Chapter 58 Lying In A Pool Of Blood

"You just aren't smart enough. Why would you be careless to let her see my name on your phone, huh?" Donna rebuked Coleen angrily.

"Stop this, Donna." He spoke back harshly, afterall, he was even senior in rank to Donna. He was a general while Donna was a sergeant major so what gave her the gut to speak to her this way. "You were in the hospital so the last thing I expected was your call."

Donna grunted angrily. They were both standing behind Donna's previous residence. Donna felt at a loss. It's like all she had been doing weren't yielding any result.

"Coleen, I need you be very smart. You must go to her and win her back to yourself," Donna said.

"So you can set her up again, huh?" He asked. "I won't be a tool for your evil plot anymore. I'm no longer interested in the deal, you can keep your money."

"Don't even dare to pull back, Coleen," Donna said harshly.

Coleen walked closer to her and asked, "and what will you do? Always remember I'm your senior in the military."

Donna smirked, "I'm dangerous, Coleen."

"Fuck you. You are just a wicked woman." Coleen said and walked angrily away from her.

Donna folded her fist in anger, "how dare this uncultured brat!" She mumbled. Her phone rang and seeing that the caller ID was Wendi, she looked around to be sure that no one was nerarby. The house she was standing behind had no one living there but she just want to be sure that no one was around.

She answered the call and greeted, "hey Wendi, how are you now?"

"Still healing. You did a nice work by taking down their amunition building. Did you know if Derrick has a plan of bringing in another sets of amunition?"

"I have no idea, yet and even if I do, I won't get it burnt again. I might be implicated this time," Donna said.

"Donna, you don't have a choice but to do what we want. Remember you are one of us. You will remain our real spy there while we will keep sending fake smiles so that your god of war would never suspect that you are the actual person giving us information," Wendi said.

She added, "If not for you, my brother wouldn't have been slaughtered to death. I already told you that if you want my forgiveness, you must do all I want."

"Wendi, I didn't know your brother and the other two men were going to be caught." She said.

"Get me every possible information about their new amunitions, I literally want to watch Western Ocean City get destroyed and colonized by us. I want Derrick to serve as my dog. I have already swear with my life that I won't rest until this happen. And you, Donna must help me to accomplish my goal," she said.

Donna was speechless, Wendi knew her deepest secretes, she dared not to disobey hee. She would not mind doing anything that will hurt Katherine and her kids but she didn't want to do anything that will hurt Derrick. She served in the military for seven years just to get closer to him and win his heart and that she will accomplish.

"Donna, are we still on terms?" Wendi asked after seeing that she wasn't saying a word.

"Yes," she answered and the call came to an end.

Donna sighed and walked away from the scene.

Derrick had used his own personal money to buy new amunitions, the amunitions were brought inside the building precisely two weeks after the old one got burnt. The amunitions that were brought in were even heavier and better than the previous ones.

Donna stood by a corner watching them carry the amunitions from the trailers that had brought it inside the base. She took pictures and videos and sent them to Wendi.

At once, Wendi's call came through and she answered. She immediately spoke, "Wendi, I won't be able to do this, sorry."

"The war is just sixteen days to commence, you have seventy two hours to get it burnt or I will be forced to expose all your secrete to Derrick," Wendi said and hung the call.

Donna's heart shivered. Gosh! She had barely escape the first move to burn down the amunitions, if she does this now, won't she be caught. She was certain that Derrick would put in more effort to keep that place protected.

"I have to do what must be done," she said to herself determinedly.

When Coleen went home that night to check on him mom, Nanny Tammy. He was stunned that she wasn't inside.

"Mama..." She screamed her name repeatedly but got no response. He began to search the house aggressively but still couldn't find her. His heart began to palpitate. Where would she go? She couldn't even walk? Did someone come in here and take her away?

Ha? Could it be those couple who came here some days ago? He thought to himself. While he was thinking of how to find those couples, his phone began to ring. Seeing that the caller ID was Donna, he angrily hung the call up. He doesn't want to have anything to do with Donna anymore.

But then, a message came to his phone and on checking, he saw that it was Donna that had messaged him, saying, "I'm behind it. See me behind the forth Quaters."

Coleen got the meaning of the message at once. Donna was the one who took his mom? Coleen immediately drove back to the military base and went straight to the exact location that Donna had told her to meet with her.

But when he got there, he didn't see anyone. After three minutes, he lost his patient and wanted to call her but she suddenly sighted her appear.

He waited until she got closer to her then he suddenly grabbed her neck, "how dare you take my sick mom? Where did you keep her?" Before she could reply, he sent her a kick in the stomach.

Donna groaned in pain.

"Where is she?" He screamed at her.

"Even if you kill me, I won't tell you where she is," Donna said.

Charles knocked her to the floor and kicked her hard in the side of her face. Her teeth shivered as if they would all removed. Pain surged through her mouth and she spat out blood.

Coleen was so angry that if he continued dealing with her, he might kill her. But killing her won't let him find his mom so he sighed and took steps back. Trying hard to control his anger.

Donna stood from the ground, her stomach and nose still hurting her. She heaved a heavy sigh of relief and said, "you have just demonstrated to me that your mother means so much to you."

Coleen just shot her a murderous look, "there is this final task I need you to do for me and I promise that after that, we would not have anything to do with eachother again." Donna said.

"I told you I'm not interested in any fucking deal with you again." He shouted.

"I'm not giving you a choice, Coleen. If you must see your mom again, then you must do these last thing for me," Donna said.

Wendi didn't give her a choice so why should she give Coleen a choice.

"What did you want?" He asked.

"I need you to get closer to Katherine again, all I need you to do is to persuade her to take you along to the grandwar longue. You already know the nine Grandwar kings are throwing up a party for her tomorrow night to celebrate her promotion." Donna said.

"And you think she will agree to take me along? She literally doesn't want to see me again," Coleen said.

"There is nothing too difficult to solve. Coleen, I know you can do this." She said.

"And what will I do after getting her to the lounge?" Coleen asked.

"Don't worry about that. All you need to do is to attend," Donna said.

Coleen gritted his teeth in anger, he hated the fact that he doesn't have a choice, "if you don't let go of my mom after this. I'll kill you then go ahead and find my mom. I swear with my life that I won't make you force me to do anything against my will anymore after this."

Coleen then said and walked away angrily.

Katherine had just woken from a long sleep when she heard her phone ringing. She picked up the phone and seeing that it was Coleen that was calling, she hung the call up. But before she dropped the phone, she realized that he had already called her number eleven times before now.

Why would he call her this number of time? Is something wrong? Just when she was thinking of whether to call him, Coleen's call came through again, she answered it this time out of curiosity.

"Katherine, please save me... Please!"

Katherine could hear him pant in fear on the phone, he also seemed to be speaking quietly as if he was whispering and trying to avoid other people from hearing.

"Where are you?" She asked.

"At my mom's house. Number 2, Water avenue street..."

She suddenly heard some rough sounds, as if someone snatched the phone from him. The call even came to an end at once.

Katherine jumped off her bed and changed into her military uniform then walked out, she selected about fifteen soldiers to go with her. Took about twenty minutes before they arrived at the street. As they aporoached the house, Katherine saw some men flying out of the house, climbing their powerbike and running away.

"General, should we chase after these men?" One of the officers asked through the internal telephone.

"No, it may be an attempt to scatter us. Let's see why they are running firstly," she answered.

Soon, they parked their cars before the house. She stepped down alongside other officers.

She selected three of the soldiers to go in there to see what's going on. Coleen was working with Donna so she has to be very careful.

Three soldiers walked in quickly but came back a few minutes later, "General... General Coleen is lying helpless inside the room, covered with blood."

Katherine forgot that she was keeping grudges with Coleen and ran inside the house. She was stunned to see him lying in a pool of blood.
