Chapter 621

After sleeping at the villa for a night and bathing in the hot springs in the morning, the three of them left.

As Maggie and Auriel liked the place a lot, they felt reluctant to leave.

Due to the hot springs, they looked even more beautiful and dazzling than before.

When they arrived at the car park, they realized that Bob was still guarding Auriel's car. Furthermore, the headlights, which had been damaged when Zachariah kicked them, had been fixed.

“Hi, Alex,” Bob quickly greeted.

Alex nodded. Looking at the fixed headlamps, he asked, “Did you get someone to fix this?”

“Yeah, it's just a simple fix. As I was afraid of disturbing Ms. Skyworth, I didn't go up to get the car keys,” replied Bob with a nod.

“All right, you can go back now.” Alex nodded.

“Okay.” Bob returned to his car.

When Alex got into his car, he asked Auriel, “Have you chosen your car, Auriel?”

“Master, are you really going to give me a luxury car?” asked Auriel excitedly.

“Of course,” scoffed Alex as he glanced at her.

Smiling, Maggie said, “Auriel, since your master wants to give it to you, just take it. Tell him to buy you a Lamborghini Veneno.”

When Auriel heard that, she quickly shook her head. “That's too expensive. It won't suit me.”

Even if Alex gave her a car worth tens of millions, she would not dare to drive it.

Not only did she have to be rich enough, but her vibe must also suit the car.

Noticing that Auriel genuinely did not want an expensive car, Maggie suggested, “Why don't you buy a BMW M8? It's only a little more than two million. It won't break your master's bank, and it'll be comfortable for you too.”

Auriel still shook her head and said, “It's still too expensive. I don't like sports cars anyway. They're too flamboyant! A car that's worth a million is enough.”

After a slight pause, she glanced at Alex and said, “Master, I like the BMW 8 Series, especially the blue ones. Why don't you give me a car from the BMW 8 Series?”

“Are you sure?” asked Alex with a smile.

Auriel nodded quickly. “Yep! I'll get a BMW 8 Series car.”

The most expensive BMW 8 Series car was only slightly more than a million. She felt that it was sufficient to drive one of those around. If the car was too expensive, it would be too flamboyant.

She did not want to attract too much attention. Furthermore, her grandfather would not let her do that.

“Let's go to the BMW showroom, then,” suggested Alex.

“Are we going today?” exclaimed Auriel.

“Yeah, now.” Alex nodded.

“Okay! You're the best, master! I love you!” said Auriel excitedly as she drove toward the BMW store.

Upon seeing Auriel, who was a regular customer, the staff thought that she was there for car maintenance. One of them asked, “Is there a problem with your car?”

“I'm here to change my car,” revealed Auriel.

“Change your car?”

Stunned, the salesperson quickly smiled brightly and asked, “Which car would you like?”

“The 8 Series,” replied Auriel.

“The best one there,” added Alex.

When the salesperson heard that, the grin on her face widened. She brought the three of them to look at the cars enthusiastically.

There were BMW 8 Series cars in stock, so they did not have to wait. They could drive the car away after settling the procedures.

On the way back, Maggie and Auriel drove the new car, while Alex drove the BMW 530 for her.

After returning to Sakura Club, Maggie said that something happened at the construction site and asked Alex to accompany her there.

As it had been a long time since he went there, Alex tagged along with her.

When they reached the office at the construction site, there was no one there. Maggie hugged Alex and kissed his lips.

Surprised, he did not know if he should reject her or...

Chapter 622

Maggie was out of her mind. Just like what she had said yesterday, she wanted Alex to know how crazy a woman could be.

Hugging Alex, she kissed him on the lips directly, not giving him a chance to resist.

With such a beautiful woman in his arms, Alex merely resisted for a while before succumbing. Embracing each other, they kissed passionately.

Just when Alex's hand started to roam around her body, Maggie released him. Her cheeks were rosy, making her look even more alluring than before.

Alex almost could not resist the urge to pull her back into his arms.

“This is only the beginning. If you won't divorce your wife, I'll have an affair with you.” Maggie shot a provocative glance at Alex before tidying her clothes and walking toward the office.

Smiling bitterly, he followed her.

After entering the office, Maggie dove right into her work as if nothing had happened.

The staff led them around. Alex surveyed the situation at the construction site before leaving with Maggie.

Everything was progressing well. All that was left to do was wait.

Jacob's life had been great recently. After acquiring the Jennings Corporation again and receiving funding from Ivy Media Group, the company's capital chain had been fixed. Many other businesses sought them out for collaborations and everything had returned to normal.

Within a month, they managed to reap a profit and he got his own bonus.

After being poor for a long time, he was finally rich. He immediately splurged tens of thousands at a bar, slept with a college student, and vented all of his pent-up frustration.

Furthermore, he had won hundreds of thousands when he went to the Zucker family's casino. Right now, he was so overwhelmed with delight that everyone could notice it on his face.

In the company's meeting room, Jacob reported the company's performance to everyone.

He announced proudly, "Let me share some good news! The family's business has resumed its usual trajectory. Plus, two of our rival companies have been suffering tragic losses because of some problems with their business operations. They have declared bankruptcy now. In other words, we no longer have any competitors in Nebula City. Our profits will keep skyrocketing from now on. I believe that we can expand our factories next year. Hence, all of you must work harder and strive for the end-of-year bonus!”

When the shareholders and higher management heard him, they applauded. They were quite pleased with how Jacob was managing the company.

No wonder Demi kicked Heather's family out and asked Jacob to take charge of the company.

He has the ability to bring the family to greatness again!

“Jacob's really capable. I heard that after Heather got kicked out of the family, she went to become a social media influencer. How embarrassing!”

“Yeah! A daughter of the Jennings actually became an influencer. Demi's decision to exile her from the family is right.”

“Demi is so wise!”

Jacob felt glad when he heard everyone chastise Heather, even though she was not present.

Smiling, he asked, “Does anyone know the link to Heather's live stream? After all, she's part of the Jenningses. Let's go and support her.”

“Haha! Yeah, all of us should send her some donations on the live stream. We can tell her that we're from the Jennings family and ask her to sing more songs for us,” agreed Harper with a laugh.

“Sounds great! Send us the link to the live stream and let's take a look,” replied Jacob.

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

Chapter 623

Heather's life had been horrible recently.

As those two wealthy fans of hers stopped donating to her, her income had decreased significantly.

In the past, her monthly income could reach up to a million. However, she was only earning tens of thousands now. This huge contrast was not befitting of her status.

Although she was very popular amongst the other live streamers, many people were attracted by her beauty.

Her singing, on the other hand, was average.

Since she did not dance and was not humorous enough to interact with her fans, they naturally did not donate to her.

As for those who wanted to pursue her, when they saw “Anonymuncle” and “Youngmaster” at the top of the ranks, they knew that Heather was theirs. An average netizen would not even dare to pursue her anymore, so they naturally did not donate to her.

On the other hand, although Carlene was only live streaming for a few hours each night, her popularity and donations exceeded Heather's significantly.

Heather was overcome with jealousy.

Suddenly, a lot of people started donating to her. Pleased, she thanked them.

However, when she read the comments, her expression turned grim.

Jacob and the rest had come to humiliate her.

They kept flooding the live stream with comments. A manager from the Jennings Corporation even asked her to sing an extremely difficult song, which made Heather very angry.

She asked the moderator to mute Jacob and the rest.

However, her mood was still impacted. After chatting with her fans for a while, she stopped the live stream.

Jacob lost interest after Heather left. After ending the meeting, he went to the Zucker family's casino at night to gamble.

Thinking that his luck had been extraordinary recently, he was certain that he would win.

However, within just two hours, he lost the hundreds of thousands that he had won previously.

Unwilling to admit defeat, he continued gambling. Once he recouped his losses, he planned to stop.

However, it was as if all of his luck had been exhausted over the past few days. Within an hour, he lost a few hundred thousand again.

He even gambled the company's bonuses away.

Unable to accept this reality, Jacob gritted his teeth and borrowed another million from Zachariah to gamble.

Within half an hour, he lost all that money again.

When Zachariah saw that, he feigned concern and advised Jacob to stop gambling. However, Jacob borrowed two million from him again.

Zachariah pretended to convince him otherwise before lending him the money.

Although Jacob won some money along the way, his losses still exceeded his wins. At the end of the day, he lost more than ten million, including the ten million which he had borrowed from Zachariah.

Naturally, Zachariah did not have that much money. The money that he had lent to Jacob was the casino's money.

Ten million!

To him, that was an enormous sum. He did not dare to tell anyone. If his grandmother found out, she would cripple him.

However, he did not dare to forfeit Zachariah's loan. After all, Zachariah and the Zucker family were notorious in Nebula City for their viciousness. If he offended Zachariah, he would not be able to survive in Nebula City anymore.

Those who dared to open a casino were definitely not the kind sort.

The next day, he secretly embezzled the company's liquid assets, which were worth eleven million. Half a million was to pay off the interest, while the other half a million was to be gambled. He planned to win all the money that he had lost yesterday before stopping for good.

However, it was obvious what the outcome would be. Unable to stop himself, he borrowed another five million and lost everything.

He had a mental breakdown afterward. How can I afford to repay all the money?

In the end, Zachariah and the rest beat him up harshly, even breaking his leg.

They even charged him with extremely high interest. For the five million that he had borrowed, he would have to pay an interest of two hundred and fifty thousand daily. It was simply impossible for him to clear his debt.

His despair grew when Ivy Media Group visited him and asked for the money.

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

Chapter 624

After Stuart and his father disappeared, Penguin Group quickly made new arrangements and appointed someone else to helm the Ivy Media Group.

The new person in charge of Ivy Media Group was Caroline. Allegedly, she was Malcom's daughter, though that rumor had not been proved.

After Caroline was appointed, she quickly made adjustments for the company.

The overall plan was to compete with the Four Seas Corporation for the market in Nebula City and the Southwest Region. However, unlike Stuart and his brother, they would not be opposing the Four Seas Corporation so openly.

Caroline was still quite sensible.

Stuart and his brother had opposed the Four Seas Corporation brazenly right from the start. Not only did they fail to kick Four Seas Corporation out of the market, but they had also disappeared in the end.

No one would believe it if someone said that the Four Seas Corporation had nothing to do with it.

Caroline had always kept a low profile. Hence, not only did she not make an open declaration to oppose the Four Seas Corporation, but she even put up a weak front and announced the possibility of collaborating with them.

After coming for a week, Caroline realized that Stuart had not only made the company lose five hundred million, but also lent a hundred million from the company's account to the Jenningses.

When she investigated it, she found out that the Jennings family only owned a small business. Hence, she instructed someone to bring the IOU to them and collect the money back.

As Jacob had signed the IOU with Demi, the person from Ivy Media Group looked for him directly.

However, he could not fork out the money at all. As he had also lost the company's funds to gambling, he could not repay them.

Demi found out about it soon enough. When she heard that Jacob had used the company's funds to gamble and lost everything, she fainted from fury and got hospitalized.

Even so, that did not stop the Ivy Media Group from demanding their money back.

The Ivy Media Group gave the Jenningses a week to prepare the money. If they still failed to do that after a week, the Ivy Media Group would sue them.

If that happened, the Jenningses' only way out was to sell the company to repay the loan.

Upon that thought, Demi's illness worsened.

The entire Jennings family was in despair. Jacob's father beat him up terribly and stripped him from his position as the general manager.

“The only solution is to get a strong company to acquire the Jennings Corporation,” said Demi to her son, Brian, as she lay on the hospital bed.

Brian shook his head and said, “Upon hearing that we've offended the Ivy Media Group, no one is willing to buy the Jennings Corporation's stocks. I've met the chairman of the Ivy Media Group too and asked if she is intending to acquire the Jennings Corporation. I even offered to sell 49% of our stocks for a hundred million. However, she isn't even interested in the Jennings Corporation and insisted on us repaying the loan.”

Brian's wife chimed in, “Mom, that good-for-nothing owed the Zucker family's casino five million. The interest racks up to hundreds of thousands each day. Not only are we unable to repay the Ivy Media Group, but the Zucker family has also sent people over to hound us. They said that if we can't repay the loan within three days, they'll settle it with us in court. I'm worried that even if the Ivy Media Group will spare us, the Zucker family won't!"

Although she was Jacob's mother, she was overwhelmed with fury upon hearing how Jacob had destroyed the company's future.

Demi's expression was grim too. She did not expect her grandson, whom she had such high hopes for, to do something like that.

"Let's plead with Heather. Only she can convince the chairman of the Four Seas Corporation. If he acquires the Jennings Corporation, we'd still have hope," said Demi as she heaved a deep sigh.

In her opinion, that was the Jennings Corporation's last hope.

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

Chapter 625

“After what you did to Heather and her family, she must loathe us! Why would she even consider helping us?” asked Brian while shaking his head.

“Don't worry yourself. I know exactly what kind of person Heather is. All I have to do is apologize to her personally, and she will undoubtedly forgive me,” responded Demi solemnly.

At the sound of that, Brian was immediately filled with hope. There's definitely a chance that Heather will decide to aid us if mom talks to her. As long as she's willing to plead with the chairman of Four Seas Corporation for us, we'll make it worth her while.

“All right then. I'll tell them that you've fallen severely ill and ask them to visit you at the hospital,” suggested Brian.

In response to that, Demi shook her head. “No, that won't do. I have to go to them myself. Only by doing that can I show them how sincere I am.”

“But what about your condition?” inquired Brian concernedly.

“I'm fine. Besides, this is the only way I'll be able to move Heather.”

Brian's wife held his arm, gesturing for him to let Demi proceed with the plan. “That's just how Heather is. They'll never come even if you tell them how sick mom is. Mom has to go to them. Only then will we get a shot.”

After some thought, Brian eventually nodded in agreement. “Fine. Then I'll send you to Heather's right now.”

Meanwhile, Heather was busy with her live stream as usual.

Since her income from the business had diminished by a lot, she had to do more streams in a day to make up for the decrease.

Suddenly, Carmen opened the door to Heather's room and informed her daughter of Demi's visit, so the young woman had no choice but to end her live stream and greet Demi.

“Still working on your live streams, Heather?” Sitting on the couch, Demi greeted Heather with a big smile when her granddaughter walked into the living room.

The elderly then sighed before continuing, “I realized that I didn't think things through when I kicked you out of our family, and I know I was wrong. When I heard how you had to rely on doing live streams to make a living, my heart ached for you, Heather. I've thought about asking you to come back to the company, but I was worried that you might call me a drama queen. But in all honesty, I really do miss you, Heather. Please, won't you come back to work with us? As part of Jenningses, you deserve so much more.”

Heather was stunned by Demi's request, for she never expected that her grandmother would want her to return to Jennings Corporation.

For a moment, she thought Demi only came to her because the company was in trouble.

“Why are you only asking Heather to go back now, mom? Jennings Corporation is not in some sort of trouble, is it?” questioned Carmen suspiciously.

“Tell me the truth, granny. Are you trying to get me to talk to the chairman of Four Seas Corporation because Jennings Corporation is in trouble?”

Brian tried his best to keep a straight face while Demi sighed before explaining, “You're right. Our company did run into some trouble, but that's not the only reason why I wanted you back. I really do miss you, Heather. No matter what, you'll always be my granddaughter. That's a fact. I know I've made some rash decisions, but you don't really believe that I've given up on you for good, do you? I'm even ready to offer Lucas a much better position in the company. It's time he takes up more responsibilities.”

Although at one point, Heather thought that she could not possibly hate Demi more, she was nonetheless touched by her grandmother's words then.

When she heard the elderly woman's seemingly sincere apology, she was moved.

Since her income from the live streams had diminished, Heather had one reason more to return to Jennings Corporation.

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

Chapter 626

There's no reason to be stubborn now that I've been given a chance to go back to the company. After all, granny did show her sincerity by coming here to apologize personally to me. With that thought, Heather decided to inquire, "If I were to return to Jennings, what position will I be assigned?"

"Someone as capable as you should be the deputy general manager, of course! You will be fully in charge of our daily operations," answered Demi excitedly before exchanging looks with Brian. The two had already agreed that they would temporarily appoint that position to Heather so that she could solve their corporate issue for them. After she had served her purpose, they would sack her once again without a second thought.

Standing just beside Heather, Carmen narrowed her eyes when she sensed something off about the two visitors. She found it hard to believe that Demi would ever humble herself to ask Heather to work for the company, much less assign her daughter such an important position. On top of that, it was no secret that Demi had always sided with Brian and his family.

Just when Heather was about to take Demi up on the offer, Carmen quickly stopped her daughter and looked daggers at her visitors. “Only a fool would believe you. Didn't you say that the company was in trouble? What kind of trouble, exactly?”

“It's...” Demi never expected Carmen to see through her tricks. Embarrassed, she quickly changed her strategy and pretended to cry pitifully.

“I know I look desperate, but I really am out of options. Nothing pains me more than to think that I'm the one responsible for the end of Jennings. You're our only hope, Heather. Only you can persuade the chairman of Four Seas Corporation to help save our company.”

Sighing, Brian then decided to play along. “I know we've had our differences, Heather. But you're a Jenningses; you're one of us. Can you really sit by and do nothing while our company burns?”

Heather lowered her head as she tried to figure out what to do next. She was hesitant to extend her helping hand after what her grandmother had done and how the elderly woman had repeatedly disappointed her.

While Heather was still struggling internally, Carmen leaped to her feet and rebuked the other two Jenningses. “I knew nothing good could come out of you two! You only wanted Heather to forgive you because you needed her help. Well, let me remind you then. Jennings Corporation has nothing to do with us. You made sure of that when you drove us out of the family. It's funny, isn't it? Did it not occur to you then that you would need Heather's help someday in the future? You lot deserve to see your company fall.” With that, Carmen scoffed condescendingly at the two and started shoving them toward the door.

Seeing how Carmen was about to close the door on her, Demi immediately got down on her knees and begged, “Heather, please! I'm begging you! Is this not enough? Please save our company! I won't leave until you agree to help us.”

Everyone at the scene was utterly shocked by the elderly woman's abrupt action.

“What are you doing, granny? You'll hurt yourself.

We'll talk, okay? Can you please just get up first?" urged Heather as she tried to help Demi up.

However, the elderly woman pushed her granddaughter away and insisted on kneeling. "If you don't agree to help us today, I'll continue to beg you like this. I'm not going to lose our company. To me, that's a fate worse than dying."

Since they were outside and Demi was loud enough for anyone nearby to hear her, it did not take long for a crowd to gather around them.

"Oh, my goodness! Why are they letting that poor elderly woman kneel like that? These people have no shame!"

"How could they do that to an elderly? I mean, just look at how frail that old woman is."

After hearing all the nasty things the crowd had to say about her and her family, Heather knew she had to get Demi inside, or she would never hear the end of it. “Okay, I will help you. Can you please get up now, granny?” In order to get Demi to listen to her, Heather had no choice but to agree to her grandmother's request.

Only after that did Demi willingly let Heather help her up. “You have a kind heart, my sweet granddaughter. I knew you'd never sit idly by while your own grandmother suffers,” stated the elderly woman with relief as she patted Heather's hand lightly.

Still wondering if she did the right thing, Heather kept silent and did not respond to her grandmother. Do I really have to go to the chairman again? What am I going to say to him?

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

Chapter 627

“Jessica, I need to see the chairman. Could you please bring me to him?” pleaded Heather.

“I'm sorry, Heather, but the chairman is not in the office right now.”

Even though the two used to be close friends back in high school, Jessica began to dislike Heather ever since she developed feelings for Alex. Plus, she knew what happened between Heather and him, so she would rather not assist the woman.

Heather's eyes fell to the floor when she heard that the chairman was not around, but then her eyes lit up when she thought of an idea. “Could you call him and tell him that I need to talk to him?”

There was no reason to deny the woman that, so Jessica had no choice but to pick up the phone and dial Alex's number. After a few rings, Jessica heard Alex's commanding voice over the phone.

“What is it?” questioned Alex straightforwardly. The man's impatient tone obviously showed that he did not appreciate the timing of the call, for he was busy with his training at Sakura Club at the moment.

After glancing at Heather standing next to her, Jessica replied, “Heather said that she needed to speak to you.”

“Chairman, could you please acquire Jennings Corporation for me? Please! I really need your help,” begged Heather loudly so that the chairman could hear her.

At the sound of that, Alex's face hardened. He knew that Ivy Media Group had a new chairman and that the man was against Jennings Corporation, but he never expected Heather to help her family again. I see Heather still hasn't learned her lesson.

“Tell her that Four Seas Corporation will never acquire Jennings Corporation and that she should stop thinking about it. Also, ask her not to come back anymore,” instructed Alex coldly before unceremoniously ending the call.

Heather then looked expectantly at Jessica since she could not hear what the chairman said over the phone.

“The chairman said that he'll never acquire Jennings Corporation and that you shouldn't come back here again,” informed Jessica before shrugging her shoulders indifferently at Heather. “If there's nothing else I can help you with, I'll be taking my leave.”

After glancing at Heather one last time, Jessica turned around and left the disappointed woman. As Alex's secretary, Jessica knew how much he had helped Heather. The chairman has every right to turn Heather down. She deserves it.

At the Jennings residence, Demi excitedly stood up with the help of her crane to greet Heather when her granddaughter finally returned.

“Heather, you're back! So how much is the chairman willing to give us this time?” inquired Demi as she held Heather's hand tightly.

Since Four Seas Corporation had always agreed to help Heather, Demi had no reason to believe that they would turn Heather down then.

However, much to the elderly woman's surprise, Heather shook her head in disappointment. “The chairman didn't even want to talk to me. He's not going to acquire Jennings Corporation.”

Demi almost lost her footing when she heard Heather's answer.

Fortunately for her, Brian was quick enough to dash over to catch her. The man ended up falling himself but managed to cushion his mother.

“Calm down, mom. We'll find another way,” assured Brian before turning to Heather. “Isn't that right, Heather?”

At that moment, the woman had no idea what to say in response, for she did not know what else to do since the chairman of Four Seas Corporation was unwilling to help her.

The money Jacob owed to loan sharks snowballed so much that he had to pay around a hundred thousand every day. At that rate, not only would Jennings Corporation be forced to declare bankruptcy, but the Jennings family would also have to follow suit.

Demi, who continued to lie motionlessly on top of Brian, seemed to have suddenly aged ten years as colors drained from her face.

Sitting on the couch munching down on snacks was Jacob, who looked as if the elderly woman's well-being had nothing to do with him.

“Do you think we were born yesterday, Heather?” questioned Jacob rhetorically after setting his snacks down. “Any fool can tell that the chairman is into you, so why wouldn't he help you? You just have to find the right way to persuade him. Spend some time with the man on the bed, and I'm sure he'll grant every one of your wishes.”

Heather, who had not said a word for a while, could no longer keep her silence after listening to Jacob. Although she had feelings for the chairman as well, she did not appreciate Jacob's crude expression.

Just when she was about to retort, somebody suddenly kicked the door down.

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

A few well-built young men outside of the Jenningses' villa was the reason why the door ended up on the floor. Terrified by the display of strength, the servants at the residence quickly scattered away like mice.

No one dared to stand in the tattooed brutes' way, for not only did they come in a group of seven, but they were also armed with baseball bats. Anyone who valued their lives knew better than to stand up against those brutes.

Leading the group was none other than Zachariah himself, who happened to work for David, one of Jacob's creditors.

Zachariah purposely requested to be assigned to collect from the Jenningses because he still remembered how Alex humiliated him.

Ever since the man made him lick the urinal, he became the joke of Nebula City. Since he could not get his revenge on Alex, he decided to take his anger out on the Jenningses.

The man then stormed into the house and swung his baseball bat brazenly at an antique vase, smashing it into millions of pieces.

At that moment, Demi immediately picked herself up to stare distressfully at the mess that used to be her beloved vase.

“Who the heck are you? How dare you smash our family antique!” roared Demi at Zachariah.

When Jacob saw the brutes walk in, he instinctively started moving out of the living room. However, he did not get far when two of the brutes swiftly caught up and seized him.

“Where do you think you're going? You seem to have forgotten that you still owe us money,” reminded Zachariah as he tilted Jacob's chin with the tip of his baseball bat.

“Zachariah, it's so nice to see—”

Before Jacob could finish his sentence, Zachariah gave the man a hard slap on the face. “What? It's nice to see me? Somehow, I find that hard to believe. You better have my money. Or else, I'll break all four of your limbs and make you a cripple!”

Jacob was smacked so hard that two of his teeth got knocked out. The sheer force almost put the man's lights out, and it was enough to break his parents' hearts. They wanted to help him but were stopped by a few brutes.

“We'll get you your five million, but don't you touch him!” commanded Demi as she glared fiercely at the man who hit her favorite grandson.

Even though it was true that the Jenningses could come up with that much money, they would have to sell Jennings Corporation to make it happen.

“Five million? No, no, no. You lot owe us ten million now. And if I don't get the full amount by today, I promise you that this bastard will lose his limbs,” reminded Zachariah.

“T-Ten... Ten million?” Jacob's mother repeated after the man before passing out, for the amount of interest compounded over just a few days was too much for her to bear.

With their financial situation, the Jenningses would have to sell more than just the company to come up with ten million. They would have to sell off the villa as well.

Demi started to get anxious when she imagined how she would have to live the rest of her life out in the streets if that were to happen.

Seeing how nobody came up with a solution, Zachariah got impatient, so he moved his baseball bat away from Jacob's chin and cocked it behind his shoulders.

Zachariah only did that because he wanted to add to the tension. However, Jacob got so terrified by the man that he immediately peed his pants.

“Please have mercy! Please! Don't break my limbs!”
The man kneeled before Zachariah and started begging.

Disgusted by Jacob's act of desperation, Zachariah kicked the man away and sneered, "Get away from me, you filth! If you can't get me my money, you better start planning your life as a cripple!"

The smell of urine on Jacob only angered Zachariah even more because it reminded him of the urinal that Alex forced him to lick.

"Granny, you have to save me! I don't want to be a cripple!" Jacob continued his begging as he grabbed onto Demi's hands tightly.

With her eyes widened in rage, Demi remained silent as she did a rapid expulsion of air through her flared nostrils.

Zachariah then ordered his men to start trashing the residence while he approached a framed photo of Demi's late husband. With a swing of his bat, the man smashed yet another beloved item that belonged to Demi.

After screaming at the horrible sight, the elderly woman fainted and collapsed on the floor. Heather quickly walked over to see if she was all right.

Just when the young woman was about to help Demi up, she realized something was off. After placing her finger below the elderly woman's nose to check for breathing, Heather was immediately taken aback.

“G-Granny is d-dead,” stuttered Heather.

At the sound of that, Zachariah's face turned pale as a sheet, for he never expected that his actions would cost someone their lives. They can't blame me for that old woman's death. This is all Jacob's fault! None of this would happen if he paid up.

Since the situation had escalated, Zachariah decided not to stick around any longer, so he quickly ordered his men to leave the villa.

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

Chapter 629

It did not take long for the news of Demi's death to spread throughout Nebula City, and following that was the start of the Jenningses' downfall.

Not only did Jennings Corporation declare bankruptcy, but the Jenningses also sold their villa to pay off creditors. In the end, they could not even afford to hold a decent funeral for Demi.

Since Demi was no longer around to protect him, Jacob had to spend the rest of his life looking over his shoulders.

Even though Alex was aware of the Jenningses' misfortune, he did not say a word about it. The man thought that the family got exactly what they deserved.

Meanwhile, Carlene of the Galaxy Girls was busy working with Four Seas Corporation to prepare for her online concert.

With the company's help in publicity, news of the event had successfully made headlines on Volcano.

However, Alex was too busy developing a new type of pill at Sakura Club to care about the concert.

Suddenly, the man's phone rang, so he set everything down to check the device.

Carlene: Mr. Jefferson, will you be attending my concert tonight?"

Alex had no interest in attending events like that at all, so he decided to turn the woman down. However, just when he was about to reply to Carlene's message, another one popped up.

Carlene: I know someone as important as you must be busy most of the time, but I still hope that you'll consider showing up. It would mean the world to me.

Since the woman put it that way, Alex changed his mind about not going. I guess showing up for a short while won't take up a lot of my time. Besides, this will be good for morale.

Alex was only done with his work at Sakura Club at nine o'clock sharp that evening. He then drove over to the location where Carlene's concert was held.

The event had already started when Alex got there, and the venue was packed to the brim. There were even numerous people outside surrounding the place.

Naturally, a VIP like Alex had a special seat reserved just for him.

Carlene, already performing on stage, burst with joy as she waved excitedly in Alex's direction.

Immediately, the celebrity's countless fans screamed their lungs out. If it were not for the security guards at the scene, the commotion would have brought the place down, and the response in the live broadcast was just as wild.

Seeing how popular Carlene was, Alex could not help but give the celebrity a half-smile. It seems Carlene is pretty well-received. If the company continues to nurture her, I'm sure she'll soon become one of the most famous singers in the world.

The man then took his phone out to check out the live broadcast. When he saw the number of viewers online, he was stunned for a brief moment. There are three hundred thousand viewers?

The frequency of live comments popping up in the broadcast was so high that Alex could barely read any of them.

On top of being in a good mood, Alex was convinced that he should invest more in Carlene, so he gifted a total of nine hundred and ninety-nine Virtual Spacemen over the live broadcast. Every viewers' screen was immediately filled with the visual effect of the gifts.

Everyone online was so surprised by the man's generous gesture that they stopped leaving comments and just stared blankly at their screens.

Virtual Spaceman was Volcano's latest virtual product worth two thousand, so naturally, the viewers were dumbfounded when someone online named Anonymuncle gifted such an abundant number of it.

Somebody just spent two million worth of virtual gifts on Carlene! How insane is that!

Before the viewers could even shut their mouths that were left agape, Anonymuncle appeared again to gift nine hundred and ninety-nine Virtual Rockets.

Compared to Virtual Spaceman, Virtual Rocket was slightly cheaper. Nine hundred and ninety-nine of them were worth around one million.

In just five minutes, Anonymuncle had already given away three million like it was nothing. No regular white-collar worker would even dream of earning that much money in their lifetime.

Just when the viewers thought it was over, the lavish benefactor gifted yet another set of nine hundred and ninety-nine Virtual Spacemen.

Had the viewers known that Alex only gave away the virtual gifts simply because he liked the visual effects, they would have been even more stupefied.

Because of Anonymuncle's insane display of generosity, the live broadcast suddenly gained a tremendous amount of attention.

The number of viewers online immediately went from three hundred thousand to five hundred thousand.

Meanwhile, Heather was also live-streaming, but her viewers were far less than Carlene's; only around two thousand viewers supported her.

The virtual gifts she had received were also saddening since most of them were only worth less than ten. Disappointed, Heather was about to go offline when a comment caught her attention. Anonymuncle just sent Carlene virtual gifts worth five million!

Immediately after reading that, Heather pouted with jealousy.

FINDING OUT THE BILLIONAIRE

After news of Anonymuncle's generosity spread throughout the internet, even Heather's meager two thousand viewers left her live stream to join Carlene's.

After all, Heather's singing was no match for a professional like Carlene.

Some of the netizens did not even participate in Carlene's live stream to enjoy her singing, for they were there just to see if Anonymuncle would continue his bountiful gesture.

Left with only a few hundred viewers, Heather felt like she could just bawl her eyes out in front of the camera.

It was as if her viewers had cheated on her with Carlene.

Still, Heather knew there was no point being jealous of Carlene since Anonymuncle and the others had their own reasons for choosing the celebrity over her.

When she saw how generous Anonymuncle was, she could not help but compare the virtual personality to her seemingly useless husband. All those years wasted on Alex, what I wouldn't give to turn back time!

Distracted by her own thoughts, Heather kept singing the wrong lyrics. As much as Heather wanted to stop her live streaming, she could not because she still needed the income.

Seeing how distracted Heather was, her viewers started to get annoyed.

“Hey, can you concentrate on your singing?”

“Even my grandmother can sing better than you.”

“You're easy on the eyes; I'll give you that. But that's probably all you're good for.”

All the negative comments popping up on the screen gave Heather a headache, but still, she had to pretend like she did not see them and continue singing.

Eventually, she decided to contact that certain someone she knew to be Anonymuncle's close friend.

Heather: Hey, I'm live streaming too today. Why not show me some love?

On the other side, Carlene got so excited that she almost forgot the lyrics to her song when someone told her that Anonymuncle, whom she already knew was Alex, had sent her gifts worth five million.

To her, five million was not that significant of an amount, but what mattered was that she took it as a show of affection from Alex.

When Carlene stepped onto the stage again, she blatantly sent a flying kiss in the man's direction.

Nobody at the scene knew who the gesture was meant for except for Alex. Still, he did not care for it since he had no feelings for the celebrity. Alex believed the relationship between them was purely platonic.

Suddenly, Alex's phone vibrated. It was a message from Heather, who was still live streaming on Volcano. After the man had read the message, he ignored it and locked his phone.

Being the clever man that he was, Alex figured that Heather only contacted him because she was jealous of Carlene and the gifts that the woman had received.

The man wanted to ignore Heather at first but then changed his mind. She is my wife after all. Maybe I should take a look.

System: Anonymuncle has joined.

The moment Heather saw the system notification, she immediately straightened her back and brightened up. "I didn't expect you to actually show up, but I'm so glad you did!"

In response to that, all Anonymuncle left in the comments was a simple "sure."

Because of Anonymuncle's presence, Heather's dull live stream suddenly became lively.

Everybody was talking about Anonymuncle, and Heather was quickly sidelined.

The woman imagined that Anonymuncle would shower her with gifts, so she waited for a while.

When her imagination did not come true, Heather was utterly disappointed. How could Anonymuncle be so generous with Carlene yet give me nothing at all?

“Anonymuncle, could you send a Virtual Spaceman too. I would really love to see one,” requested Heather unashamedly.

The other viewers were ready to see how many gifts Anonymuncle would give away that time. However, to everyone's surprise, the online personality left another comment before disconnecting from the live stream.

Anonymuncle: You're not worthy.
