

Chapter 65 Alessio Is Captured

Christopher collected it and on opening the result, he was a little surprised at the test result. The probability of him being the kid's father was zero.

Whereas, It was stated in Derrick's test result that he had a ninety percent probability of being the kid's father.

Thought Donna had promised to settle everything. He shot the doctor a questioning look and then looked at the result in Derrick's hand. Seeing that it was confirmed in the result that he was the kid's father, he nodded and walked away.

Derrick, Katherine and the kids then walked over to their car and began to drive home. "Marshall, thank you so much."

Derrick only nodded. Derrick had told Alessio to secretly trail after them. While they were all waiting at the special room for the visitor, Alessio had disguised himself as a doctor and walked into the laboratory, he didn't even allow the doctor to perform any test, he just told him what to write in the test result so literally, no test was performed.

When Christopher arrived at the building he was lodging, his dissapointment was still high up in the sky. He placed a call directly to Donna and once she answered, he told her all that happened at the hospital.

"Marshall, I paid the doctor well and he promised to..."

"They are more prepared and way smarter than you. See me in my house by night. Ensure that nobody sees you when coming ."
Christopher said and hung the call up.

Whereas, When Katherine got home, she quickly went to Samantha's room and gisted her.

"That's so kind of the General, at least, General Christopher would not bother you about the kids anymore," she said.

"Yes and I'm so happy about that. Though I wish he can leave back to his city already, I don't really want him around. I just don't feel good about his presence here," Katherine said.

"The kids are the only thing that could bind the two of you together but now, the kids are out of the option so even if he's here for as long as he wants, the both of you have nothing in common," Samantha said.

"True," Katherine said and stood, "I feel relaxed now, let me eat."

"Sure," Samantha watched as she walked away.

After Katherine had eaten, she went over to work. When it was 1PM, she was tired as she had been attending to the soldiers at their various wards. She then walked over to the the bedroom attached to her office. The room was designed for her to rest whenever she's tired. Just when she lied on the bed, Samantha's call came through.

She answered the call tiredly and Samantha's voice came through, "Katherine, I just received a message that now General Christopher injured himself during this morning training, he said he would be needing you to come to treat him at his house."

"What!" Samantha exclaimed in surprise. "He definitely injured himself on purpose, that I'm sure of?"

"My guess as well but you can't deny his request, can you?" Samantha asked.

"Of course, I can't. I'll go," Katherine said.

"Okay, be careful," Samantha said and hung the call up.

Christopher could have called her directly that he got injured and that he needed her to come and treat him but he was intentionally making it official so she wouldn't be able to say no. But Katherine was so tired and exhausted.

Nonetheless, she stood and went to drink a cup of water then walked out. She soon got inside a car and drove over to Christopher's lodge.

As soon as stepped down, her phone rang. Seeing that the caller ID was Derrick, she answered and saluted, "Marshall."

"Do you want me to escort you to attend to Christopher?" Derrick's voice came through.

Katherine was stunned at his offer, she quickly answered, "I'll be honored, Marshall."

"Wait for me." He said and hung up.

Katherine immediately became happy. She had been worried about how it would look like being alone with Christopher. But now that Derrick would be with her, she would he more confident plus she can't wait to see the expression on his face.

While Katherine was waiting, Kimberly walked up to her, "General Katherine, please come with me."

"I'm not ready."

"Why? You are here already. We should head inside to treat General Christopher as soon as possible. He's badly injured."
Kimberly said.

"Give me some time," Katherine insisted. Kimberly couldn't understand why Katherine was asking for some time before she entered. She tried to persuade her severally but she insisted.

Kimberly was already frustrated and didn't know what else to say to make Katherine come in with her. All of a sudden, she sighted someone appear behind Katherine.

Katherine turned on seeing the expression on Kimberly's face. Katherine saluted Derrick, Kimberly also did the same.

"Let's go," Derrick said and they both walked inside the building. Kimberly was shocked to see Derrick following Katherine inside. When Kimberly lead them to the entrance, she took steps back.

Katherine knocked and the door opened automatically. Christopher's jaw dropped when he saw Derrick with Katherine.

He gritted his teeth in anger and spoke, "why are you here, Derrick?"

"Escorting my wife to another man's house," Derrick answered. "If you had come to the medical building, I wouldn't have need to escort her to you but it's not so safe for her to be alone with another man."

Christopher smirked, he had decorated his leg to make it look like it was injured.

"I'll be more comfortable if Katherine is here alone to treat me," Christopher said.

"I won't leave here until she's done," Derrick insisted.

"General Christopher, you don't have to worry about Marshall. He just wants to ensure I'm safe. I'll make sure your leg is fine before I leave." Katherine said.

"Well, in that case, I won't be needing your help again. Christopher said.

"But your leg is injured, you need me to..."

"Any medical officer can easily treat his leg. It's not a must it's you. He already said he didn't need you anymore, let's respect his wish and leave," Derrick said and turned.

Katherine also turned, as they both walked away, Christopher smirked and mumbled, "slow and steady wins the race." As soon as Derrick and Katherine were out of his sight, he called Kimberly over, "why is the first plan taking time?"

"General, we have to be meticulous if we must implement plan A." Kimberly said and added, "but he's going down today."
Kimberly said.

Christopher nodded, he doubted greatly if the first plan will work but he has other plans in place. After he had dismissed Kimberly, he went to his room and brought out Joe's picture. Joe was Wendi's brother.

"Joe, don't worry, I'm here now. I'll help you revenge and bring ruin to this city," he said and kept the picture back in his safe.

Derrick drove Katherine to the compound of the supreme house and told her to go and rest since her face look tired. Although it wasn't the official closing period yet, he still gave her the permission to go and rest.

Derrick then got inside his car and began to drive over to the mountain where he do meditate and spend time by himself.

He parked beside the mountain and just as he stepped down from the car, several sharp knives lunged towards him. One strucked him by his right chest while he was quick to guide the others by rushing back inside the car.

Blood immediately began to spill from his chest, he held the knife that strucked his chest and pulled it out forcefully forcing more blood to gush out of his chest.

Several knives kept breaking the windshield, he wasn't prepared for these at all. He knew for sure that the person who ochestrated this attack was Christopher.

He had to bend inside the car as the windows of the car had already been broken, if he raises his head up, the knife would definitely hit him in the head. He was able to place a call across to Alessio and he answered, "Alessio, I'm under attack by the mountain."

"I'll be there soon, Marshall." He said and hung up at once.

After the knives being lunged had subsided, he suddenly saw someone pouring a liquid substance on the car, with the smell, he knew this was a petrol. They were about to burn him inside the car. He jumped out of the car at once and saw over one hundred men surrounding him. They were all holding sharp swords.

Apparently, they didn't use gun cause that would attract the attention of many people in the base.

He moved away from the car just in case they lighted it.

"If you kill me, Christopher is going down as well," Derrick said.

A car suddenly drove over, Derrick almost think that the person was Alessio but to his surprise, the person who stepped down was Kimberly, Christopher's assistant.

Kimberly went to the booth of his car and opened it, he ordered for two of his men to come and attend to what was inside his booth. To Derrick's surprise, Alessio was brought out. He had been gagged in the mouth, chained in the hands and chained in the leg. Then he was shoved to where Derrick was standing.

