Finding out the Billionaire Chapter 96 The Confusion

"That's not important." Alex smiled subtly.

"Don't tell me you saved her life too?" Heather said sarcastically. She realized that her husband was acting rather oddly recently, so she couldn't tell what he was up to.

"You're amazing! How did you guess that correctly?" Alex deliberately put on a shocked expression.

However, Heather wouldn't believe him this time.

How is that even possible?

"Hmph. Whatever. I don't want to know either." Heather snorted in displeasure and frustration.

The more Alex didn't want to tell her the truth, the more she wanted to know.

Alex flashed a slight smile and brought their son somewhere else without giving her an explanation.

On the other end.

"Lori, it seems like you just offended someone important." Florence gloated as she saw Alex leaving.

The reason she acted that way was because she was disgusted at how Lori and Jerome acted so high and mighty just now.

That was especially true for Lori. Florence felt like puking every time she thought about Lori's expression when she asked her to help get an autograph for her.

"Important my a! That guy is a live-in son-in-law, so Madison must've mistaken him for someone else!" Lori retorted.

Florence chuckled because she didn't think so at all.

If Alex really was leeching off his wife's wealth, why did a famous celebrity like Madison show so much respect to him?

Besides that, I saw with my own eyes that Madison was terrified of the so-called 'live-in son-in-law'.

"Jerome, it looks like you're not as influential as a live-in son-in-law." Florence's husband chuckled sardonically.

He was extremely amused when he thought about how pompous Jerome looked just now.

Everyone present started to gloat and ridicule Jerome as well.

Jerome was utterly embarrassed, so he walked away with his daughter in his hand.

Lori, who was equally infuriated, left as well.

"Jerome Laster, didn't you say that he's just a security guard in your company? Why was Madison trying to flatter him?" Lori questioned him fiercely because she was totally humiliated today.

"He really was a security guard! Besides that, he really is a live-in son-in-law too. How am I supposed to know why that b* Madison is trying to flatter him?" Jerome replied helplessly.

Lori frowned when suddenly a realization hit her. "Do you think that Alex has some dirt on Madison? Maybe she's afraid of him because she's scared that he might leak the information to everyone and ruin her career."

"Huh?"

A sudden glint flashed in Jerome's eyes as he chuckled. "That sounds entirely possible! I never expected that piece of trash to be able to dig up some dirt about Madison!"

Jerome squinted as he suddenly thought that he could churn out a lot of stories based on that.

"You b*, Madison Zucker. How dare you disrespect and humiliate me. I'll do everything I can to ruin your reputation!"

And Alex Jefferson, you piece of trash, I'll make sure to destroy your reputation and kick you out of Nebula City!

Jerome's eyes crinkled as he devised a cunning plan.

Finding out the Billionaire Chapter 97

Heather was tired after spending the whole day at the playground, so she wanted to head home.

Alex saw that Stanley was exhausted too, so he agreed to go back.

Alex didn't want to cook today, so he brought Heather and Stanley to a restaurant.

"Heather!"

As they walked to their booth, they heard a lady calling after Heather.

Heather turned around and was surprised at who she saw—Ginny York.

"Ginny, didn't expect to see you here," Heather said as she took a look at the man sitting beside Ginny.

The man wasn't very handsome, but he looked smart and intelligent.

"He's Harry, my boyfriend. Harry, she's my friend from high school, Heather, and this is her husband Alex," Ginny introduced everyone.

"Nice to meet you." Harry shook hands with Alex, but he didn't want to continue the conversation because Alex was dressed casually.

"Nice to meet you." Alex smiled subtly and retracted his hand when he saw that Harry wasn't interested in having a conversation with him.

However, when Harry shook Heather's hands, his eyes lit up in admiration. It was evident that her beauty naturally drew the attention of everyone.

"Heather, why don't you can join us. Mr. Larson is coming later too," Ginny suggested.

"Mr. Larson? The Section Chief, Wade Larson?" Heather asked.

"Yeah. He's really successful in his career, being the Section Chief of the Bureau of Commerce and Industry right now while his uncle is the deputy chief. More importantly, we haven't seen each other in a long time, so we can catch up with each other."

While Ginny said that, she took a look at Alex with a mocking glint in her eyes.

Wade courted Heather persistently during high school, so I'm curious as to what will happen when they meet later.

"Alright. We'll join you then." Heather nodded and sat down beside Ginny.

Incidentally, Heather needed to take care of some business in the Bureau of Commerce and Industry, so it would be great if she could ask for Wade's help to sort things out.

On the other hand, Alex had no choice but to sit down with their son when he saw Heather doing the same.

It's just a meal anyway. He didn't think much about it.

"Heather, what do you do?" Harry asked suddenly.

"The Jennings Corporation," Heather smiled and replied.

"What a coincidence!" Harry exclaimed in surprise.

"Are you from there as well? Which department are you at?" Heather stared at Harry in surprise because she never thought that he would be just an ordinary worker.

The reason why she thought that way was because the only employees she wasn't familiar with were the ordinary workers.

"No. Harry has a business management degree from Oxford, so how could he even work in a small company like yours?" Ginny said smugly.

What she really meant was that her boyfriend was exceptionally talented, so he couldn't care less about a small company like Heather's. With that sentence, she implicitly belittled Heather.

Graduates from normal colleges like you can only work in small companies like the Jennings Corporation.

Heather understood what Ginny implied, but she only smiled in response.

Even without Ginny's ridicule, Heather knew that the Jennings Corporation was in hot water right now. 61% of its shares were already acquired by the Four Seas Corporation, so she could no longer be in control of the company anymore.

"I applied for the vice manager position in the Project Management Department and I was only accepted yesterday. I heard that the Jennings Corporation was acquired by the Four Seas Corporation, so..." Harry explained.

He just wanted to build some rapport with Heather, but he never thought that Ginny would misinterpret his intentions.

"Haha. We can be considered colleagues now." Heather flashed a slight smile.

Harry chuckled a little before continuing, "The Four Seas Corporation's boss really is wealthy. I heard that he is going to invest at least ten billion to poach loyal customers from its three other competitors. Ginny, you're going to the interview tomorrow, right? I hope you can make it."

"Are you underestimating me? I'm more than capable to be the Director's secretary!" Ginny cocked her eyebrows proudly.

Meanwhile, Alex took a look at Ginny as he remained silent.

He asked the Human Resource Department to hire two new secretaries for him. Originally, Kate was supposed to be one of the secretaries, but she was transferred to the Marketing Department instead.

He leaned on the couch quietly as he drank his tea while listening to Heather, Harry, and Ginny discuss about him and his company. A strange feeling arose in his heart.

Meanwhile, Harry only smiled in response at Ginny's boast and she was a little bummed because she wanted Harry to brag along with her.

"Heather, where is your husband working now?" the bored Ginny asked.

"I'm unemployed." Alex shrugged and replied before Heather could.

"Yikes. It looks like you're addicted to living off your wife," Ginny mocked.

Harry gaped in surprise as he stared at Alex quizzically.

Is that guy really a parasite to his wife?

"Well, it takes some skill to be able to do that. Do you really think anyone will be cut out for that?" Alex chuckled, unashamed of himself.

"Fine, you win. What else can I say." Ginny scoffed. I can't believe there are people like this. Absolutely revolting.

"Dude, you shouldn't be thinking this way. As a healthy man, why do you want to give up on your dignity and leech off your wife?"

Harry saw that his girlfriend was enraged by Alex, so he frowned and tried to help Ginny get her point across.

However, Alex only shrugged in response.

“Since Heather’s my friend, I’ll ask Harry to help you find a job at the Four Seas Corporation,” Ginny said to Alex with a clearly condescending tone.

She actually didn’t intend to ask Harry to help Alex look for a job. She just wanted to humiliate Alex.

Heather was speechless, but she didn’t want to address Ginny’s patronizing behavior either. She just pretended as if she didn’t know anything.

On the other hand, Alex was amused because he just knew that Ginny invited them to have a meal together to deliberately stir up trouble.

I’ll play along with them since they want to act like total idiots.

“Alright. Thank you so much!” Alex pretended like he was looking forward to the proposition.

“But you don’t have any skills, and you only have a degree from a common university, so I’m afraid that you need to start from a part-time job.” Harry understood what Ginny meant, so he smiled and said.

“You’re quite tall, so maybe you can be arranged to be a doorman.”

Ginny laughed derisively because she thought that a douchebag like Alex was only smart enough to be a doorman.

“You’re right. Alex’s physique is quite suited for the role of a security guard. When I go to work tomorrow, I’ll arrange for you to be a guard.” Harry chuckled.

Heather frowned slightly because she thought that Harry and Ginny were crossing the line.

However, she knew that Alex was no saint as well, so she chose to remain silent.

“Alright! Thank you, Harry. Let me treat you to this meal.” Alex smiled ‘gratefully’.

“Thanks then! Harry will help you take care of the rest.”

Ginny glanced mockingly at Alex. She didn't mind footing the bill, but she felt an odd sense of satisfaction because she could take advantage of Alex.

“No problem. You haven't ordered yet, right?” Alex nodded and asked.

“No. The star of the show today is Wade, so we'll order after he arrives,” Ginny replied.

At that moment, Ginny's phone rang, so she took the call outside. After a brief moment, she came back with another young man.

The young man was 175cm tall, and he was dressed formally. Compared to the casually dressed Alex, he seemed more respectable than Alex.

He was none other than Wade Larson, the Section Chief of the Bureau of Commerce and Industry.

When Wade saw that Heather and Alex were there too, he frowned unwittingly.

“You're here too.” Wade sized them up and said in an ambiguous tone.

“Yeah. We're here.” Alex smiled subtly when he took a look at Wade.

Wade Larson. I heard from Heather that he kept pestering her in high school, but he gave up when he found out that Walt was courting her too in university.

“Mr. Larson, I heard from Ginny that they invited you for a meal, so we joined in on the fun too. We hope you don't mind,” Heather said politely.

“What nonsense, Heather! Of course I wouldn't mind.” Wade smiled and replied, even though he never expected Heather and Alex's company.

He gave up on courting Heather back then, but he still felt frustrated because she married a piece of garbage like Alex.

That was why Alex didn't make a good impression.

However, as a government official, he learned to keep a low profile, so he wouldn't show his displeasure even if he disliked someone.

“Waiter. Please take our order.” Alex didn't want to drag things any longer because Wade had already arrived. He knew that this meal was going to be a very boring one, so he just wanted to get it over and done with.

A hint of revolt flashed in Wade's eyes when he looked at Alex. I just don't get why Heather would fall for such an ill-mannered man!

"By the way, there's a reunion party for our high school mates the day after tomorrow. Did anyone tell you about it?" Wade asked Heather.

He was the one who suggested the reunion party while another classmate of his organized it. Truth be told, he never intended to tell Heather about it before today.

However, he changed his mind now because he wanted Heather to regret choosing a douchebag like Alex over him.

Heather shook her head.

"Well, now you knew. Be there or be square!" Wade said.

"Alright. It's been a long time since I caught up with my high school friends anyway." Heather nodded in approval.

"Alex, you can tag along too. Attendees are allowed to bring along their family members." Wade turned towards Alex once more with a mocking glance.

Alex could see through Wade's intentions, so he smiled and replied, "Is it free of charge? I'll go if it is."

Finding out the Billionaire Chapter 100 Keep Acting Like Fools

At that moment, Wade, Ginny, and Harry chuckled coldly because their impression of Alex became even worse now.

Alex took note of their expressions as he scoffed without them noticing.

On the other hand, Heather frowned out of disappointment.

"Don't worry. You don't have to pay a single cent for this reunion party." Even though Wade was smiling, he felt an overwhelming sense of disgust.

Is this the man Heather fancied back then?

I will show her how useless he is and make her regret marrying a piece of garbage like him!

“Alex, you said you wanted to treat us to this meal, but you probably can’t even afford it. It’s fine. I’ll just foot the bill.” Ginny was afraid that Alex couldn’t afford the meal and spoil Wade’s mood as a result.

“It’s alright! Harry is helping me look for a job, so it’s only natural that I treat you to this meal.” Alex looked as if he was placed in a tough spot.

“Hm? Is Harry helping Alex look for a job? Alex, are you currently unemployed?” Wade laughed.

“Yeah. Mr. Larson, maybe you can help me find a job too!”

“Coincidentally, our department is hiring, but the admissions test is quite difficult, so you might not pass. Oh, but there’s a vacancy as a janitor, and no tests are required for that. If you’re interested, I can help to refer you there.” Wade chuckled.

What he was insinuating was that Alex didn’t have the chops to pass the test to be a civil servant. In fact, he hinted that Alex even needed his help in order to apply for a job as a janitor.

In short, he was patronizing Alex and aggrandizing himself.

When Ginny and Harry heard that, they burst into a peal of sardonic laughter.

On the other hand, Heather sighed because she didn’t have a clue as to what Alex was planning.

“All workers deserve to be respected. Mr. Larson, is the idea of working as a janitor very funny to you?” Alex stared at Wade in amusement.

Wade was stunned as his expression darkened because he never expected to be outwitted by Alex.

As a government official, his reputation would be tarnished forever if their incriminating conversation leaked out.

Harry seemed to realize the severity of the issue too, so he quickly changed the subject. “Alex, you don’t have to pay for this meal today. Come to the Four Seas Corporation the day after tomorrow and I’ll get someone to hire you as a security guard.”

“Alright. Thank you so much, Harry!” Alex chuckled.

“You’re welcome. Let’s dig in!”

With a smile on his face, Harry toasted Wade instead of Alex.

“Mr. Larson, a toast for your success!”

Wade then raised his glass as well. “Likewise.”

After the toast, they were engaged in banter while Alex and Heather were completely ignored.

Even Ginny only toasted Wade too, leaving Alex and Heather unattended.

Heather felt somewhat embarrassed and uncomfortable at their behavior.

They are so rude!

She had originally wanted to catch up with Wade, but he didn't seem interested in talking to her.

Heather sat there feeling awkward because Ginny and the rest didn't include her in their conversation. On the other hand, Alex wasn't affected at all as he enjoyed his meal along with his son.

Heather shook her head in disappointment when she saw how Alex ate so voraciously.

“You still haven't applied for the membership here, right?” Wade asked Ginny.

“Yeah. A deposit of half a million is required for that, and it's no small amount.”

Only members of Happy Living were allowed to reserve rooms, so a lot of customers applied for the membership despite the hefty price.

“I know the manager here, Louis. I can send him a message and ask him to reduce the amount of deposit you need to fork out.”

“Alright! Thank you in advance.”

Ginny's eyes sparkled in excitement. She didn't frequent this place, but Harry was an executive in the Four Seas Corporation and she was applying for a position there as well, so she needed a place to entertain her customers. That was why it was necessary for her to apply for a membership at Happy Living.

If we had the membership cards today, we wouldn't have invited Wade for dinner at the booth outside.

It's definitely more appropriate to invite someone to a private room than a booth outside.
