenny and not for her.

not fit to be your wife, this I know, but I truly do love you. I did some thinking these past few days, and I'd still want to be by your side even though move Brandon went to waste when it slowly walked up to Yvonne, startling her. She tried to hide but could answer, Yvonne seemed to remember him. "Did Jenny send you?

likes of you. I'm here on my own behalf."

wasn't here for any good reason.

though exactly

don't know one another, nor do I have a reason

Chapter 920 Complications

"No innocent should be punished, and no one deserving should escape it,* Ethan said coldly, eyes boring into Yvonne's.

She was truly afraid now. A fearful thought in the back of her mind warned her that the man might actually put her in mortal danger if she didn't tread carefully.

Tears began falling from her eyes. "Please forgive me. I was wrong for saying what I said. I swear I didn't mean it."

"Really?*

"Yes, yes, I swear! I didn't mean to put her in danger. Why would I even want to do that? I don't have anything against her!" Yvonne tried her best to sound convincing.

Sadly, Evan wasn't in the mood to be kind. Plus, Yvonne wasn't even being honest right now, so there really was no need. "Oh? What did I hear about you two feuding in Parrington, then? Are you really sure you didn't purposely put her in danger?"

instantly understood the extent of Evan's knowledge now. If he really was there to avenge Jenny voice grew cold and to the point. *What you." Evan clicked his tongue. Several bodyguards instantly flooded the room, one with a blade in quivering again as the guards went up to forced her jaw open, making her stay still on the hospital her,* Evan ordered before leaving the ward. He wasn't in the mood for blood and gore at the moment.

At the door, he tossed out," Leave her in the countryside once you're done.

like from the hospital ward. Evan hummed a tune to himself, thinking there'd be one less chattering he called Jenny. "Hey, Jen.

make sure Jenny wasn't