

Chaos broke loose as the people drew their own conclusions on the matter. Reporters swarmed around the stage, firing countless questions at Judson. ①

"Is that the truth?"

"How could the people behind the radioactive materials conveniently die in the explosion? Is it really just an accident?"

Judson suddenly broke into a grin. "Of course it wasn't an accident."

Everyone gasped in shock. Judson's words attracted the attention of everyone in the room.

The reporters were all excited by his controversial statement.

"What do you mean by that?"

"If it wasn't an accident, then what was it?"

"What secrets are Benton Group hiding?"

Judson's eyes turned cold. "What I said just now was Benton Group's official statement, but I never said it was the truth."

"Are you implying that the Benton Group is lying? So what's the truth?"

"As the person in charge of Benton Group's branch factory in France, I shouldn't be saying this. But as a man of integrity, my conscience has been weighing on me, so I've decided to tell you all the truth today!" Judson winced, as though it was difficult for him to make up his mind.

Watching Judson's performance on the stage, Annabel's expression darkened.

Chapter 127 What Is the Truth

As expected, the real reason why Judson wanted to hold a press conference was to throw Benton Group under the bus.

However, he had underestimated both Rupert and Annabel.

Judson was nothing but a contemptible scoundrel.

Annabel sneered inwardly. He could be complacent for a few more minutes.

Judson held the attention of every person in the room. He spoke slowly, but clearly. "Actually, the real reason why the jewelry contain radioactive materials is because Benton Group intentionally used inferior raw materials to cut costs. To cover the truth, they pinned all the blame on the two innocent warehouse keepers. As for the explosion, it was no accident; it was also deliberately set-up by Benton Group. Obviously, they wanted to destroy the evidence. After all, the dead could not expose the truth!"

As soon as Judson said this, all chaos broke loose in the conference room.

After all, Benton Group was one of the leading enterprises in the business world. How could it do such a cruel thing for the sake of profits? It was simply unheard of.

But considering Judson's identity, it was unlikely he was lying.

After all, Judson was in charge of Benton Group's branch factory in France. He had no reason to discredit his own company.

Was Benton Group so evil?

Judson seemed to be satisfied with the reporters' reaction. He looked around and finally fixed his eyes on Annabel, who was sitting inconspicuously in the corner. "And the people who started this was none other than Rupert Benton, the CEO of Benton Group, and Annabel Hewitt, the person in charge of the Ice and Fire project!" ①

The reporters immediately turned to stare at Annabel. All eyes were on her.

Annabel took this as her cue to stand up. She walked to the stage and asked, "Judson, are you willing to own up to every word you said just now?"
