

Become the Richest Woman After Divorce (Stacy And Sophia) Chapter 91

Become the Richest Woman After Divorce (Stacy And Sophia) Chapter 91

Chapter 91: Deep Affection and Sincere Feelings

Pierce paused for a moment, his silhouette hard and cold, and began to speak with some urgency;

I knew it was Emelia who had someone hit the old man and grandma, not just now, but also three years ago. It's just that Nolan ran errands for me at the last minute, and he ended up being the one who got hit.

“She was a cunning and deceitful person, everything she did to you was probably intentional. I was completely in the dark about it, I'm really sorry.”

His eyes were deep and obscure, staring at Sophia, his thin lips pursed, seemingly growing more and more uneasy in his heart.

Sophia met his gaze indifferently, her eyes seemingly devoid of emotion.

I had become somewhat indifferent to his words, to his reactions.

Pierce's heart sank.

Sophia stood up, picked up the information Aylen had found from the table, and placed it in front of him:

“This was what I found, it should have been useful to you.”

When Pierce saw the photo, his face subtly complex, his jaw tightened for a moment:

“Did you find out?”

Sophia nodded, “They are mother and daughter. As for how to use this

Chapter 91 Deep Affection and Sincera Feelings evidence, Mr. Clement knows in his heart.”

Pierce had known about Emelia’s relationship with that woman for a long time, but the current evidence was insufficient, unless Emelia confessed herself...

However, when he saw what Sophia had painstakingly found, he couldn’t help but feel a bit bitter and touched.

He had clearly just done something that upset her, yet she didn’t mind and brought the crucial evidence.

She truly had deep feelings for him!

She sent him a photo, wasn’t that her way of giving him a way out?

Pierce felt increasingly upset and distressed, as if several thin threads were tightening around his chest, causing a dense and prickling pain.

He lifted his head, his eyes a deep black, gazing at her with intense affection, and said to Sophia:

“I understand now, Sophia, we will remarry, and this time I absolutely won’t let you down!”

Sophia frowned, holding her coffee cup stiffly for a moment, lost in a daze for an instant:

Why did you suddenly bring up remarriage again?

What did “affection” mean?

Did he seem to misunderstand something?

Sophia pursed her lips, how could Mr. Clement, with his intelligence superior to humans, not understand her meaning?

It was truly hard to understand!

She put down her cup, somewhat speechless, but still maintained the most basic courtesy, smiling at him:

“Mr. Clement, I just didn’t want grandpa and grandma to suffer in vain, nothing else.”

Did he take the wrong medicine? Was there a problem with his comprehension?

Pierce, however, thought she was embarrassed,

He understood, he understood it all!

A gentle warmth radiated from between Pierce’s brows, his lips curved slightly as he pulled out an invitation from his pocket:

“I knew, in a few days, you would be invited to the birthday feast, Sophia. Would you be my female companion?”

He left immediately after he finished speaking, completely missing the look on Sophia’s face as if she had seen a lunatic.

the Clement Group.

Pierce returned seemingly a different person from when he had left, the curve of his lips was unbelievably different.

Although Sophia didn’t verbally agree to attend the birthday banquet, Pierce always felt that she would come.

At that moment.

Ava, in her high heels and carrying a bag, walked in through the door

30.24%

*23 25

directly from outside, along with Camille who was also dressed in designer clothes.

Aylen quickly made way:

“Good day, Madam Chairman. Good day, Miss.”

Camille politely smiled, while Ava simply ignored,

She snorted coldly, “I already knew it, you went to see Sophia again? She’s still clinging to you even after marriage, her methods are too despicable!”

Pierce’s face darkened, “Who told you?”.

He didn’t like the way Ava condescendingly criticized Sophia.

She clearly didn’t do anything wrong!

The Clement family had always owed her too much!

“When you showed up at Eagle Entertainment, my best friend happened to run into you while shopping.”

Ava said, recalling the recent events, and let out a cold snort:

“It’s just as well that the mute child is gone, there’s no need to send people to look for him. And as for that Emelia, hurry up and drive her away, don’t contact her again. She’s d reaming if she thinks she can come in with that identity!”

The sudden appearance of an extra child to divide the inheritance could have infuriated Ava to death for no reason!

It was finally lost, it was simply a blessing in disguise!

Pierce’s eyes were deep. He looked up, his voice devoid of emotion:

45.30%

Derp Affection and Secme Feelings

“Was there anything else?”

Camille walked over with a laugh:

“We came to see you, brother. Dad’s birthday is in a few days, we need to discuss how to arrange it.”

Dad’s birthday was as usual, a party was held, and the guest list was given to Kasen.

Ava nodded, naturally opening her mouth to speak:

“I had already contacted several well-bred socialites for you. There was one who played the piano quite well. It would be good for you to meet her later.”

Pierce impatiently stood up, his face unable to suppress the coldness.

“Not seen, you guys go out if you’re okay, I’m still very busy here.”

Seeing his impervious demeanor, Ava’s face darkened, and she said unhappily:

“A few days ago, your father went to meet that foreign woman. If I hadn’t arrived in time, who knows what would have happened!”

“If they were to rise from the ashes, would you still be secure in your position as the president of the Clement Group?”

There was a moment of silence in the office.

Pierce’s gaze swept across with a few streaks of cold light, his eyes stern and cold.

“Whether I could hold this position or not, was not for you to decide.”

Back in the day, when the Clement Group was in Kamden’s hands, it

61.26%

<

Deep Affection and sincere Footage didn't have the dominant and rapid momentum it has today.

It was after Pierce took over that he quickly cleaned up assets and rallied dissenting hearts in the shortest time, gradually allowing the Clement Group to occupy the leading position in business.

Pierce had countless company investments under his name, which he had personally worked hard for. Even without the Clement Group, he would still have had a place on the rich list.

Kamden was no fool; he wouldn't give up his empire just because Ava said a few words.

Ava's face changed, realizing that her son was not on the same page with her, her chest heaving with anger:

"You..."

Upon seeing this, Camille immediately stepped forward to mediate:

"Mom, what brother meant was, with him around, he wouldn't let you be wronged."

She looked at Pierce with a smile:

"Right, brother?"

Pierce faintly tugged at the corner of his lips.

Made no sound.

Silence equaled admission.

Pierce gave face, and Ava wouldn't stay angry anymore.

She composed herself, her voice no longer as confrontational:

"I just wanted you to see it, of course, you still had to be satisfied

77.17%

2325

Chapter 91: Deep Affection and Sincere Feelings

yourself.”

Emelia was more than happy that she and the two children finally didn't have to stay here and be in the way!

Camille looked at Ava with a smile:

“Mom, it's time for your mahjong game with Auntie. Aren't you going yet?”

Ava glanced at the time and almost forgot:

“True, I left first.”

She was already running late and didn't want to say more. She simply turned around and left.

As soon as Ava left, Camille immediately ran to Pierce's side, pouting in a pitiful manner :

“Brother, you helped me, didn't you!”

Pierce frowned, looking at his sister:

“What was wrong with you?”

92.11%

Chapter 92: He Didn't See Me

I went to see Derick, but he flatly refused to meet me. I had been to his office building several times, waiting for him for several hours, but he wouldn't budge.

No matter how I bumped into him, or what I said, he just wouldn't pay attention to me.

“Brother, could you please help me think of a solution? I was almost going crazy!”

Camille paced around impatiently

Pierce slightly furrowed his brows:

“What were you being so attentive for?”

“I wasn’t attentive, he couldn’t see me even more. The pursuit of a man by a woman is separated by a layer of gauze, let alone he is so outstanding and popular. I couldn’t let him be taken away by others!”

Camille spoke naturally.

Pierce wore a look of disdain, he didn’t have a good impression of this Derick.

“He wasn’t worth it, besides, wasn’t he just looking like me?”

“Bro, can you stop being so narcissistic? How is he anything like you? It’s clear that Derick is much more gentle and handsome

Pierce’s face darkened, giving her a cold glance:

“Get out

D

Camille: ”

Was he a biological brother?

She pleaded here for quite a while before she managed to get Pierce to agree to invite Derick to Kamden’s birthday party, creating an opportunity for her.

Pierce had her leave, finally able to have a moment of peace.

Sophia knew about Pierce’s situation, but it was already several days later.

Due to the numerous issues involved in Pamela’s jump from the building, it was kept confidential.

When she found out, she was momentarily in disbelief.

Why had that woman chosen such a method?

Not many days ago.

Sandra went to the company to look for Sophia in high spirits.

As soon as she entered the room, she stood in front of the office desk, full of vitality, and looked at Sophia mysteriously.

“Did you know what I was going to tell you?”

Sophia shook her head.

Sandra couldn't hold back either, and blurted out:

“Nolan took the child back to the Morrison family. Nolan's mother, out of concern, had a paternity test done for them. The result showed that the child was not Nolan's.”

Sophia's eyes widened in shock, her heart deeply shaken:

13.21%

23-25

“What? That Pamela...”

Didn't Pamela love Nolan very much?

Or perhaps she was merely playing along all along.

Sandra couldn't help but shake her head:

That child was from Pamela's first boyfriend in school. She got back together with her first love after leaving Nolan, but they broke up again after she got pregnant.

Everyone was laughing at Nolan for being cuckolded by a mistress.

“The Morrison family had already returned the child to his biological father.”

Sophia also felt quite melancholic.

Pamela being with Nolan was probably for revenge from the very beginning.

But what these two people really looked like, perhaps only they knew.

“This whole mess with the Morrison family, it was enough to keep them busy for a while. But who on earth took that child away?”

Sandra raised an eyebrow, “Who knows? Anyway, it's none of our business now.”

Sophia fell silent for a moment.

It was just a pity that Joshua lost...

However, she always felt that it wasn't lost, but was taken away by someone. Otherwise, with the huge effort Pierce put into searching, it wouldn't have been possible to not even have a trace.

27.08%

.23.25 @

Her phone suddenly rang. It was a message from Derick:

"Sophia, I had to make an urgent trip back to Mautiland. Was there anything you needed me to bring?"

Sophia slightly furrowed her brows, this sudden?

She replied, "Nothing is needed, safe travels."

"Wait for me."

The two people chatted for a while, and then it was time to get off work.

Sophia had a social engagement in the evening, all were acquaintances, and Sandra also went along.

The other party also brought their own daughter, who was about the same age as Sophia. She had just returned from abroad, with distinct facial features, and was elegantly beautiful.

"Ms. Cruise, this is my daughter, Annie Stapleton. She insisted on coming along to broaden her horizons. She plays the piano."

Sophia smiled and politely said:

"I had seen Ms. Stapleton's poster before, when I was fortunate enough to pass by a theater during my trip abroad. Unfortunately, I didn't have time to go in and appreciate it."

Annie, with her delicate demeanor, spoke softly:

"Ms. Cruise was polite. I had a performance at the theater in a few days, and she could come to support if she had time."

Not sure if it's a characteristic of dancers, but Annie and Emelia were quite similar in some aspects of their temperament.

41.27%

23:250

It was all that kind of soft, weak, slender, and fragile feeling.

However, the impression Annie gave was not as harshly targeted as Emelia's.

During this meal, Annie's gaze kept falling on Sophia from time to time.

Sophia had noticed, she just nodded slightly when she met the gaze.

Just as things were about to end, Annie's phone rang. After glancing at her phone, she looked at her father with a beaming smile and said something.

Derek Stapleton just helplessly waved his hand.

Sandra teased with a laugh on the side:

"Was it the boyfriend who came to pick up?"

Annie's face turned red, she subconsciously glanced at Sophia, somewhat embarrassed, she curved the corner of her lips and explained:

"It wasn't yet."

She apologized to everyone shyly, then left.

He wasn't a boyfriend yet, but indeed someone came to pick her up.

Mr. Stapleton chuckled, "The blind date her mother introduced, don't mind, Ms. Cruise, the person introduced is Pierce."

The venue was completely quiet.

Sandra was even more shocked, her smile stiffening and fading away:

"Pierce?"

57.24%

23 25

<

Sophia raised an eyebrow, finally understanding why Annie had been observing her all along.

“Of course I wouldn’t mind, a match in social and economic status is quite suitable!”

Mr. Stapleton’s collaboration with Eagle Entertainment was deeper, so he didn’t hide anything from Sophia.

Mr. Stapleton only breathed a sigh of relief when he saw her natural complexion:

“Actually, I didn’t really agree with this matter, but my wife was quite fond of Mr. Clement, and Annie also liked him. She has liked Mr. Clement since she was a child, so... let’s just go with the flow!”

After the dinner party ended.

Everyone left one after another.

Sophia and Sandra went to the restroom and were the last to leave.

Sandra had drunk quite a bit, leaning drunkenly against Sophia.

Was waiting for the elevator.

The elevator arrived, a person got off, who had also drunk quite a bit. Squinting, he took a glance, a flash of sharpness in his eyes:

“Ms. Cruise, isn’t this the Ms. Cruise from the Clement Group?”

Sophia was taken aback, recognizing the man as David Fredrick, a client who had collaborated with the Clement Group. She had been the one to liaise with him at the time.

She gave a slight nod, “Hello, Mr. Fredrick, I am no longer with the Clement Group.”

70.74%

23 25

<

Chapter 92: He Didn’t See Me

David had eagerly taken her hand, his eyes scanning her up and down, unable to hide his astonishment:

“Ms. Cruise, I had long felt that your talents were wasted there, Mr. Clement had always neglected you. I’ve been thinking about you since your divorce.”

“Why not come to my place? I’ll pay you double the salary.”

He said, intending to grope her butt under the influence of alcohol.

Sophia pulled back her hand, dodged smoothly, and her face also darkened.

“Mr. Fredrick, I was not interested, please respect yourself.”

David’s face turned sour in an instant, he squinted his eyes and snorted coldly:

“Don’t toast if you’re not going to drink the penalty, you’re part of the Clement Group?”

do

you still think

Sensing something amiss, a groggy Sandra nearby lifted her head:

“Who are you, what’s so great about the Clement Group? Where did this fatso come from? If you want to act like a thug, at least open your eyes. Get lost now!”

David hated being called a fatso the most. His face immediately turned pale and he slapped Sandra across the face.

<

86.62%

23 26 1

Chapter 93 Waiting for You to Beg Me

Chapter 93: Waiting for You to Beg Me

Sandra snapped awake instantly. She was not the type to swallow her anger and reason things out. Without a word, she charged forward and brutally kicked him in the groin.

Taking advantage of the moment when David was in too much pain to speak, she immediately slapped him across the face, her movement smooth and decisive.

Sandra touched her own face, with a hint of provocation:

“Dare to hit me, and I would make you pay.”

David, sweating with anger, finally came to his senses and glared fiercely at the two of them:

“None of you were going to leave today.”

He abruptly stepped forward, tightly grabbing Sophia’s wrist, about to drag her into the adjacent room:

Sandra was punching and kicking him from behind, but for a man, it was nothing more than a drizzle.

No matter how much Sophia resisted, David simply wouldn't let go.

But the next second.

A tremendous pressure came from behind, a foot kicked David's lower back, and he instinctively crashed into the door frame next to him.

Seeing that Sophia was about to be pulled down by him, a hand suddenly yanked her back from the side.

0.00%

|||

J

23:26

and cold agarwood caught her off guard.

Hadn't he left with Annie a long time ago?

How could it have appeared here?

As he looked up, Pierce's stern face came into view. Without any hesitation, he kicked again before David could even make out who it was.

Pierce exuded a strong, cold aura, carrying an intimidating chill. In his eyes was a terrifyingly arrogant and icy turbulence.

Unlike David's bluff and bluster.

In comparison, David was like a little fat chick, beaten without the power to fight back.

At that moment, the club owner who heard the commotion came running over.

"What happened? Mr. Clement..."

He glanced down and the club owner's face suddenly changed.

Sandra stormed up to the front:

“This fat jerk was messing with us and hitting people. Go get someone to kick him out, I’m calling the police!”

David on the ground had long since turned into a puddle of mud.

Writhing in agony, he was lying on the ground, unable to get up.

Upon hearing the alarm, the club owner’s face immediately changed.

He glanced at Sophia and Sandra, then looked at the imposing Pierce.

14.96%

23 26

You to Meg Me

Pierce didn’t speak, he just turned and stared intently at Sophia.

The club owner approached with a pleasing smile, saying to Sophia:

“Since Mr. Clement has already given a lesson, I think we shouldn’t make a big fuss about it, right Ms. Cruise?”

Sophia looked upset, understanding his meaning.

Just let it go, I really couldn’t bear it!

The club owner tentatively looked at Pierce.

Sophia, however, lowered her head and took out her phone, as if she was going to call someone for help.

Before the call could even be made, the phone was snatched away.

Pierce looked at her with a heavy gaze, his voice low and restrained:

“I was right here, who else were you looking for help?”

He had been waiting for her to speak up, hadn’t she noticed?

Pierce furrowed his brows at the club owner, sneering coldly, his voice chilling and indifferent:

“Call the police, I don’t want to see this person here again in the future!”

The club owner's face changed immediately, recognizing Pierce's tough attitude.

Dared not offend.

He nodded immediately, "Alright, Mr. Clement, I'm on it. This person will not appear in the club again."

30.30%

|||

23 26)

Chapter 93 Waiting for You to Reg Me

Pierce looked down at Sophia, her expression was faint, as if she was deliberately maintaining a sense of distance.

His heart tightened, remembering how she had voluntarily given him her photo, and he couldn't help but feel a bit pleased again.

"They would handle the rest of the things, I would take you guys home first."

Sophia paused, "No need, weren't you going to drop off Ms. Stapleton?"

"What, Ms. Stapleton?"

A look of confusion and bewilderment was on Pierce's face.

Sophia stared at him for a few seconds, realizing he truly didn't know.

He was even more confused. If it wasn't him who took Annie away, then who was it?

Pierce raised an eyebrow, "Are you jealous?"

Sophia withdrew her gaze, cursing inwardly, what a damn understanding!

Pierce reached out and took the bag from her hand, couldn't help but curl up the corner of his lips, and said with a smile:

"Let's go, my car is only for you."

Sophia hesitated, just about to refuse, but Sandra, drunk, couldn't help but lean on Sophia's shoulder and fell asleep.

She sighed helplessly, realizing it was probably too late to call a driver now. She had no choice but to bother Pierce.

45.19%

23 26

Night fell

Fortunately, Sandra had passed out drunk, otherwise, she would have made a huge fuss over the slap on her face.

Pierce was driving, with Sophia and Sandra both sitting in the back.

“Where did she live?”

Sophia paused, “Stay at my place.”

Pierce was somewhat upset, it was also inconvenient for her to live there.

But he didn’t say anything either.

Sophia was helping Sandra up the stairs, with Pierce following behind, showing no intention of helping.

He didn’t even want to touch any other women.

But when she came out of the room, Sophia had just breathed a sigh of relief, only to see that Pierce hadn’t left yet.

He sat in the living room and poured himself a glass of water, his relaxed demeanor resembling that of a host.

“Why hadn’t you left yet?”

Pierce rolled up his sleeves, revealing his sleek forearms, and leisurely poured her a glass of water:

“Shall we talk?”

Sophia walked over with a furrowed brow:

“Talk about what? Tonight’s matter? Thank you, you name your price!”

She had already taken a hundred million anyway, this little money didn’t make a difference.

Pierce’s face suddenly fell:

“Could you stop talking about money? Can money solve everything?”

That one hundred million was like a slap in his face, very loud!

Sophia watched his reaction and silently chuckled

“So what did you want to say?”

Pierce stared at her steadily, his brows furrowed, pinching the bridge of his nose:

“Sophia, I understood your thoughts, Emelia’s matter won’t affect us anymore.”

“If you are willing now, we will remarry tomorrow!”

Sophia looked at her, puzzled, “What idea?”

“You took the initiative to make amends...”

Sophia silently watched him in silence.

Pierce had a deep, dark gaze, his face appeared calm, but he was still somewhat nervous inside.

For a long time.

Sophia closed her eyes, took a deep breath, and began to speak in a calm voice:

“I didn’t give you the photo with any good intentions, it’s because Emelia is your person, she harmed your family, what to do is your business.”

Pierce slowly reined in his laughter.

“What did you mean?”

“I wouldn’t remarry, and I would never even entertain the idea, Pierce You can leave now.”

Sophia spoke bluntly without considering feelings, and Pierce was a person who cared a lot about face.

His jawline was taut, the corners of his lips tightly pressed together, his aura gradually becoming cold and gloomy. He gave her a deep look, then lifted his foot and walked away

But as soon as he stepped out, he felt some regret. He shouldn't have been so impulsive.

What if she was testing herself?

Sophia cursed under her breath and went straight back to her room

Mr. Zhou and his wife went abroad for medical treatment, and it was Pierce who directly sent them there with his private jet.

As soon as the two people left. Ava was completely relieved.

No need to pretend to be a dutiful daughter-in-law in front of Kamden

Chapter 95: Taking the Person Away

Ava's face gradually stiffened, she couldn't hold herself together anymore.

How could this bitch Sophia act even more wronged and better than her!

She originally wanted to build up a good mother-in-law image for herself, but she ended up ruining it!

Ava's face turned pale with anger, she gritted her teeth and glared at Sophia, then walked over to Annie and gave a hypocritical smile.

"If it were you, you would definitely get along well with my aunt. You come from a good family and have great abilities. With you at home, Pierce would be able to devote himself to his career with peace of mind."

"When you guys were married in the future..."

Before she could finish her sentence, Pierce's cold voice suddenly rang out from behind, carrying a suppressed anger:

"Who was getting married?"

Ava paused, turning her head to look at him:

"Pierce, this is Ms. Stapleton, the pianist I mentioned to you. She won countless awards at a young age."

"Didn't you pick her up last time? You two should have gotten along well..."

0.00%

2337

Chapter 95 Taking the Person Away

Pierce impatiently interrupted her:

“The person who picked her up last time was the driver, I was very busy and didn’t have time to go.”

Ava’s face changed color.

Was just about to get angry.

Annie

immediately laughed and said, “The main thing is what matters, who picks up the person is not important, there is always a chance to meet.”

She looked at Pierce with a smile, a certain ‘unusual emotion subtly flowing in her eyes:

“Pierce, do you still remember me? I’m Annie, we were high school classmates.”

Pierce’s eyes darkened, his tone icy:

“I couldn’t remember.”

After he finished speaking, he turned around directly, looking at Sophia who hadn’t yet come out of the play.

Especially her reddened eyes, Pierce’s heart tightened abruptly.

He used to grab her wrist directly, his eyes gloomily fixed on Ava.

“I had said it before, who I marry is my business, I don’t want others to interfere.”

Saying so, she took Sophia and left.

Ava was so angry that she couldn’t even hold her wine glass steady.

Annie’s face, however, had a moment of embarrassed gloom.

Chapter 99. Taking the Person Away

The people nearby all looked at each other in dismay.

“That Sophia really was talented!”

“Exactly, they both got divorced and hooked up, quite impressive huh!”

“Annie, you wouldn’t lose to her!”

Annie tugged at the corner of her mouth, watching their retreating figures. She didn’t say a word, but a surge of jealousy quietly grew in her heart.

He divorced Sophia, parted ways with Emelia, and his illegitimate child also disappeared. Wasn’t it the best time for him now?

She raised her eyebrows, looking at the crowd and said:

“Excuse me.”

Pierce took Sophia away, the quiet corridor lights shimmering.

He thought she had been bullied to tears by a group of people, so he was burning with anger.

Turning his head, he saw her looking at him with cold, clear eyes, her brows furrowed.

Pierce pinched the soft wrist in his hand, but before he could do anything else, she pulled away and went to wash her hands in the nearby women’s restroom.

Pierce’s heart sank:

At that moment, the noise from the front suddenly erupted.

Camille shouted loudly, “Bro, that bitch Emelia is here!”

Chapter 95 Taking the Person Away

Pierce’s eyebrows furrowed and he immediately went ahead.

Sophia heard the noise and followed to see what was happening.

He just watched as Emelia tore at Annie’s clothes, like a madwoman.

Annie was slender and frail, not a match for her at all.

The next second.

Emelia forcefully pushed her onto the pyramid-shaped stack of wine glasses beside them. In an instant, the stack of glasses fell to the ground, spilling wine and scattering shards of glass everywhere.

And Annie, pale-faced, fell into the glass, her skirt and arms all covered in blood.

It was shocking to the core.

The birthday feast was suddenly interrupted, everyone looked on in shock.

Ava, shocked, covered her mouth and was unable to speak from the side.

Emelia revealed a triumphant smirk, pointing at Annie's nose and cursing:

"You thought I didn't know what you were up to?"

Who were you dressing so provocatively for?

"You just wanted to seduce him, I've seen these tricks many times, you wretch!"

She cursed satisfyingly, casually picking up a wine bottle and intending to throw it at Annie.

41.20%

Chapter 95: Taking the Person Away

But the next second, her hand was seized by someone, and the glass fell to the ground.

Emelia turned around, looking shocked at the grim-faced Pierce.

"Pierce....."

Her voice suddenly softened, her lips trembling as she was about to say something, when Pierce slapped her.

With a "pop", Emelia covered her face in shock.

"How could you hit me for that wretch? She just tried to drug your drink to seduce you, and I caught her!"

Annie seemed as if she hadn't yet recovered from the shock, her face pale as she slowly lifted her head, her eyes brimming with tears.

That kind of reaction, as if she was wronged, didn't require a single word. Everyone would unconditionally believe in her innocence.

Pierce's face looked extremely unpleasant as he glanced at the bodyguard next to him:

"Take the person away!"

The bodyguard immediately stepped in, restraining Emelia, who began to cry as if she had gone mad:

“Pierce, it was all my mom’s doing, those things had nothing to do with me. How could I hurt you when I love you so much!”

Pierce’s brow slightly furrowed, his face tense as he turned to look down at Annie, who was softly sobbing.

He bent down and scooped up the person in his arms, “To the hospital.”

64.93%

23.27

Chapter 95 Taking the Person Away

Sophia stood there watching, unaware of when Derick had arrived behind her.

He served her a glass of juice, the corner of his mouth unconsciously curling up.

“Mr. Clement’s peach blossoms have always been thriving!”

Sophia tugged at the corner of her lips:

“Emelia wouldn’t back down, the evidence wasn’t enough to prove that she had orchestrated her mother’s murder.”

Derick chuckled lightly, “The key is whether Mr. Clement would believe it.”

Even with evidence, it was only an attempt, Emelia could get away with it by finding a lawyer.

Sophia raised an eyebrow, didn’t say anything.

Derick suddenly grabbed her hand, pulling her towards where the music was playing.

“Let’s go, let’s dance.”

“I couldn’t.”

“I didn’t believe.”

He glanced at her teasingly.

Sophia was speechless/

The two people chuckled and then entered the dance floor.

In order to put the recent unpleasantness behind, Kamden and Ava were also involved.

70.47%

|||

23:27

Chapter 95 Taking the Person Away

Watching Derick and Sophia, this pair, come in, everyone seemed a bit shocked.

Derick was the person in power at the Woodward Group, with countless assets, yet he was close to Sophia, who had been divorced.

Many people were secretly envious.

Sophia was initially a bit reserved, but Derick followed her lead, completely giving her the initiative. Therefore, she gradually relaxed and danced exceptionally smoothly.

Derick looked down at her with gentle eyes, the two of them appearing quite intimate from an outsider's perspective.

And below, Camille, having witnessed this scene, had her eyes welling up with tears.

The elegant lady in the black skirt next to me couldn't help but speak up:

"How nice you were to her, always addressing her respectfully as 'sister-in-law'. Yet, she was secretly seducing the man you liked behind your back. How could you still, be so polite to such a person?"

"If it were me, I would have splashed wine in her face and kicked her out. Let's see who she flirts with then!"

Camille's face turned pale, she bit her lower lip:

"She was my sister-in-law, she donated her bone marrow to me, she was a good person, she wouldn't treat me like that."

As she spoke, she ran off with tears welling up in her eyes.

The speaker sneered:

82.42%

|||

<

Chapter 95: Taking the Person Away

“What a fool, who doesn’t know that she donated bone marrow to you for your brother, s he’s not kind at all!”

Chapter 96: Absolutely Insane

After finishing a dance, Sophia’s breath was somewhat unsteady, but her mood had improved a lot.

Derick brought her a glass of water, Sophia drank it and looked around.

“Is it about time?”

Derick laughed, “Shall we go back?”

Sophia nodded.

Two people left, one after the other.

But before getting on the car, he was stopped by someone.

Camille stood there, her eyes rimmed red, looking at them with a mournful expression.

It seemed like I had caught onto their illicit relationship.

Derick slightly furrowed his brows, his voice cold and distant:

“Ms. Clement, was there something?”

Camille gritted her teeth, “I came to see you, but you didn’t meet me. Do you dislike me that much?”

“I wasn’t familiar with Ms. Clement, there was no need to meet.”

Derick’s voice was slightly deep and cold.

Camille’s voice was hoarse, “But you knew I liked you, I liked you the moment I saw you in the hospital, you...”

0.00%

23.28

It was unclear which word had touched a nerve with Derick, his eyes seemed to be covered with a layer of cold fog.

“I didn’t like you, the one I liked was someone else.”

Derick directly crushed her hopes.

Camille shuddered, teetering on the brink of collapse.

She looked at Sophia with a mournful expression, speaking incoherently:

“Was it her? She was clearly with my brother, why did you... Where am I inferior to her? She’s even a divorcee!”

The frown on Derick’s brow deepened, seemingly quite repulsed by her rudeness.

He glanced at Sophia and reached out to open the car door for her from behind.

“Let’s go,” we said.

Sophia nodded, she didn’t want to stay here either.

However, Camille was clearly provoked, she ran over unwillingly, grabbed Sophia’s arm , and began to speak excitedly:

“Sister-in-law, I was so good to you, why did you have to compete with me for him? You clearly already had my brother...”

Sophia furrowed her brows, wanting to pull her hand back, but Camille simply wouldn’t let go, intent on venting all her resentment on her.

Chapter 96: Absolutely insane

She was crying and shouting, and the people at the door all turned to look this way.

Sophia was feeling a bit upset.

She forcefully pushed Camille away, looking at her with an indifferent tone:

“Ms. Clement, please be clear-headed, I didn’t steal your man, and I have nothing to do with your Clement family anymore. Don’t try to morally kidnap me again.”

Her words were like a slap in the face to Camille.

Her face was embarrassingly blank and flushed. She wanted to say something, but was interrupted by Derick.

“Ms. Clement had too much to drink, let’s go home.”

He helped Sophia into the car, then got in from the other side. The car quickly started and disappeared down the street.

On the bus.

Derick looked at her in silence, “I’m sorry, I’ve caused you trouble.”

Sophia joked with a smile, “Mr. Woodward also has quite a few admirers.”

Derick laughed, “But there’s only one I want to pursue.”

The light inside the car was dim, Sophia pursed her lips:

“Mr. Woodward, don’t waste your time on me, I sincerely considered you as a friend.”

“Well, from friend to boyfriend to fiancé to husband, one step at a

26.25%

23 28

Chapter 30: Absolutely insane

time!”

Derick laughed openly, showing no sign of backing down.

Sophia had made everything clear, expressing her helplessness about

1. it.

The next day.

Pierce saw the photo of Sophia and Derick dancing that someone had taken.

The two people embraced intimately, their posture affectionate, as if they were gazing deeply into each other’s eyes, their eyes filled with countless tender emotions.

Chad couldn’t help but say on the phone:

“Bro, they said Derick has already publicly admitted that he likes Sophia. If you don’t step up your game, Sophia is going to become someone else’s wife!”

Pierce was so angry that he almost threw his phone. His face was ashen and ugly, and his mood was particularly unpleasant.

He invited her to be his date, but she ended up being Derick's date.

Where was he worse than the stand-in?

No, she must have been deliberately trying to upset him, wanting to make him jealous?

Pierce gritted his teeth and had all the circulated photos deleted.

Sophia didn't care about these trivial matters at all.

While Chad was helping him delete photos, he couldn't help but

40.89%

23 28

Chapter 6 Absolutely insane

criticize him:

"People had already danced, were you still afraid of being secretly filmed? You were the only one who got angry after watching!"

Pierce snorted coldly, "I'm not angry, I just think he's not worthy!"

Didn't deserve to stand with Sophia!

The incident happened just a few days ago.

Suddenly, a shocking piece of news was exposed on the internet.

#Mr. Clement had an affair#

#Kamden spent the night with a mysterious woman#

Sophia didn't have much of an impression of Kamden.

He hardly spent a few days at home in a month.

Ava knew there were people outside, but she couldn't prevent it. All she could do was to make an example of one to deter the others.

But it still couldn't stop those people who kept rushing forward one after another.

Kamden, in order to appease Ava, was not stingy at all, generously giving her a substantial amount of pocket money every month.

But this exposure was clearly someone deliberately being photographed.

In less than an hour, these entries had disappeared from the internet without a trace.

65.25%

*2329

Chapter 96. Absolutely Insane

The Clement Group also issued a trivial legal letter to warn those spreading rumors, clarifying that it was merely business dealings.

Actually, this could already be considered a scandal, and it did have an impact on the Clement Group.

However, Pierce's handling was swift, causing hardly any significant fluctuations.

However, the discussion was still very heated.

Seeing that people were about to discuss Ava's rise to power, she immediately had a bigger scandal exposed to overshadow this disgrace.

Very quickly.

#Cecilia was the mistress of a wealthy man#

#Cecilia had already secretly married and had a child, and the honest person took over#

#Cecilia Queen of Water#

The fire quickly spread to the Cruise family.

Cecilia was about to lose her temper.

She was originally just watching the play, but ended up becoming the scapegoat for the popularity?

"Who couldn't see that this was a rumor fabricated by the Clement family to cover up their scandal with greater hype? I've been in this circle for so many years, and I was actually used by others!"

“Damn it, not a single one of them was any good, I absolutely wouldn’t

69.01%

23:28

Chapter 9 Ahaniutely inanne

let them off!”

Brycen couldn’t soothe him from the side.

He called Mike directly.

“What’s going on? Half of the entertainment industry’s capital belonged to us, and yet th e capital ended up oppressing my wife?”

Mike was also sweating bullets:

“Brycen, I just found out as well. The Clement family just acquired our rival film company. In order to make a big splash and attract public attention, they st arted spreading rumors.

“We had already started to remove the trending topics here, so please tell my sister not to be angry!”

“Could she not be angry? She had already cursed the ancestors of the Clement family!”

Brycen snorted in silence.

Hung up the phone.

Mike looked at Sophia and sighed:

“Your mother is noble and strong—willed, the Clement family really stirred up a hornet’s nest this time.”

Sophia looked at the report brought by her subordinate:

“The number of paid trolls and comment shares for my family kept increasing. In just one hour, the discussion volume on the trending topics had already exceeded one h undred thousand. My mom truly

83.89%

23.28

Chapter 96: Absolutely Insane

deserved to be a superstar!”

Ordinary people didn't have the ability to make everyone value them so much.

No wonder it instantly captured everyone's attention.

Chapter 97: Giving Him a Title

After all, Cecilia's status in the industry was well-known. She was the final judge at major domestic and international film festivals, and since her debut, she had hardly any scandals.

It was just as she grew older, many people began to discuss her personal feelings.

But she didn't admit it personally, nor was there any solid evidence, so no one knew what it was really like.

Spreading rumors and speculations in this way today was a heavy blow for Cecilia.

Removing her from the trending list would make people think she and the people behind her were guilty, but responding directly would inevitably expose her private life.

No matter what it looked like, Cecilia had been set up by someone.

The development of public opinion was too fast.

Eagle Entertainment exerted pressure on the platform, but on the other hand, pressure was also constantly applied.

This led to an increasing polarization in everyone's discussions during the confrontation between the two sides.

Some people believed Cecilia, seeing it as a conspiracy.

Some people were completely fooled, following the trend to discuss the financial backer behind Cecilia.

Chapter 97 Giving Him a Title

In the end, Sophia made a call to Cecilia.

Cecilia was so angry that she didn't even eat.

Sophia spoke softly and gently:

“Mom, after all these years, shouldn’t we give Dad a proper title?”

“What? I was doing it for his own good, otherwise he would be watched by others whenever he went out. And if I compromised, wouldn’t that mean I was admitting defeat?”

Cecilia was both angry and anxious, while Brycen was by her side, massaging her shoulders:

“I saw that my daughter was right, so I simply stepped in, didn’t that solve everything?”

I had face, I had dignity, I had money, what was the big deal?

“We’ve known each other for decades, seeing you being slandered by others, how distressed I was in my heart!”

Cecilia sighed, leaning on his shoulder:

“I was a public figure. If you announced our relationship, it would be magnified a hundred times and picked apart by others. I didn’t want you to be the subject of people’s gossip and speculation!”

Brycen laughed, “What am I afraid of? I haven’t done anything wrong, I’m not afraid of being talked about.”

Cecilia was silent for a moment, then nodded.

Brycen simply picked up the phone and told Sophia:

“Don’t worry, your father will see the light of day soon!”

Chapter 97: Giving Him a Title

Very quickly.

A statement from the Cruise Group directly sent the names of Cecilia and Brycen to the trending list.

“Ms. Cecilia married Chairman Brycen twenty years ago, and their relationship has been stable. Recently, there have been unfounded rumors exploiting Ms. Cecilia’s popularity to divert attention from a scandal. Our company will pursue the relevant responsibilities.”

The signatures of Brycen and Cecilia were signed below.

Suddenly, this news exploded.

Those who spread rumors about Cecilia instantly deleted their accounts, and the trending topics about her family also started to automatically disappear.

They originally just wanted to divert attention by using the popularity of the entertainment industry, but who knew they would kick a solid iron plate!

Cecilia turned out to be the mistress of the Cruise Group, Brycen's wife. They were simply dumbfounded!

Moreover, the Cruise Group directly stated that this was a plot to divert attention, directly reigniting the heat that had previously suppressed the Clement Group!

The comments section was also filled with rapid twists and turns:

"Back then, I just thought they were a good match, I didn't expect they really were!"

"No wonder Mr. Cruise attended every award ceremony, it turned out he was accompanying his wife."

Chapter 97. Giving Him a Title

"Didn't anyone find the sudden withdrawal of the news about Mr. Clement's affair surprising?"

"Did Mr. Clement think people in the entertainment industry were easy to bully? They were much cleaner than you!"

"The practices of the Clement Group were really despicable, Mr. Cruise was angry and defended his wife, confronting you directly!"

"The two scandals before and after, both involved the chairman, there's simply no comparison!"

"Mrs. Clement's rise to power was also quite fascinating, it seems like she and Mr. Clement are two peas in a pod!"

The smoke had openly ignited between the Clement Group and the Cruise Group.

However, the behavior of the Clement family was despicable, and everyone scolded them until the comment section was shut down.

the Clement Group.

The office was dead silent.

Kamden's face was ashen and ugly, Ava was just done venting her anger.

"Is this how you handle things? We spent so much money acquiring your company, and yet before Eagle Entertainment even made a move, you've already backed down. What use are you to us?"

"Go and find a way to take down the news right now, I don't want to see a single piece of information about this scandal anymore!"

Chapter 27: Giving Him & Tile

Everyone below was hanging their heads in silence.

The people from the PR Department remained silent, let alone the director of the newly acquired Starry Entertainment.

Their faces turned ashen, they didn't even dare to utter a word.

The company's PR Department couldn't help but speak up:

"Mr. Clement's female secretary was blackmailing us for money. We had already given her three million and she stopped causing trouble. It was the people from Starry Entertainment who insisted on offending Cecilia."

"It's all over now. We've not only offended Eagle Entertainment, but also the Cruise Group. Now, our Clement Group's stock is falling as soon as the market opens..."

The people from Starry Entertainment couldn't help but retort:

"We didn't even know that Cecilia was Brycen's wife. Her identity wasn't even captured by the paparazzi, let alone being able to suppress the matter with Mr. Clement. Surely, a bigger scoop is needed!"

Ava's face contorted with anger, she threw the cup in front of her onto the floor, shattering it into pieces.

"I had already suggested arresting that woman for fraud, yet you still gave her money. Who agreed to this?"

The people in the PR Department looked at each other, then glanced down at Kamden.

Kamden's face was gloomy.

All the women outside were just for fun to him, and once he had enough, he would dismiss them with money.

Chapter 97: Giving Him a Title

This one was the most audacious, even daring to threaten him.

And the situation was out of control...

“Enough, do you want to make it even uglier?”

Kamden scoffed, and Ava reluctantly turned her head away, enduring in silence.

In the end, it was all trouble he had caused.

The always silent Pierce seemed completely detached from everything.

Even if the scandal over his head involved his own family, he still remained calm and composed.

The person from the PR Department glanced at Pierce, whispering:

“Mr. Clement, why don’t we take the initiative to apologize to the Cruise family? Reconciliation is much better than a stalemate!”

Pierce’s eyes were pitch black, revealing nothing of what he was thinking.

Kamden nodded, “I guess that’s the only way. It would be best to have them cooperate in deleting their explanations, and have your mom go with you.”

Ava abruptly stood up:

“I didn’t go, wasn’t that embarrassing enough?”

Cecilia was a lousy actress, but the man she married was no worse than herself. Moreover, she was successful in both her career and love life. No wonder she dared to ignore me when she was chatting with Sophia in the parking lot before.

Become the Richest Woman After Divorce (Stacy And Sophia) Chapter 98

Become the Richest Woman After Divorce (Stacy And Sophia) Chapter 98

Chapter 97: Giving Him a Title

After all, Cecilia's status in the industry was well-known. She was the final judge at major domestic and international film festivals, and since her debut, she had hardly any scandals.

It was just as she grew older, many people began to discuss her personal feelings.

But she didn't admit it personally, nor was there any solid evidence, so no one knew what it was really like.

Spreading rumors and speculations in this way today was a heavy blow for Cecilia.

Removing her from the trending list would make people think she and the people behind her were guilty, but responding directly would inevitably expose her private life.

No matter what it looked like, Cecilia had been set up by someone.

The development of public opinion was too fast.

Eagle Entertainment exerted pressure on the platform, but on the other hand, pressure was also constantly applied.

This led to an increasing polarization in everyone's discussions during the confrontation between the two sides.

Some people believed Cecilia, seeing it as a conspiracy.

Some people were completely fooled, following the trend to discuss the financial backer behind Cecilia.

Chapter 97 Giving Him a Title

In the end, Sophia made a call to Cecilia.

Cecilia was so angry that she didn't even eat.

Sophia spoke softly and gently:

“Mom, after all these years, shouldn’t we give Dad a proper title?”

“What? I was doing it for his own good, otherwise he would be watched by others whenever he went out. And if I compromised, wouldn’t that mean I was admitting defeat?”

Cecilia was both angry and anxious, while Brycen was by her side, massaging her shoulders:

“I saw that my daughter was right, so I simply stepped in, didn’t that solve everything?”

I had face, I had dignity, I had money, what was the big deal?

“We’ve known each other for decades, seeing you being slandered by others, how distressed I was in my heart!”

Cecilia sighed, leaning on his shoulder:

“I was a public

figure. If you announced our relationship, it would be magnified a hundred times and picked apart by others. I didn’t want you to be the subject of people’s gossip and speculation!”

Brycen

laughed, “What am I afraid of? I haven’t done anything wrong, I’m not afraid of being talked about.”

Cecilia was silent for a moment, then nodded.

Brycen simply picked up the phone and told Sophia:

“Don’t worry, your father will see the light of day soon!”

Chapter 97: Giving Him a Title

Very quickly.

A statement from the Cruise Group directly sent the names of Cecilia and Brycen to the trending list.

“Ms. Cecilia married Chairman Brycen twenty years ago, and their relationship has been stable. Recently, there have been unfounded rumors exploiting Ms. Cecilia’s popularity to divert attention from a scandal. Our company will pursue the relevant responsibilities.”

The signatures of Brycen and Cecilia were signed below.

Suddenly, this news exploded.

Those who spread rumors about Cecilia instantly deleted their accounts, and the trending topics about her family also started to automatically disappear.

They originally just wanted to divert attention by using the popularity of the entertainment industry, but who knew they would kick a solid iron plate!

Cecilia turned out to be the mistress of the Cruise Group, Brycen’s wife. They were simply dumbfounded!

Moreover, the Cruise Group directly stated that this was a plot to divert attention, directly reigniting the heat that had previously suppressed the Clement Group!

The comments section was also filled with rapid twists and turns:

“Back then, I just thought they were a good match, I didn’t expect they really were!”

“No wonder Mr. Cruise attended every award ceremony, it turned out he was accompanying his wife.”

Chapter 97. Giving Him a Title

“Didn’t anyone find the sudden withdrawal of the news about Mr. Clement’s affair surprising?”

“Did Mr. Clement think people in the entertainment industry were easy to bully? They were much cleaner than you!”

“The practices of the Clement Group were really despicable, Mr. Cruise was angry and defended his wife, confronting you directly!”

“The two scandals before and after, both involved the chairman, there’s simply no comparison!”

“Mrs. Clement’s rise to power was also quite fascinating, it seems like she and Mr. Clement are two peas in a pod!”

The smoke had openly ignited between the Clement Group and the Cruise Group.

However, the behavior of the Clement family was despicable, and everyone scolded them until the comment section was shut down.

the Clement Group.

The office was dead silent.

Kamden’s face was ashen and ugly, Ava was just done venting her anger.

“Is this how you handle things? We spent so much money acquiring your company, and yet before Eagle Entertainment even made a move, you’ve already backed down. What use are you to us?”

“Go and find a way to take down the news right now, I don’t want to see a single piece of information about this scandal anymore!”

Chapter 27: Giving Him & Tile

Everyone below was hanging their heads in silence.

The people from the PR Department remained silent, let alone the director of the newly acquired Starry Entertainment.

Their faces turned ashen, they didn't even dare to utter a word.

The company's PR Department couldn't help but speak up:

"Mr. Clement's female secretary was blackmailing us for money. We had already given her three million and she stopped causing trouble. It was the people from Starry Entertainment who insisted on offending Cecilia."

"It's all over now. We've not only offended Eagle Entertainment, but also the Cruise Group. Now, our Clement Group's stock is falling as soon as the market opens..."

The people from Starry Entertainment couldn't help but retort:

"We didn't even know that Cecilia was Brycen's wife. Her identity wasn't even captured by the paparazzi, let alone being able to suppress the matter with Mr. Clement. Surely, a bigger scoop is needed!"

Ava's face contorted with anger, she threw the cup in front of her onto the floor, shattering it into pieces.

"I had already suggested arresting that woman for fraud, yet you still gave her money. Who agreed to this?"

The people in the PR Department looked at each other, then glanced down at Kamden.

Kamden's face was gloomy.

All the women outside were just for fun to him, and once he had enough, he would dismiss them with money.

Chapter 97: Giving Him a Title

This one was the most audacious, even daring to threaten him.

And the situation was out of control...

“Enough, do you want to make it even uglier?”

Kamden scoffed, and Ava reluctantly turned her head away, enduring in silence.

In the end, it was all trouble he had caused.

The always silent Pierce seemed completely detached from everything.

Even if the scandal over his head involved his own family, he still remained calm and composed.

The person from the PR Department glanced at Pierce, whispering:

“Mr. Clement, why don’t we take the initiative to apologize to the Cruise family? Reconciliation is much better than a stalemate!”

Pierce’s eyes were pitch black, revealing nothing of what he was thinking.

Kamden nodded, “I guess that’s the only way. It would be best to have them cooperate in deleting their explanations, and have your mom go with you.”

Ava abruptly stood up:

“I didn’t go, wasn’t that embarrassing enough?”

Cecilia was a lousy actress, but the man she married was no worse than herself. Moreover, she was successful in both her career and love life. No wonder she dared to ignore me when she was chatting with Sophia in the parking lot before.

Chapter 99: Saying One Thing and Meaning Another

They were rarely intimate, but their communication at night was exceptionally harmonious.

Pierce's pupils were pitch black, reflecting her delicate face in his eyes, as if a clear lake was rippling with the deepest secrets.

The palm of my hand was empty.

Sophia snapped back to reality, glaring at him with some annoyance, unwilling to show weakness, she hooked up the corner of her lips in defiance:

"Generally speaking, it's all lies, utterly terrible."

She said, and then walked right past him.

Pierce's face darkened, anyone would be upset to hear such a comment.

Reflecting on their few encounters, her performance should have been considered satisfactory.

Watching her retreating figure, he gritted his teeth in silence:

"Words were not matching the heart."

Sophia walked over, and Mike, observing his niece's expression, immediately made room:

"Come on, you take a turn."

Sophia laughed, "I'm not good at it."

Others laughed and chimed in, "Don't be shy, Ms. Cruise, it's just a game. How about this, for every goal you score, we'll put in a million. How does that sound?"

0.00%

<

23:30

Everyone found it interesting: "Alright!"

They had just witnessed Sophia's ball skills a moment ago, which were really not impressive.

So that's why they started this gamble so generously.

Anyway, I couldn't invest much money.

Sophia blinked, watching them:

“Really?”

“Of course, Mr. Clement was there too. Did Mr. Clement agree?”

One of them called out to Pierce, who was standing not far away.

Pierce hooked the corner of his lip:

“I bet five million on scoring a goal.”

He just had to be different from others!

Mike clapped his hands and exclaimed excitedly:

“Alright, it’s settled then, Ms. Cruise. Whether we can attract investment this time is all up to you!”

Sophia, seemingly under great pressure, walked to the middle.

She played ball like a weakling, everyone was waiting to laugh at her.

The first hole was a par three.

She lowered her head, aimed the pole at the hole on the green, swung,

13.20%

23:30

Chapter 99: Saying One Thing and Meaning Another

but didn’t make it in.

Everyone couldn’t help but laugh.

“Consider it as a practice, the next shot officially starts.”

Even Pierce couldn’t help but curve the corners of his eyes.

But the next second.

The second ball steadily passed Pierce and went into the hole of the green.

Everyone fell silent for a moment, then began to applaud her again.

“Ms. Cruise is not bad, she has improved!”

Mike counted the number of people on the side, adding Pierce’s five million, and spoke loudly:

“Twelve million!”

Sophia raised her third stick with a smile, and unsurprisingly, she scored again.

“Twenty–four million!”

“Thirty–six million!”

People could hardly laugh anymore, even the applause was sparse. They looked at Sophia in confusion.

The second round was a par–four hole.

The difficulty increased, the distance became further.

Pierce stood by, squinting his eyes.

Chapter Saying One Thing and Meanin

Sophia, as usual, performed poorly on her first shot, and everyone secretly breathed a sigh of relief.

But the second shot also went in.

From the third pole to the tenth pole, there were even fewer mistakes.

Everyone completely lost their ability to laugh.

The difficulty of the five–pole hole in the third round was the greatest.

Sophia breezed in four times.

Mike was laughing so hard that he was almost in stitches on the side.

Felt for the first time that attracting investment was so easy!

Everyone present had noticed that Sophia was deliberately hiding her abilities.

However, she would make a mistake in every game, as a face–saving gesture for everyone else. Otherwise, the deception would be too great.

Just one more ball was left, someone next to me started laughing and said:

“Ms. Cruise, it’s the last ball, hold steady!”

Pierce paused, “Don’t worry, I’ll go get the ball for you.”

It was no small feat for Sophia to have Pierce stoop to pick up the ball.

Even if everyone wanted to back out, it was impossible.

After all, Pierce was the one who got the most money.

He stood on the green, standing tall and upright, a soft glow enveloping him, as if he were coated in a layer of gold.

36.98%

Chapter 99, Saying One Thing and Meaning Another

When he bent down to pick up the ball.

Sophia swung the rod in a daze, suddenly lost her grip, and the ball shot straight towards Pierce’s wrist.

Everyone gasped in surprise.

“Mr. Clement.....”

She watched as Pierce’s face suddenly changed color, he was holding back, gripping his own wrist, and cold sweat had broken out on his forehead.

However, after a brief pause, he slowly straightened up again and walked towards them

.

Everyone slowly breathed a sigh of relief.

Mike also nervously glanced at Sophia.

“You were too accurate.”

He thought Sophia was airing her personal grievances in public!

Sophia felt a slight sinking in her heart, she was truly wronged. It was a moment of distraction that caused her to lose grip.

How could she possibly “bully” Pierce in public?

Pierce walked over, casting a casual glance at Sophia. With an air of nonchalance, he placed the ball on the ground with his other hand, his voice rich and resonant:

“Let’s make up for a goal, the previous one didn’t count.”

Sophia’s complexion changed slightly, she looked up at him, her heart felt as if it had been squeezed, very uncomfortable.

23:30

Chapter 99 Saying One Thing and Meaning Another

“How was your wrist?”

Others also followed up with inquiries:

“Yeah, Ms. Cruise’s aim is really good, is your wrist okay?”

“Mr. Clement, perhaps we should go to the hospital?”

“Yeah, yeah, let’s go take a look first!”

Pierce looked deeply into Sophia’s eyes, “Shall we finish the last ball before we go?”

It seemed as if he would keep waiting if she didn’t take that last shot.

Sophia lowered her eyes slightly, feeling suddenly flustered inside. Her swing was off, and she missed.

After a few jokes were shared among the crowd, Mike urged Pierce to go to the hospital.

Pierce watched as she didn’t come in, and somehow, his mood suddenly improved.

She was worrying about herself, so worried that she couldn’t even score a goal.

“Would Ms. Cruise accompany me?”

Sophia paused, “I go?”

“If you didn’t go, who would pay for the medical bills?”

A single sentence from Pierce left Sophia speechless, without even a reason to refuse.

She injured someone, so naturally, she should pay for the medical expenses.

23.30 D

Mike squinted his eyes and took the golf club from Sophia's hand with a smile.

"Go on, Ms. Cruise, make sure Mr. Clement is alright before you come back. I'll stay here to prepare the investment contract!"

Otherwise, wouldn't today have been wasted?

The medical conditions of the club were ultimately not as comprehensive as private hospitals.

Moreover, given Pierce's status, not just anyone could treat him.

Two people got on the shuttle bus and arrived at the entrance. The person in charge kept apologizing, saying that their preparations were not adequate and asked Pierce not to take it to heart.

Sophia felt somewhat guilty as she listened on the side.

Her responsibility had nothing to do with the club, yet it was the club that ended up apologizing.

At the door, the club's people escorted me to the car.

Pierce finally gave Sophia a smile, before he spoke lightly:

"It's okay, Ms. Cruise didn't do it on purpose. It's enough that she accompanied me to the hospital. I won't hold her responsible."

The club manager breathed a sigh of relief, looking at Sophia:

"Ms. Cruise, please, take good care of Mr. Clement for us," they pleaded.

Sophia tugged at the corner of her mouth with a forced smile:

79.39%

#23300

Chapter 99. Saying One Thing and Meaning Another

"Should have."

This moral kidnapping was really sophisticated!

On the bus.

Pierce held his injured right wrist with his left hand, leaning back slightly with his eyes closed, not saying a word.

The car was very quiet, and Sophia couldn't help but glance at his wrist several times.

Perhaps Pierce had noticed, he opened his eyes, his dark pupils capturing her gaze.

He extended his right hand...

Chapter 100 You Were Lying

Chapter 100: You Were Lying

Sophia looked up, locking eyes with him.

Pierce hesitated slightly, "Didn't you want to see it?"

Sophia glanced, the wrist had already swollen, the bruise was particularly noticeable.

"Whoever wants to watch, I was afraid you'd cling to me!"

Pierce tugged at the corner of his mouth, "I was just thinking the same,"

Sophia looked at him speechlessly.

Pierce slowly lowered his hand, smiling as he looked at her:

"Sophia, admit it, you cared about me, cared about me deeply."

"You were clearly so good at playing ball, but you still fumbled the last one. It was because you were nervous, wasn't it?"

His words were like stones, thrown into the calm lake, causing ripples to spread out.

Her delicate brows and eyes trembled slightly, but when she looked up,

she still maintained a cold and indifferent demeanor.

"Pierce, you're overthinking it," I said. "My slip-up wasn't due to nervousness, it was intentional. Fifteen pool cues for 180 million, the investment is enough."

Pierce squinted his eyes, his mood sinking as he scrutinized her emotions while she spoke.

0.00%

23:30

* Trad

In the end, he chuckled confidently:

“I didn’t believe it, you were lying. ”

Sophia turned her head away in silence, not wanting to talk to him anymore.

How had she not noticed before that Pierce had a talent for infuriating people?

Pierce’s Adam’s apple bobbed, feeling that she was thin-skinned and too embarrassed to admit it.

He then shifted the topic:

“David has been having troubles recently, was it your good sister who caused them?”

Sophia paused, blinking her eyes:

“It was Mr. Fredrick’s own problem, what did it have to do with Sandra?”

David, who had previously harassed Sophia at the club and hit Sandra, found everything going wrong after he returned home.

The projects he contracted had continuous quality issues, the houses he sold were also demanded for refunds, and most crucially, not a single penny of the originally planned subsequent project funds had been received.

In fact, Sandra did quite a lot of work in it, and Sophia also had Kylan secretly fuel the flames.

She couldn’t possibly stand by and watch Sandra being bullied without doing anything, let alone the fact that she was also involved!

13.38%

Chapter 100. You Were Lying.

Pierce cast a glance at her, hesitating before he spoke:

“I didn’t even know before, your friend had such great abilities!”

Sophia tugged at the corner of her lips:

“You mean to say, you didn’t expect someone like me to have a wealthy and influential friend like Sandra, right?”

Pierce's brows furrowed:

"I didn't say that."

Sophia

chuckled lightly, but that was exactly what he thought, a man who said one thing and meant another!

The people around him all felt that they were not good enough for him. If he didn't think so, would he have neglected her for three years?

She spoke in a strange and ambiguous tone:

"It's okay if you think that way. It's probably because Sandra saw my intelligent, beautiful, and generous nature, which is different from you sallow mortals!"

Pierce twitched the corner of his mouth, finally unable to hold back a laugh:

"Did you blame me for not paying enough attention to you?"

Sophia curled up the corners of her mouth, unable to resist rolling her eyes:

"Couldn't you understand human language?"

Pierce:

"1

The driver ahead was trembling with fear, not daring to utter a single

27.10%

O

<

-23:30

Chapter 100; You Were Lying word.

The atmosphere inside the car fell silent.

The journey was extremely silent.

Pierce wanted to find a topic to ease the atmosphere, but he was not that kind of person, so in the end, he could only stare at her.

Sophia turned her face to look out the car window, treating herself as an outsider!

Just bear with it and it will pass!

Arrived at the hospital.

The nurses couldn't take their eyes off the handsome and bright-eyed Pierce. They all surrounded him, as if his swollen wrist was a terminal illness!

Pierce was surrounded in the center, visibly becoming agitated, his face also darkening.

He stood up, sweeping his gaze across the room, and saw Sophia standing outside the crowd, casually playing with her phone.

Suddenly, his brows and eyes became gloomy.

The surrounding nurses asked him where he felt uncomfortable and attentively poured water for him.

He stood there, tall and imposing, with a cold and intimidating aura. His voice was indifferent as he began to speak:

“Could you please go out and call my wife in?”

As soon as these words were spoken.

40 84%

J

23:31

Chapter 13: You Were Lyng

The surroundings fell silent in an instant.

The visible disappointment fell on the young nurse's face as she involuntarily looked towards the woman outside, who had a cold demeanor and striking features.

Indeed, they seemed well-matched, the kind of evenly matched that was.

They left one by one, looking at Sophia, their tones less warm than before:

“Your husband let you in.”

Sophia raised her head in confusion,

Husband?

What a nightmare it was.

Was Pierce hit on the wrist or the head after all?

She felt a bit of resentment in her chest, holding her phone as she walked in:

“Pierce, who was my husband?”

Pierce gave her a half-smiling glance, his tone softening:

“What do you say?”

“I hope you understand the need for propriety. You may not care, but I still have to get married in the future!”

As soon as Sophia spoke, the smile on Pierce’s face froze.

Marry someone?

<

Chapter 100. You Were Lying

Who else could I have married, if not him?

This woman was constantly making him angry!

But it’s okay, he could forgive her!

“My hand was injured, and you left me here alone?”

Pierce lifted his swollen wrist, pressing his lips together as he asked her.

Sophia spoke softly:

“You did have legs, didn’t you?”

No sooner had she finished speaking than the dean rushed in with several experts from different fields.

“Ms. Cruise, Mr. Clement.”

Pierce saw the dean pause, then he looked at Sophia with a meaningful gaze.

Look, secretly contacted the dean for him, and still said you didn't care about him?

The dean coughed once, steadying his breath before he began to speak:

“The nurse said, ‘When I saw you coming, I thought I was mistaken. Mr. Clement, where do you feel unwell?’”

Pierce also had shares in this private hospital, so to speak, he was the big boss behind the scenes.

The smile at the corner of Pierce's mouth gradually faded, he looked deeply at Sophia, seemingly a bit angry.

The dean looked at his expression, gave him a once-over, noticed

64.80%

III

Chapter 100. You Were Lying something was off about the wrist he had placed at his side, and immediately had someone step forward:

“Dr. Zhang, quickly look at Mr. Clement's hand. Who on earth had the guts to do this? This is too severe!”

Several doctors immediately stepped forward.

Sophia was pushed to the back again. Just as she was about to continue replying to messages on her phone, she heard Pierce's deep voice begin to speak:

“Ms. Cruise took a taxi!”

The dean was instantly silenced, his mouth twitching at the corners, not knowing what to say.

Sophia put away her phone, walked over, her expression indifferent:

“How was his condition, was it serious?”

After. Dr. Zhang finished the examination, his face was somewhat serious:

“It was quite serious. It appeared to be a tendon injury with congestion from bruising. If it triggered inflammation, it would be severe. If the bone was fractured, it would be even worse.”

“Mr. Clement, did your arm feel numb?”

Pierce nodded slightly.

Dr. Zhang’s expression was somewhat grave:

“It was likely that the bone was injured, requiring hospitalization for treatment.”

77.73%

|||

23:31