

Chapter 33 Can't Wait To See You Cry

Nathaniel walked out of the restaurant, lips tightly pursed and uttering no word.

Flynn had no other option but to call his men to let go of the two people he just locked up.

Susan and Richard were trembling in the dark room.

Susan couldn't believe Lucinda knew a powerful man like Nathaniel. The jealousy in her heart even intensified.

Lucinda was just an orphan who was raised in an orphanage. And she was even a divorcee!

How could someone like her deserve to be backed up by so many outstanding men in Forden?

Jealousy aside, Susan was more scared at that point.

She was scared of what Nathaniel would do to them.

Suddenly, the light switched on, and they almost went blind because of the brightness of the light.

They shuddered with fear, expecting the worst. But before they could even plead for mercy, Flynn's men untied them.

Flynn's men then left in group.

They didn't even spare a glance at them.

The both exchanged glances, perplexed.

What was happening?

How could they have released them so easily?

Richard frantically dialed his friend's number to ask about what happened, while Susan leaned in, trying to listen.

But to their dismay, Harry's phone was switched off.

He wasn't able to reach him.

Feeling apprehensive about Nathaniel's next move, they decided to leave the place and go their separate ways for the time being. Who knew if Nathaniel would regret his decision and come after them again?

Once back home, Susan called Melody, who informed her that Harry and Holden had been arrested.

Melody was pissed and asked sternly, "What on earth did you do? What exactly happened?"

"Nathaniel Roberts from the Roberts Group overheard my discussion with Mr. Chandler. We were caught. I think he contacted the police to capture Mr. Wong and Mr. Lank."

Susan couldn't help but be baffled. She questioned Melody, "But I still don't know why Nathaniel called the police on Mr. Wong and Mr. Lank but let Mr. Chandler and me go."

Melody took a moment to think before responding.

"I will send someone to investigate it thoroughly. In the meantime, keep a close eye on that woman."

"Okay."

After ending the call, Susan turned around and wrapped her arms around the man beside her.

He was in his forties and held her tightly, looking at her with lustful eyes. "I think the new girl is pretty good. Why do you hate her so much?"

Susan pushed him away with disgust.

"How could you say such a thing? You swore to help me get a promotion, but that woman stole the opportunity. You think she's pretty? Do you also like her?"

She then thought about something and continued, "And the car you gave me, it was a second-hand BMW! Do you think I'm so cheap that I deserve only a used car?"

The man was lost for words but tried to console her in a gentle tone. "Of course not. You are the most beautiful woman in my eyes. I didn't have a lot of money at the time, but I promise to take you out and buy you a good car soon."

Susan snorted to show her displeasure.

"Fine, if you want that position so badly, I'll help you out. We can both pick on her at the meeting tomorrow. Being new, she won't know how to handle it and will end up embarrassing herself in front of everyone. And soon enough, you'll be the new chief artist manager."

"Now you're talking." Susan was satisfied.

The man nodded, lust glinting in his eyes. "Well, honey, I've helped you out a lot. Don't I deserve a little reward?"

Susan rolled her eyes. "You are super annoying!"

The next morning, Susan drove to the company feeling incredibly pleased with herself.

As she stepped into the elevator, she coincidentally ran into Lucinda. Unable to resist taking a jab, Lucinda teased,

"Well, look who's here. You look good. You must have slept well last night."

Susan shot Lucinda a scornful glance. "I slept like a baby. It's too bad you couldn't say the same. I'm sure you didn't get any sleep last night."

As she thought back to the events of the previous night, Susan couldn't help but smile. Lucinda was drugged and must have been raped by Harry and Holden. They were probably caught by the police after Nathaniel stumbled upon them. That was probably why they didn't get a chance to send the video to her.

She thought it made total sense, and then gazed at Lucinda with even more ridicule.

After all, Lucinda was nothing but a cheap whore who had been raped and filmed.

With her chin held high, Susan approached Lucinda and spoke in a sarcastic tone. "Miss Ross, I would like us to be best of friends. Sadly, you're about to lose your job, so we won't be able to work together from now on."

Lucinda smirked and looked her up and down like she was a fool. "Really?"

Ding.

The elevator stopped.

Lucinda turned forward and exited first.

Looking at her walk away haughtily, Susan gnashed her teeth. "I can't wait to see you cry!"

Angle Intl held a general meeting monthly to discuss the overall work plan for each project team.

The directors and higher-ups were seated in the first half of the table, while employees like Susan were seated in the second half, a good five seats away from Lucinda.

Directors, leaders, and employees trickled in one by one until Cyrus arrived and the meeting officially commenced.

Each department's leader gave their reports, leaving Susan feeling bored and restless. Finally, it was Lucinda's turn to speak.

Susan's heart raced as she clenched her fists, eager for a good show.

However, as she scanned the board area, her excitement turned to confusion.

The man she was expecting to see was nowhere to be found. And there wasn't even a seat reserved for him as all seats were occupied.

What was going on?!

Everything went well last night. They even went to work together in the morning.

Susan was at a loss for words. She turned and met Lucinda's gaze. Lucinda gave her a sly smile and turned away.

Her smile, though icy and alluring, felt like a taunt to Susan.

She couldn't shake the feeling that Lucinda was somehow involved in the mysterious absence of the man she was expecting to see.

Susan struggled with her thoughts for a while. Then she eventually caved and leaned over to the person next to her, whispering, "Do you know why Mr. Gerry isn't here?"

The man's face immediately twisted in discomfort as he waved his hands defensively. "I don't know who Mr. Gerry is. Don't ask me about him."

Susan was taken aback.

What was with the cryptic reaction? Why did it seem like that something was wrong?

Undeterred, Susan turned to the person on her left, only to be met with yet another denial before even asking. "I don't know anything."

Susan was beyond confused at this point.

Lucinda took the stage for her speech. "Recently, we've discussed with Visual Point about the casting of their new play. After so much debate, we've decided to have Dwayne and Baron take on the two male lead roles."

"Wait!"

Susan's hand shot up, cutting Lucinda off. "When did this take place? Why am I not aware? We were just discussing last night."

Lucinda furrowed her brow. "What did you discuss last night? With whom?"

"It's..."

Susan froze. She couldn't really talk about last night, or else she'd get herself into trouble as well.
