Rupert. Their eyes met for a split second.

The storm was finally over. Annabel felt as though a weight had been lifted off her shoulders.

All the negative press about Benton Group soon disappeared.

Now, it was Love Jewelry that was under fire, whereas Rupert and Annabel were worshipped on the Internet.

"Love Jewelry has no morals! Benton Group deserves our support, not them!"

"Judson got what was coming. But Marilyn still needs to be taught a lesson!"

"Oh, my God! Rupert is so handsome and Annabel is so beautiful. They're a perfect match!"

"I support Rupert and Annabel as a couple! I hope they stay together forever!"

Lying in the hotel bed, Annabel was scrolling through the overwhelming amount of positive comments. She couldn't help but smile.

She and Rupert... Were they really a perfect match?

"What're you looking at?" A low, magnetic voice interrupted her thoughts.

Why was Rupert here?

"Nothing!" Annabel said quickly, shoving her phone under the pillow.

"Is that so?" Rupert had glanced at the screen of Annabel's phone before he even spoke, so he knew the truth. "Shall we give our fans some reward?"

Annabel was stunned. "What?"

"Do you want to disappoint them?" Rupert looked at Annabel with a sly smile.

Annabel pursed her lips unhappily.

This man was so shameless!

"I told you I'd think about it and give you an answer in two months," she said, rolling her eyes.

Rupert suddenly leaned closer and whispered in Annabel's ear, "Don't make me wait too long."

His warm breath tickled Annabel.

Flustered, Annabel quickly changed the topic. "When are we leaving?"

"A few days from now," Rupert replied calmly.

"Don't you have work to do back home?" Annabel asked in surprise.

Rupert smiled and waved his hand dismissively. "Finley will take care of things while I'm away. I haven't recovered fully yet. I'll leave after resting for a few more days."

"Well, okay..."

Annabel was a little taken aback. She didn't expect that a workaholic like Rupert would be willing to rest.

After a while, Annabel glanced at her watch deliberately. It was late, but Rupert showed no intention of leaving.

She cleared her throat and said frankly, "Rupert, I need to go to bed soon. Go back to your own room."

Rupert's expression darkened. This woman was always eager to drive him away.

Sure enough, Annabel stood up and started dragging Rupert to the door. In the end, Rupert sighed helplessly and said, "See you tomorrow."

Finley, who was standing by the door, watched with amusement as Annabel pushed Rupert out of the room.

Rupert begrudgingly retreated to his room. Seeing that Finley had a teasing smile on his face, he frowned and asked, "What's the matter?"

Finley smiled and handed a book to Rupert. "Mr. Benton, I think this suits you."

"What's this?" Rupert's gaze landed on the cover.

The title read, "Tips on How to Flirt With Girls."
