

Without realising it, night had come, Flower Restaurant had just officially opened. The seafood menu was quite popular with visitors. Moreover, they were holding a buy 2 get 1 free promo.

Everyone was busy with their own work. Jean and Soo Yin work as waiters, helping others. Meanwhile, Dae Hyun and Kim Ji Won were the chefs in charge of preparing the dishes.

For Chang Yuan, he served as the restaurant manager as ordered by Dae Hyun.

The kitchen was deliberately located in front so that visitors can freely see the chefs who were preparing dishes.

Soo Yin continued to purse her lips as the female visitors watched her husband while whispering and laughing at the sight of his burly muscles. Soo Yin really wanted to gouge out their eyes.

Dae Hyun's very friendly attitude to the visitors made them not hesitate and asked for photos.

"You're jealous," Jean teased Soo Yin, who had been looking at the kitchen where Dae Hyun kept being teased by the teenage girls.

"No," said Soo Yin quickly.

"If you're not jealous, hurry up and take all the dirty dishes to the back," said Jean, smiling. It was funny to see the look on Soo Yin's face that looked very annoyed and the look in her eyes that showed anger.

"It's like they've never seen a handsome man," Soo Yin grumbled as she piled the plates roughly.

"It seems so. They have never seen a handsome man in front of the stove," said Jean, glancing at her best friend's face.

"Waiter!" called one who had just entered the restaurant, seemed to be ordering something to Jean.

"Soo Yin, hurry up and take everything to the kitchen. Before it gets crowded," said Jean.

Although there were several waiters but the situation was indeed busy so they were busy with their respective jobs. Chang Yuan even had to step in to help them serve the visitors.

Soo Yin immediately walked towards the dishwasher by stomping her feet hard enough on the floor. Even some of the visitors looked strangely at Soo Yin.

"Miss, what is wrong with you?" said Aunt Xia who was helping other workers wash the dishes even though Soo Yin had told her not to.

"Nothing, Auntie. I'm just annoyed with the women who keep looking at Dae Hyun without blinking," said Soo Yin with a sullen face. Then put the plates into the sink with a fairly loud clanking sound.

"Let aunt do the work, Miss should just rest," said aunt Xia with a warm smile. Didn't want the innocent dishes to fall victim to Soo Yin's vexation.

"I'm not tired, Auntie. I'm just annoyed," said Soo Yin breathlessly.

"Miss should sit down first, let aunt make hot tea," said Aunt Xia as she led Soo Yin to sit on a chair at the back of the restaurant.

Although the back was not visible to visitors, Dae Hyun made it as beautiful and neat as possible so that when employees were tired they can sit down to unwind.

Soo Yin sat in a corner near a neatly lined bamboo tree. Breathed in the very fresh night air to calm her mind.

Aunt Xia approached Soo Yin with a tray of hot tea in her hand.

"Drink to relax your mind, Miss," said the middle-aged woman as she sat across from Soo Yin.

"Thank you, Auntie." Soo Yin immediately took a sip of green tea with the scent of jasmine that penetrated her nose and entered her mind.

"Hopefully this restaurant will stay busy forever," Aunt Xia said hopefully. If Dae Hyun's business was successful, she will also feel very happy. That was why Aunt Xia wanted to help out at the opening tonight, which turned out to be very busy.

"We hope so too," said Soo Yin after taking a sip of hot tea which tasted very refreshing.

"Are you tired? If you are tired, you should just go home to rest," Aunt Xia suggested because Soo Yin only smiled at the opening, after that her face was bent.

Soo Yin shook her head. Her body wasn't tired at all. What was really tired was her heart.

"Then why is Miss putting on such a sullen face? Is there a problem?" Aunt Xia asked carefully. Not meant to be curious but Aunt Xia hoped that after Soo Yin told her, her mood would be much better.

"I don't like it when women keep staring at Dae Hyun," said Soo Yin with her head down. To be honest, she was embarrassed to admit all that to Aunt Xia.

Aunt Xia took a deep breath.

"Miss doesn't need to worry and anxious because even though he is seen by a thousand women, in the end it's only you where his feelings will be anchored. It's natural for women to feel amazed by the appearance of Mr. Dae Hyun," explained Aunt Xia to give understanding to the unstable girl in front of her.

"I understand but still ... I can't." Soo Yin covered her face with her palms. Tried to think positively, it was her husband who was being childish, but why now was she the one who got infected.

Was excessive jealousy really contagious?

"Jealousy is very natural. That means Miss really loves Mr. Dae Hyun but if it's too much it's also not good. I'm afraid it will disrupt the harmony of your relationship," suggested Aunt Xia as a person who had lived the sweet and bitter life for a long time.

"Then, how can I not exaggerate it? I also don't want to feel it because it hurts so much for me," said Soo Yin, who had opened her palms from her face.

Soo Yin wanted to go back to being indifferent and let Dae Hyun be close to other people without feeling jealous.

"The point is, Miss must think positively and believe that Mr. Dae Hyun will not leave and cheated on you, Miss," said Aunt Xia. Hopefully, this method will work to make Soo Yin less grumpy.

"Alright, Auntie. I'll try as best I can," Soo Yin said with determination.

"Prove it to the master that the lady can be mature."

Soo Yin nodded her head. Now her heart was relieved after telling Aunt Xia everything.

"Thank you, Auntie. For listening to my complaints," Soo Yin said sincerely.

"My pleasure, Miss. Well, auntie will go inside to help the others," said Aunt Xia.

Soo Yin didn't go in right away. Chose to enjoy the beauty of the stars this night scattered in the sky.

"Okay, I can't be so childish now," Soo Yin muttered as she took a deep breath and let it out of her mouth slowly.
