

She Got A Better Man

Chapter

26

Stacy looked at Elvira threateningly, just like how she used to bully Elvira before. Elvira could only endure it then.

The guests now realized they were cousins. How could a cousin falsely accuse another of stealing publicly? It was an eye- opener.

"It's my bad luck to have you as my cousin. Sir, I don't see it as a joke. She wants to ruin my reputation in front of everyone. Please go with the law, Elvira stated firmly, her eyes determined.

"Elvira!" Stacy glared at Elvira as though she had committed a heinous crime.

"Elvira, we're family. Let's settle this privately. We can't let the police arrest Stacy, Judy spoke for the bigger picture.

Some people thought Judy made sense. Everyone knew not to air dirty laundry in public. Although Elvira was wrongly accused, her actions didn't align with mainstream values.

"Family? When she accused me of stealing just now, did you say that? You wanted me to apologize publicly. If I listened, what would happen? You're a celebrity, aren't you? Do your fans know you've double standards?" Elvira didn't care about her family and exposed Judy's hypocrisy.

The crowd realized Judy had asked for an apology just now without mentioning settling in private. Judy even seemed afraid the apology wasn't sufficient. It was clear she had been stirring things up and pretending now.

Judy's face went red. She wanted to defend herself but Elvira continued, "How many times have I been falsely accused? You and your mother should know. After all, how good do you expect a mistress like her to be? She abuses legitimate children like

1. me.

Tonight's attendees were from the upper echelons of society. Elvira wanted to see how Judy and her mother could handle being exposed like that.

Judy never thought Elvira dared to say that. Her face went pale. She could sense the crowd pointing fingers and looking at her with disgust. She couldn't bear it.

Someone remarked, "Her mother is a mistress? I thought she was a real socialite. Turns out she's only the daughter of a mistress."

Another commented, "She and her mother had been in the circle for many years but nobody knew she was initially a mistress. She must have her ways. No wonder the legitimate children didn't fare well"

A third voice added, "I'm stunned. I even ate lunch with her mother. I'll have to avoid her. It won't do to hang out with them."

Judy almost burst into tears. She hated Elvira to the core. She had upheld an image of a wealthy socialite for years only to be ruined by Elvira. She wished Elvira would just shut up.

"Elvira, that's too much. Your father married Judy's mother after divorcing your mother. Stop misleading everyone." Calvin felt guilty toward Judy and stood up for Judy.

"Calvin, you dumbass. My parents divorced when I was ten. Does she look eleven years younger than me?" Elvira looked at them with disgust.

Elvira was twenty-four and Judy was around her age.

"That's because..." Calvin wanted to continue but Judy covered his mouth and said, "Calvin, my head hurts. Can we leave?"

Judy was scared out of her wits. Explaining would only make things worse. She was terrified that Elvira would tell everyone she stole Calvin from her. Then, Judy would never prove herself innocent. Calvin glared at Elvira and left with Judy.

Elvira didn't plan on exposing Judy today. She would choose a grand opportunity for that. Today was still too small a scene.

As for Calvin, Elvira now realized he was not only scum, he also had no morals. He sided with the mistress. She had been blind to regard Calvin as precious. Luckily, she realized it now.

"Are you shameless, Elvira? How can you treat me and Judy this way? Grandma will skin you alive when she returns," Stacy shouted.

Elvira couldn't be bothered to argue with Stacy. She turned to the police officers. "Please punish her accordingly. If not, she may do worse next time. "Don't worry, Ms. Willis. We will, the police reassured before taking Stacy away.

Stacy was still cursing. The guests shook their heads, remarking on her upbringing. But then, what did they expect of a family who allowed mistresses in? Zach had watched the whole thing and instructed his bodyguards to give Stacy a hard time on the way.

The police car got into an accident. Everyone was fine but Stacy ended up with a bloody face and a few teeth missing. She was too scared to even cry.

With the situation resolved, people began to leave. Elvira approached the organizer. "Thanks for today. Can I meet your boss? I'd like to thank him personally. Although Elvira would eventually erase the shame her family had imposed on her, she was grateful to the organizer.

"You're welcome, Ms. Willis. Our boss said you're our most esteemed guest, and this is what we should do. However, our boss isn't free now, the organizer said politely as he escorted Olivia and Elvira out Olivia went to get the car, but a car stopped before Elvira. Zach got out and opened the door for her.

Elvira was pleasantly surprised. "Why're you here?"

"I happened to pass by on my way home from work, so I came to pick you up." Zach gently rubbed her head. "Get in. It's cold." SEND OFF

She Got A Better Man

Chapter

27

Elvira got into the car and texted Olivia. Zach sensed she was happy and was happy himself.

When Olivia knew Zach picked Elvira up, Olivia was also happy Elvira found a man who cared for her.

"Shall we eat before heading home? Any cravings? Zach asked Elvira.

"I know a place with good seafood. Elvira grinned sweetly.

"Sure. Just put in the address," Zach told her.

Elvira did and Zach drove toward the destination. Elvira's grin was brighter than before. Zach glanced at her before asking, "You seem really happy today. Did something good happen?"

"Yes. I humiliated Judy and Calvin publicly today. It's so satisfying. I have to thank that mysterious bidder. Although I didn't meet him. I'll pray for him," Elvira spoke.

Zach rubbed his nose guiltily. "That's because they're too detestable. They'll get their comeuppance."

"You're right, but I'm still grateful," Elvira insisted.

They went home after eating. Elvira bathed and came out of her room to see Zach was done too. He only had a towel around his hips. Elvira's blushed red. She went to pour herself a glass of water in the kitchen. Zach followed her, intentionally brushing against her while he reached for a glass.

Elvira wanted to move away but thought it would be too deliberate. She gulped down the water.

Zach only wanted to tease her and wasn't really thirsty. He turned her around to him. He held a velvet box. Elvira blinked and asked, "What's this?"

"We're married but I haven't given you a ring yet. I got this for you." Zach took the glass from her hand and placed the box in her palm.

Elvira was surprised. She had forgotten about rings and hadn't expected him to do this. She thought about Tracy's upcoming surgery and said, "Tracy's surgery is tomorrow. Although we've raised enough money, there are still a lot of expenses afterward. Don't spend money unnecessarily anymore."

Elvira opened the box and was stunned. 'Isn't this "Eternity"?' she thought. She finally remembered why the mysterious person felt familiar. He resembled Zach

"You were the one who bought the ring?" Elvira looked at Zach incredulously. But recalling how he didn't have enough money for Tracy's surgery, Elvira slapped her forehead, feeling silly. "I'm dumb. How could you spend 20 million dollars on it? If you had that much, how could we still be short on surgery fees?"

Zach, who was about to tell her the truth, was rendered speechless.

"This is a fake, right? It looks real. Is this one of those trendy moissanite rings?" Elvira put it on. It fitted perfectly.

"Actually, Elvira... Zach was trying to figure out how to explain his identity to her.

Thinking he was embarrassed about buying her a fake diamond ring, Elvira interrupted, "Does it look good? You've good taste. I like this taste. As long as it's from you, I like it"

"As long as you like it. Zach had bought a real diamond ring and thought it suited Elvira

He had just showered and dripping wet. Water ran down his firm muscles. He looked exceptionally sexy. Elvira blushed and turned to leave, but Zach pressed her against the kitchen counter.

His masculine aura surrounded her, making her feel dizzy. Zach was too irresistible. Elvira stammered, T-Tracy is having her surgery tomorrow. Let's rest early.

"Elvira, I want you," Zach whispered. His warm breath made Elvira tingle and go weak. She looked at him in surprise.

"I-I'm not ready yet. Isn't this... too fast?" Elvira stumbled over her words. She couldn't think. Although they were intimate, it was too soon to go all the way, especially since they had only just known each other. Zach bit her earlobe and chuckled. "I'm only teasing. I'll wait until you're ready."

Elvira felt relieved. Then Zach sucked her earlobe and electricity shot through her. Her knees went weak and she fell into his arms.

Zach lifted her onto the kitchen counter. His lips moved downward. Elvira's toes curled as she watched Zach play with her breasts. She put her hand on his hand, hoping he would stop. "Zach, I can't... I can't bear it..." Elvira's voice shook. Zach looked at her with red eyes. He rested his forehead on hers and moved her hand down.

Elvira dared not look at him. She could only hear his panting, which made her heart race.

Although Stacy was arrested, Judy couldn't ignore her even if she was furious. It would tarnish her reputation. She could only tell Vincent so he could bail Stacy out

Vincent was infuriated when he learned Elvira was responsible. He called his contact at the police station, hoping to get Stacy out.

This time, Vincent was rejected. His contact said they had received orders from higher-ups not to grant bail for Stacy and punished her severely.

This was the first time his contact had hung up on Vincent. Vincent had given his contact a lot of benefits and his contact would usually settle his problems. Why was it different this time?

Vincent refused to give up. He called again and asked respectfully. "At least explain what's going on, please."

"I'm not sure about the details. Mr. Willis, who did your niece offend? My superior is personally overseeing this." Since Vincent had been generous, the contact suggested, "If your niece wants to get out of it, she needs to get the other girl to drop the charges."

She Got A Better Man

When Elvira came out of the bathroom, she saw Zach on her bed. Surprised, Elvira asked, "Why aren't you in your room?"

"Elvira, we're newlyweds. Newlyweds don't sleep separately. From today onwards, we'll be sleeping together." Zach patted the spot next to him.

Elvira thought it made sense but something felt off. Tired from today and making out just now, she just wanted to sleep. Elvira sat on the other side of the bed. "Let's sleep early. We have to accompany Tracy for her surgery tomorrow." She kissed him and lay down. Zach switched off the light, plunging the room into darkness. He moved closer to Elvira, his hand slipping under her top. His rough fingertips sent electricity through her. Elvira whimpered. "Zach, let's..."

Zach turned her head and kissed her before she finished. Combined with his hands setting her on fire, Zach kept kissing her. Elvira couldn't even tell him to stop. She felt weak and dizzy. Elvira's senses were enhanced in the darkness. Zach's fingers repeatedly teased her, and emptiness grew inside her. She couldn't bear it.

Before she knew it, they were naked and Zach was above her. His body was scorching.

"Can I, Elvira Although Zach was desperate, he still checked with Elvira.

Elvira was blushing. She nearly swore. After teasing me so much, how could he ask me that?' she wondered. She didn't reply, only held onto his shoulders.

Zach's eyes lit up in the dark. He kissed Elvira, hoping to scale to ecstasy together.

"Hold on Elvira sensed something was wrong. She felt something flow out of her, thinking it was from being excited earlier. But now, it seemed to be continuous, and she felt uneasy

"What's wrong?" Zach stopped, even though he was on edge.

Elvira reached out and touched the bedsheet. She turned on the light. They saw the blood on Elvira's hand. Elvira wanted to crawl into a hole. Why would I get my period now?' she thought. Elvira was embarrassed. "Sorry. I can't do it today."

Zach saw how guilty she was and kissed Elvira. "No need to apologize. I'll go shower. He got up, covering himself with a towel. Elvira got up to tidy everything up, too. But Zach stopped her, saying, "Go rest in the other bedroom. I'll clean up here: "What? No need. I can do it" Elvira looked at the bloodstain. She couldn't possibly let him. She wasn't that delicate.

Zach carried Elvira to the bathroom

Elvira blinked at him. "What are you doing?"

Just clean yourself up. I'll clean up the bed. If you don't want me to die from too much loss of blood, behave yourself." Zach put Elvira on the toilet seat. "I'll go get your underwear. Do you have your pads?" Elvira didn't have any. She had used up hers previously and hadn't bought new ones.

"Til manage with tissue for now. I'll buy some later. Elvira would have cramps on the first day, and her flow was heavy. She couldn't even last ten minutes with tissue, so she needed to hurry and buy some. "Don't move. I'll shower and buy it for you. Zach hurried to the guest bathroom to shower.

Elvira dressed and listened to the sound of running water from the guest bathroom. She looked at the translucent bathroom -door, her heart ached but it felt sweet too. She felt like she had struck gold with Zach. Could God be making up for my misery after so many years? she wondered Zach was worried so he took a quick cold shower. Seeing her standing barefoot at the door, he frowned and carried her to the other bedroom. Zach put her on the bed and pulled the blanket over her. "Wear your shoes next time."

Elvira nodded and smiled.

KIT PM

Zach felt exasperated. He wanted to hug her but was afraid of making her uncomfortable with his cool temperature. "Rest. I'll tidy that room, then go out to buy pads for you. Bear with it for a bit

Elvira continued smiling and nodding.

Zach flicked her forehead. "Why are you giggling?"

"Because I've hit the jackpot. You and Tracy are so good," Elvira confided.

Zach went silent. Good? He wouldn't describe himself as such. If he were, he would have long died when he was young.

Seeing Zach's expression wasn't right, Elvira asked, "Was it something I said?"

"Elvira, what if you find out I'm not good one day?" Zach asked nervously and solemnly.

Elvira grabbed his hand. Her tone was earnest. "If you don't let me down, I won't too."

Zach felt ecstatic. He wanted to hug Elvira again but remembered and ended up only kissing her. "I'll be back soon."

Zach didn't dare to linger, afraid he wouldn't bear to leave her. The door was open and Elvira saw Zach changing the dirty sheets in the master bedroom and putting them in the washing machine. Then, he hurriedly dressed and left the room. Elvira didn't hear the washing machine starting so she got up to turn it on. The stain might not come off if it was left there for too long. Elvira returned to bed afterward. She looked at her ring and grinned sweetly. It felt good to be treasured. Elvira didn't care if the diamond was real as long as Zach loved her. Zach had paid for Tracy's surgery and probably didn't have much money left. Yet, he put effort into buying a ring for her. It showed he cared.

When Zach returned, he had lost a slipper and was sweating profusely. Elvira was boiling water in the kitchen. She thought something had happened. "Is something okay?" Elvira asked concernly.

She Got A Better Man

Chapter

29

"I... just didn't want to keep you waiting." Zach said as he handed Elvira the items he had just purchased, "Since I'm not sure which ones you need, I bought a little of everything."

Elvira noticed that Zach was blushing, and she imagined how awkward he must have felt while buying those feminine products.

After using the bathroom, Elvira was surprised that Zach had prepared a cup of chamomile tea for her and asked, "How did you know to prepare this?"

"I've checked with the doctor, and you should drink it and go to bed. It's too cold out here. Zach passed Elvira the cup of warm tea he made.

Elvira took a sip of her tea and couldn't help but think how sweet Zach was. She was touched by his thoughtfulness in consulting a doctor on how to care for a girl on her period. Zach refused to let Elvira handle the laundry. As soon as the washing machine beeped, he hurriedly took the bedsheets out to dry and returned to bed.

Zach and Elvira lay together on the soft bed, wrapped in each other's arms. He ran his fingers along her back in a slow, soothing motion as if trying to lull her into a deep sleep.

"Are you still experiencing cramps?" Zach asked with concern, having heard that girls often suffer from severe cramps their period.

during

"I feel better after drinking the chamomile tea you prepared. It's so sweet of you, Zach" Elvira snuggled up to him, feeling warm and contented.

"I will always be there for you, Elvira, Zach said, giving her a warm embrace and a kiss on the forehead.

Elvira glanced at Zach and planted a quick kiss on his chin.

"Let's go to sleep," Zach whispered as he playfully slapped her bottom. "It's not a good idea to play with fire. You know I can't resist you."

Elvira snuggled up to Zach and chuckled at his response. Due to her childhood abuse, she was weak and sickly, constantly feeling cold. Hugging Zach felt like having a heater in winter, and she quickly fell asleep, feeling comfortable in his embrace.

On the other hand, Zach realized sharing a bed with Elvira was trouble. With his mind whirling, he growled in agony as he felt a strain between his legs and his pants getting tighter as she lay there in his arms.

When Elvira slowly opened her eyes the next day, she noticed that Zach was no longer beside her. She felt the warmth that Zach had left behind and wrapped the blanket around herself tightly. She basked in the warmth momentarily, thinking. This feels so nice and warm After preparing breakfast, Zach returned to the room to check on Elvira. Seeing she was awake, he asked, "Why don't you sleep a little longer? Maybe you could take a nap after eating breakfast. I'll go to the hospital by myself for my grandmother's surgery." "No way!" exclaimed Elvira as she sat up in bed. "I have to be there with you. I'm getting up now!"

Zach scooped her up and sat her on his lap as she was getting out of bed. After kissing her, he asked, "Do you feel well enough to go?"

"I'll let you know immediately if I don't feel well. But I must go with you to the hospital and be there with you!" Elvira was determined. She had always regarded Grandma Tracy as part of her family, so she felt it was important to be there for them. Seeing how determined she was, Zach felt a wave of warmth cruised through his body and pulled her into a deep kiss.

"Why are you kissing me again when I am talking about Grandma Tracy's surgery?! And oh my god. I have not brushed my teeth! Elvira screamed a little internally.

Sensing his passion and desire, Elvira reciprocated. She wrapped her arms around him, deepening the kiss as she pulled him closer. But...

Elvira suddenly felt the rush of her menstrual blood below and interrupted their intimate moment. "Wait, stop! I need to use the bathroom," she said, feeling a bit embarrassed.

Zach had lost control of himself once again. He realized he couldn't resist her charms, and it was as if he was under a spell whenever he was with her. After regaining his composure, he promptly escorted Elvira to the bathroom.

When the couple arrived at the hospital, the medical team had already made all necessary arrangements for the upcoming surgery. Tracy Gilbert held Elvira and Zach's hands, her eyes full of joy.

As the operating theatre door closed, Zach could feel his heart pounding in his chest. Tears started welling in his eyes as he stared at the door. He knew he would have been long gone if his grandmother hadn't been there for him all these years. Elvira rested her head on his shoulder and squeezed his hand. "Don't worry, Grandma Tracy will be okay," she comforted.

Zach squeezed her hand back and turned to hug her tightly. Elvira gently patted his back and comforted, "I'll take care of her with you."

"Alright. Zach tightened his arms around Elvira.

The surgery was expected to take quite some time, so Zach and Elvira decided to hang around the waiting area outside the operating theatre.

Concerned for Elvira's well-being, Zach requested a nearby empty ward for her to rest. She agreed to take a break in the hospital, hoping to stay with him.

After making sure that Elvira was comfortable, Zach left the ward. Meanwhile, Elvira gently rubbed her belly and thought that her period had come at such an inconvenient time when she needed to be active and at her best.

After resting for thirty minutes, Elvira felt restless and decided to go look for Zach. As she opened the door to leave, she was suddenly confronted by an old lady who then proceeded to slap her across the face.

A loud slap reverberated through the corridor. Elvira was taken aback, leaving her unable to react. Before Karen Willis could land another slap, Elvira quickly caught her hand and pushed her away.

Karen stumbled and nearly fell, but Judy and Amber quickly reacted and caught her just in time. They exchanged a concerned glance and helped Karen steady herself.

"How dare you hit me, you ungrateful person!" Karen shouted. Despite her elegant outfit and neatly combed hair, her eyes were sharp and intimidating.

"I have never seen a grandmother hit her granddaughter the moment they meet either, Elvira stated, glaring coldly at Karen. Elvira had finally accepted that her grandmother would never approve of her. Karen would always find fault in her actions no matter how hard she tried. Even if Elvira did something right, Karen would assume that she was just pretending.

She had once heard that a person's perception of another remains unchanged despite any changes or actions made by the latter. This saying had never been more true than in her situation.

"You're the one to talk! You know exactly what you've done! Get to the police station immediately and bail Stacy out! And let me tell you, if you don't, I will kick you out of the Willis family!" Karen's voice was stern and cold as she glared at Elvira.

"Elvira, I heard that Stacy had an accident yesterday and injured her face. But I have also heard she only received basic treatment at the station. I am worried about what will happen if her face is disfigured," said Amber, looking at Elvira with disapproval. "We are family, so we should talk things out privately at home. Regardless of what had happened, you may have

She Got A Better Man

"Elvira, as a family, we should care for each other. You should bail Stacy out quickly." Judy said flatly but with a hint of gloating in her voice.

"Go to the police station now!" Karen threatened Elvira fiercely. "I would have treated you equally if you were half as sensible as Judy," she said coldly. "Stacy Willis was arrested for breaking the law. It's none of my business, and I don't have time for your nonsense today!" Elvira turned around to leave. Elvira turned around to see a group of four bodyguards approaching her slowly. She glared at them before turning back to the three women with her. "What's going on here?" she asked, her voice sharp and firm. "Are you planning to beat me up right here and now?"

"I feel like I have been too kind to you in the past, and that's why you dared to behave recklessly while I was away. Firstly, you went ahead and got married without informing me. Secondly, I heard you were involved in setting up Amber and Stacy. Today, I need to teach you a lesson so you'll learn!" Karen declared with authority as she gestured to her bodyguards to apprehend Elvira.

Elvira had practiced martial arts secretly for three years while living in the countryside, She was confident in taking on Perry Bacchus, but fighting four professional bodyguards could prove problematic. Additionally, she was feeling weak due to her period and menstrual cramps, which put her at a significant disadvantage. Despite her training, she knew that the odds were against her,

After weighing the consequences, Elvira said, "Hold it! I'll leave with you quietly. You can't just grab and take me away, right? There are way too many people around in the hospital. Let's go!"

"I doubt you dare to do anything anyway," said Karen as she turned to leave.

Amber and Judy appeared uneasy and anxious. Since Karen had been away, she was unaware of how difficult it was to deal with Elvira. They had experienced it multiple times, particularly Amber, who had been deceived into having a one-night stand with Perry Bacchus, but she didn't dare to inform Karen about it. So, Amber was determined to get rid of Elvira once she agreed to return to the Willis Family

"Mom, we should keep an eye on her. She's..." Amber said. However, before she could finish, Elvira suddenly spun around and lunged at Judy, who was nearest.

In a matter of seconds, Elvira had Judy in a tight chokehold. In her hand, a sharp can lid glinted menacingly against Judy's delicate face, threatening to cause harm. The commotion made everyone gasp in shock.

The bodyguards were caught off guard and realized too late that something had gone wrong.

"Don't move! Otherwise, I am going to ruin her face!" Elvira dragged Judy along as she backed away from the group.

Amber screamed in shock, "Elvira! Let go of my daughter!"

Karen was caught off guard by the commotion that Elvira had caused before her. She remembered Elvira as a docile and obedient person at home, so the sudden outburst surprised her. "Elvira, how dare you! Let go of Judy right now!" Karen shouted furiously, her hand trembling as she pointed at her. Feeling anxious about Elvira ruining her face, Judy stood frozen and screamed, "Help me!"

Judy had always dreamed of being a top star and had been waiting for the release of her movie that could catapult her popularity. If her face was scarred, it could derail all her efforts and jeopardize her chances of stardom

Judy was on the verge of tears as she felt the rough edge of the can lid scrape against her cheek. Every movement Elvira made caused the sharp metal to dig into her skin, leaving a trail of pain behind it.

'Send your bodyguards away. If not, I'll ruin her face. You can try me!' Elvira threatened coldly.

Karen was fixated on her once meek and compliant Elvira, her face etched with a serious expression. On the other hand, Amber was worried about Judy getting injured. Feeling anxious that Karen was unaware of Elvira's craziness, she pleaded, "Mom, please do what Elvira says. Don't let her hurt Judy!" She then turned to the bodyguards and urged them to leave.

None of the bodyguards moved as they would only take orders from Karen.

Karen's hands were visibly tense. Her knuckles were tightly clenched, and her nails dug into her palms. Elvira's sudden change in temperament took Karen by surprise. It seemed like Elvira had transformed into a different person after her breakup with Calvin Kennedy. Karen's gaze lingered on Judy, the granddaughter she had always doted on. She couldn't bear the thought of anything happening to her, so she didn't dare to take any chances. "Stand down, all four of you!" she ordered.

The bodyguards immediately retreated upon instructions.

"Can you release Judy now?" Karen asked, still glaring coldly at Elvira.

"Of course not," Elvira said. "Judy will stay with me for a while more." She kept moving backward while holding onto Judy.

Karen's eyebrows furrowed, and her lips pressed together sternly. Beside her, Amber was on the verge of crying, worried for Judy's safety.

Elvira took a few more steps back, keeping her distance and creating more space between them. She then pushed Judy away and quickly ran in the opposite direction.

Amber lunged forward and caught her daughter just in time. Judy's face was pale as a ghost, and tears streamed down her cheeks. She reached up to touch her face, feeling a stinging sensation. "Mom, is my face alright?" she asked, her voice trembling with worry. Amber quickly examined her daughter's face, checking for any signs of injury. After a few moments, she let out a sigh of relief. "You're okay, sweetie," she said, reassuring Judy. "It's just a little scratch. It should heal in a few days."

Karen's face contorted with anger and frustration. After ensuring Judy was safe, she turned to her bodyguards and barked out her orders in a cold, steely voice. "Summon more help, she commanded, her voice barely containing her rage. "Find that wretched girl and bring her to me by the end of today!"

"Yes, Mrs. Willis!" Karen's bodyguards acknowledged her order and immediately chased after Elvira in the direction she fled. "That was so scary! How could Elvira be so mean? I'm done for if she really messed up my face. Judy cried as she hugged Karen tightly. Til deal with that wretched girl later. But right now, let's head home and rest. Karen felt terrible when she saw Judy crying, and her anger towards Elvira grew stronger as she spoke.

Amber and Judy felt exasperated and annoyed. With Karen and her bodyguards by their side, they thought taking Elvira back to the Willis's would be easy. However, things didn't go as planned, and Elvira managed to slip away from them again. Both of them realized that they had underestimated her abilities, and they silently vowed to approach future dealings with her more cautiously.