

Rejected

Chapter 16

Heidi's POV

I can't believe he's doing this. Trevor took a step forward, and I knew without a doubt he was going to snap my neck. I need time to regroup and make a new plan. I can't believe that I was rejected the same day I became Luna. How is that fair?

"Fine, I, Heidi Levin, daughter of Beta Charles Levin, accept your rejection," I answered. Pain exploded inside me. Trevor stumbled back, and I hoped the pain was killing him. He had barely recovered from Melina's rejection. He sat down in his chair, but he didn't seem as hurt as he was when he accepted Melina's rejection.

"Take her to my room, let her get her stuff, only her items. Don't let her take Melina's possessions. Then take her to her father's home to pack. Load their SUV up, and get both keys to her new vehicle from her. I'll call the hospital to ensure they prepare Beta Charles for travel. Drive them to the gates, and make sure that they both reject the pack before leaving," Trevor instructed the warriors.

"I hate you, Trevor. If it's the last thing I do, I'll make you sorry you did this to me and my father. You deserve to die," I told him. How dare he treat us like this? We've done nothing but help him this whole time since our pack was attacked. Yet he turned his back on us.

"She may not be able to walk, but she now has one hour and fty-eight minutes. If they refuse to leave, call for backup. Never mind, on second thought, I will meet you at the gate. I will deal with Beta Charles if he refuses to leave," Trevor said.

He's fg serious. I hoped we could talk our way out of this once we got to the gates, but Trevor is determined to go through with it. Why? That bh is long gone. There's no way she would take him back, not after what happened to her. He never had a chance to tell her he had changed his mind and called them off. Initially, he was going to have her killed. He was angry that she had disrespected him. If she weren't so fast, I would have had her dealt with by now. Having time to calm down allowed Trevor to think rationally. He wasn't as mad at her in the morning, probably because her scent was all over the room.

He had even called me her name out when we had s*x. I hated that, but I had to keep my mouth shut about it. I could tell that he felt guilty about allowing me to spend the night this morning. I told him I wanted to be there to comfort him, but I wanted my scent to be in the room. To know that I had slept with him in their bed this time. Even if she had calmed down and returned, she would have left again once she realized what had happened. It wasn't a slip-up; it was utter disrespect, and I knew it would push her over the edge. They were just supposed to locate her and tell him when they found her. Those were Trevor's last orders. I changed the plan.

The Warriors picked me up from the oor, and they each took an arm to half-drag me to Trevor's room. I knew by that point that the people in the hallway had heard our discussion, and it was running through the pack. I was telling the Omega to pack everything in the closet for me, but she refused.

"I'm your Luna. You have to obey my instructions," I shouted at her.

"Not anymore, you aren't. Remember? You just got rejected," she tossed back at me.

I was hurting pretty badly, and it was hard to stand up straight to get my clothes from the closet. I could tell she was mindlinking before she headed to the closet. She tossed the new clothes and shoes I had bought onto the bed. She left Melina's items in the closet. I knew Trevor was serious about the amount of time I had, so I gritted my teeth and hurriedly loaded my two suitcases. I headed into the closet to retrieve her handbags, as she had some nice ones stored there.

They were high-dollar bags, and I could always sell them for a quick buck in a pinch. I wasn't going to leave them behind. I didn't expect the Omega to slide in front of me and block the door to the closet. "Get out of my way," I ordered.

"Not a chance. The Alpha told me that you were only to get your items. I put all of your items on the bed. Nothing in here belongs to you. You're running out of time. You need to grab your stuff and go to the Beta's house to get him packed up. Since you're still recovering from the rejection, I will help you pack up there as well." She told me with a smile.

"How dare you disrespect me? You can't treat me like this. Even if I'm no longer the Luna, I'm still the Beta's daughter," I ground out in anger. How does she think she is better than me?

"For the next hour," she answered. I saw her smile widen before she said, "This had to be one of the shortest time frames of being a Luna. You might have just set a record or something. Too bad Alpha Trevor was forced into marking you. We all know he didn't want to."

I wanted to punch her, but the warriors edged closer. I do not want to be thrown in the cells. They were disgusting. I had no choice other than to suck it up and play along for the moment. Trevor had made an enemy of me. I wasn't just going to stand back and allow him to disrespect me and my father like this. Not without paying it back to him. He will soon learn what a huge mistake he made when he rejected me. He's going to pay for that mistake with his life.

As we walked to my father's home in silence. I'll let them know what I think of them before the omega goes back to the pack house. One of the warriors put my two suitcases into the back of my father's SUV. The other saw me eyeing my new vehicle, and said, "Hand over your keys." He held his hand out to me, already knowing I had them on me. I had wanted to take it with me, but now I was having to hand it over.

It hurt my heart. Why would I let Trevor recoup any losses on money he willingly spent on me? He was okay with it, and now he's trying to pin everything on me. He was a willing participant. He might not have known the correct story, but he wasn't innocent in this. He still refuses to acknowledge that Melina hates him now. Who knows if he will get a second chance mate?

The omega was on re, moving quickly and instructing the warriors to take out the items in the pile she was making. She had my father's room packed up quickly. It was like she couldn't wait to get us out of here. What's her problem? I hadn't done anything to her. Certainly nothing for her to be treating me this way. She was a whirlwind of activity and was soon done. It was clear that she was happy that both my father and I, were getting kicked out.

"Why the rush? Can't wait to get rid of me?" I said scornfully.

"Yes, I can't wait for you to get out of here. I never believed the rumors circulating. I worked closely with Melina. She was always kind to me. She was not like the lies you spread around. You preyed on people who were angry at our pack being attacked and got them all against her. Only a handful of us knew it was all lies. You allowed your jealous friends to help you. Still, she didn't ght back. You only saw a little sample of her power. She could have killed you day one. She just wanted her mate to ght for her, yet he consistently disappointed her. It turned out as it should. I wouldn't take a mate back after they caused me to lose my pup. She shouldn't either. I know it was you behind it all now. I heard the argument. I'm going to make sure that Melina knows that you were the one behind it. Not to forgive Trevor, but for her to deal with you the next time she sees you. Be careful, Heidi. The Moon Goddess doesn't like it when people mess up her pairings. I hope you receive everything you deserve," the omega told me before spinning on her heel and walking away.

I ran to the door screaming after her, "Melina deserved it. I don't care if you tell her or not. What's she going to do about it? I'm not scared of her."

My chest was heaving with the effort of screaming after a woman who was almost back to the packhouse. Pack members stopped to hear what I said and started whispering about me. The tide had turned. I guess it was best to get the hell out of here. All the mothers present were looking at me with disgust, which they didn't try to conceal. I guess they all knew what I had done. I wouldn't have had to do it if Trevor hadn't wimped out. He was weak, so I had to take over.

"Get in the SUV, we are heading to the hospital," one of the warriors requested. The second one got in the back, and I saw my new car was gone. They took it away while we were packing. My hate for Trevor grew. He won't even know what hit him when I get him back.

My father was at the hospital entrance in a wheelchair. His leg is still in a temporary cast. He looked pissed. I don't know what they told him, but I got out to let him get in the passenger seat. He wasn't going to be able to drive, so I would have to. The ride was silent as the warrior drove us to the gate. I saw Trevor standing there already waiting for us. I was hoping he would change his mind, but he just walked up and said, "I need you to reject Still Waters, and leave. Don't come back, or you'll both be killed."

"I, Charles Levin, Beta of Still Waters, reject my position and my pack," my father replied. Trevor didn't even look at me. He heard me repeat the same and nodded at my father before stepping away from us. The warriors opened the gate, and I climbed into the driver's seat and slowly pulled away. I went slowly, hoping that Trevor would call us back. Instead, he watched me drive away. They had the gate shut before I drove fty feet.

"Heidi, what the hell happened?" my father demanded.

"He found out that I told Dane to kill Melina," I replied.

"You know better than to slip up like that. Everything was going well, what happened?" my father asked.

"He Alpha commanded me. He knows everything, Dad, and he kicked us out of the pack for it," I told him quietly. My father was furious. Trevor is a dead man. Mark my words, we will make sure that he pays for what he did today.
