Chapter 971 What Else Was He Expecting?

Considering the occasion that day, Jenny didn't want to argue with her. "Alright then, I didn't mean anything else. I just wanted to greet him. If you mind my presence. I'll leave now. Just tell him I send my regards."

Alexandra wanted to say that she minded it very much, but she plastered a courteous smile on her face. "Okay, I'll tell Christopher. Goodbye, Miss Walter."

Jenny turned around and left. Although she didn't like Alexandra's behavior, she didn't want to cause any unnecessary misunderstandings since Alexandra was Christopher's girlfriend.

Watching Jenny leave, Alexandra breathed a sigh of relief. She didn't want Jenny to meet Christopher because she feared something might happen between them. Although Jenny was now the daughter of the renowned Walter family and wasn't likely to consider Christopher a potential life partner, it was difficult to say that she wouldn't.

Alexandra liked Christopher very much and didn't want to take any risks. Thinking of that, she turned around and walked toward Christopher, who was still mourning his grandfather not far away.

"You should have some food first, Christopher. Your health is important too," Alexandra advised with concern as she stood beside him.

Christopher hadn't been eating much these days, and he had visibly lost weight. She was worried for him.

Jenny was even more speechless at his reply and rubbed her forehead exasperatedly. "I don't want to be like a child."

Why would she act like a child when she was an adult? Although children were carefree and didn't have much to worry about, what was the point of avoiding reality like that? She couldn't really become a child again.

If Alec treated her like a child and she had to become an adult again when he left her, wouldn't it be tiring to constantly switch how she would carry herself?

"My point is, you can try to rely on me." Alec felt helpless. He didn't know how to express himself to Jenny. It was difficult to make her depend on him even for a bit.

Jenny didn't reply to what Alec said. "He isn't really anyone significant to me. Why would I rely on him?" she wondered.

In the restaurant, Alexandra silently ate her food. Christopher hadn't said a word since they entered the restaurant, and the silence magnified Alexandra's anxiety.

Chapter 973 What Am I Lacking?

"What am I lacking compared to her?" Alexandra asked, feeling very much aggrieved.

Although Jenny was more beautiful than her and came from a much better family, Alexandra believed that Christopher wasn't someone who valued those things.

Christopher felt helpless at how persistent she was. "You shouldn't compare yourself to her. You're different from each other. Our breakup has nothing to do with her. I won't end up with her either."

"You won't end up with her, or you know you won't stand a chance with her?" Alexandra sneered.

Compared to Jenny's suitors, Christopher was from a family that was substandard at best, so how could he be qualified? Alexandra was well aware of that, not to mention Christopher himself.

"Going around in circles on this matter is pointless," Christopher declared. At this point, he'd already put down his cutlery and leaned back in his chair, expressionless.

He'd only put up with Alexandra for so long because he knew he was in the wrong. During the time they were together, Alexandra treated him well, and he could feel her sincerity. That was why he was so patient with her.

Chapter 974 Listen to Me This Once

Early in the morning, Jenny was awakened by the laughter of children in the neighborhood. She opened her eyes groggily, picked up her phone from the bedside, and saw that it was not yet 7 am. The children should be asleep now, so why were they making noise downstairs?

Before she could fully wake up, the doorbell rang. Jenny struggled to get out of bed. The moment she opened the door, she saw Alec standing outside. She felt a little irritated at being awakened from her sleep prematurely. "Mr. Faust, why are you at my door so early?"

She was puzzled. Alec never came to look for her so early in the morning. "Did something bad happen?" Jenny started making guesses blindly.

"Get dressed and come downstairs." Observing Jenny's expression, Alec guessed that she'd just woken up and probably didn't know what was happening outside.

"I don't want to go. I want to sleep a little longer." Jenny turned to go back to her room, but Alec grabbed her wrist.

"Listen to me this once, Jenny." Alec's expression was serious, and he wasn't joking. This made Jenny feel perturbed and worried. Had something really gone wrong?

Thinking of this, she grabbed her coat from the door and put it on, ready to go downstairs with him.

Alec took his phone back from the lady, thanked her, and hurriedly looked at the photos on his phone. The corners of his mouth lifted up involuntarily. The more he looked at the photos, the more satisfied he was with the result.

Jenny came over at some point and couldn't help but comment disapprovingly, "This photo makes me look so fat."

"Not at all. I think you look just right." Alec put away his phone. He made sure to save the photos well. He would ask Vincent to print them out and frame them later.

Jenny glared at him, feeling a bit grumpy. "You should have told me beforehand so I could wear a nice outfit and take some nice photos. Now..."

She lowered her head and looked at herself. She was all bundled up in her down jacket and looked like a bear, so she decided to give up on that idea.

"You look beautiful in my eyes no matter what." Alec's words were as sweet as honey, leaving Jenny momentarily speechless.

"Alec! When did I allow you to kiss me?" Jenny scolded, gritting her teeth as she fumed. She wasn't his girlfriend, so what right did he have to kiss her?

"Sorry. I couldn't help myself," Alec apologized. But his face clearly showed he wasn't sorry about it, and he seemed quite pleased that he'd done it.

He was still laughing, while Jenny was angry and annoyed. She pushed him away and called him a jerk before heading upstairs to return to her apartment. As she walked away, Alec was about to follow her, but the shopkeeper stopped him.

"Young man, how do you like this photo I took of you two?" The lady smiled and showed him the picture she had just taken. She was quite proud of it.

Alec was momentarily stunned when he saw it, but then a smile spread across his face. "It's beautiful."

"I thought that sight just now was particularly stunning," she said happily, glad she didn't miss such a magical moment.

Alec took out his phone and asked, somewhat embarrassed, "Could you send me that photo? I want to save it on my phone."

"Of course."

When Jenny and Alec arrived at Bardoff Central Park, it was quiet and deserted. The ground was still covered with untouched snow.

Walking further inside, they found a group of people busy setting up the area. Jenny saw people holding flowers and balloons. They looked busy preparing the decorations.

"Hey, you're here." Max appeared behind them with a faint smile on his lips. Jenny turned around and immediately noticed that Max was wearing a black suit with a tie, which was quite rare for him. He looked much more energetic than usual.

"Are you really ready? What if Jade rejects you?" Jenny was worried, as Jade had refused Max several times before, and she couldn't tell if Jade was interested in him at all.

Max's expression became serious as he said, "No matter what, I have to give it a try. Don't you think? I'll let her make her choice on the first snowfall of this winter season."

Stepping into the cabin, the warmth from the heater enveloped Jenny, and the chill that lingered from when she was outdoors disappeared. She felt much more comfortable.

Outside, Max was still directing the workers to set up the venue. It was obvious that he was putting a lot of effort into it, paying attention to every detail. Jenny never expected Max to make such a huge change. He must really like Jade, which caused him to become the man he is today.

"Say..." Alec suddenly spoke, and Jenny looked at him. "Why didn't he choose to do it indoors? Isn't it freezing outside?"

That was a remarkably good question. Jenny didn't hurry to give an answer. Instead, she asked him, "Then why do you think he chose today to confess to Jade?"

It was just a confession and not a proposal. The two weren't officially together yet, so Max was jumping through hoops that day just to get Jade to agree to be his girlfriend.

"I don't know." Alec contemplated it but couldn't figure out what was so special about that particular day.

Jenny felt that Alec was sometimes smart but rather dumb at times. "Didn't he just say it? Today is the first snow of this winter season. Don't you think it's romantic?"

Jenny pulled Jade further into the park and said as they walked, "Don't be anxious. You'll find out soon enough."

Soon, Jade, still puzzled, was pulled to the center of the park, and exquisite decorations came into her view. The vivid red roses and balloons stood out, especially in the snow.

Jade stopped in her tracks. She looked at Jenny and saw she was smiling at her with a motherly expression. Jade felt a chill run down her spine.

Just as Jenny thought she'd figured out what was going on, Jade suddenly asked, "Are you preparing to hold an event here?"

"Jade..."

"This is quite a good idea. The first snow of the season, coupled with these decorations...This is perfect for a fashion show to launch our new product," Jade analyzed. The next moment, she frowned and said,
"However, the color of these flowers and our new product don't match, and these red balloons make it seem like a wedding."

As Jade started criticizing the venue, Jenny was rendered speechless and felt helpless at how things were progressing.

Chapter 980 He Deserved It

In the small cabin, Jenny and Alec watched the scene outside unfold but couldn't hear what Max and Jade said to each other. However, they both had their own thoughts upon witnessing the moment from afar.

Alec was contemplating whether he should also arrange a grand confession ceremony like Max, but he was afraid that his relationship with Jenny hadn't reached that point yet. What if Jenny rejected him?

He wasn't afraid of the embarrassment he would inevitably suffer if that were to happen. His biggest fear was that Jenny might keep her distance from him after she rejected him, and the progress they'd made thus far would come to a halt. That would have distressed him.

On the other hand, Jenny was deeply moved by the scene. She felt that Jade was worthy of the effort that Max had put in. Although Jade wasn't her sister by blood, she was as good as one. Jenny had always been concerned about Jade's lifelong happiness. If she got together with Max, she could finally have her happy ending.

Of course, the idea was that Max wouldn't behave as recklessly as he did in Parrington. Jenny would not let him off the hook if he went back to his old habits!

Jenny hadn't thought about herself at that moment.

Although such a grand confession was very moving, she didn't want it for herself. She preferred a simple and ordinary relationship. She deemed these grandiose gestures unnecessary. What mattered the most was the commitment of both parties to the relationship.
