Chapter 22

“What's wrong, Olivia?”

Sophie asked, still concerned.

Olivia only responded after a while, stammering, “I-I’m okay.” She added, “I’d like to rest. Go ahead with your thing-

Sophie did have something to attend to, so she couldn't stay long in the dormitory. She said, “Okay, I'll go ahead. Call me if there’s anything at all.”

After making sure Olivia was okay, Sophie left.novelbin

Once Sophie was gone, Olivia had mixed feelings.

‘Am I pregnant?’ she kept asking herself, gripping her collar tighter as she felt her heart racing. It was the first time she had felt so scared.

Tyler didn’t immediately leave after dropping her off at school. Instead, he sat in the car for almost half an hour before driving away.

The next day, Olivia was in a daze. She couldn’t muster the courage to go to the hospital after all. She couldn’t even concentrate on what the lecturer was saying in class.

At lunchtime, even Sophie noticed that something was wrong with her. She asked with concern, “Are you really okay, Olivia? You're very pale.”

Since yesterday, not only had she looked pale, but she also hadn’t been eating much. Olivia shook her head in response to Sophie's question. “I’m really alright.” She tried to force herself to eat more, but Sophie continued to watch her with concern.

When she was resting in the dormitory at noon, she contemplated texting Tyler to tell him that she might be pregnant. However, after picking up her phone multiple times, she put it down without sending the message.

On the third day, she went to the canteen with Sophie. However, she felt lizzy along the the dizziness faded, she lost consciousness and passed out.

way. Before She only heard Sophie saying, "Olivia-" before darkness filled her vision, losing consciousness.

Tyler was in the middle of a meeting when he received a phone call. He told the person on the other end, "Hmm, okay. I'll be there right away."

He immediately got up from the table, leaving the puzzled managers behind without explanation. He turned to his secretary and said, "This meeting is adjourned."

Rushing to Olivia's school, he went straight into the clinic. Sophia was with Olivia, talking to her. Sophia quickly lifted her head when she heard the commotion at the door. "Mr. Tyler!"

Olivia had just regained consciousness. She didn't know whom Sophia had called when she passed out. However, when she heard Sophia call Tyler's name, she looked up and was stunned when she saw him standing there.

Tyler stood there in his suit, silently gazing at Olivia's sickly face on the bed before walking in.

Sophia got up from the bed and greeted him again, "Mr. Tyler."

In reality, she was nervous to see him coming in. She didn't know whom to call when Olivia passed out, but she recalled their relationship and decided to call her father, asking him to pass the message to Tyler.

Tyler thanked Sophia as he approached the bed. "Thank you for taking care of her."

She quickly waved it off. "It's okay, Mr. Tyler. She vomited, and the doctor gave her a drip."

His expression turned cold when he heard the word “vomit.” Olivia looked away, gripping the bed.

“Alright, thank you. I'll take her to the hospital. You should go to class,” Tyler said to Sophia. Sophia thought it was best to leave, so she nodded and followed his suggestion, leaving the clinic.
