

Chapter 19 He wanted to make it up to her

“Because I did not want to be involved in your marriage.” Ann looked down and was afraid that Steward knew the real reason why she had left him.

“Are you telling the truth? Didn’t you know Nora and I hadn’t got married at that time?” Steward sneered at her and did not know why he kept questioning her. He had already known the truth.

He did not love her much and she had been cheating him for a long time. But the woman who really loved him got really hurt because of him and Ann.

He remembered Nora left him for a period of time after he had the car accident. At that time, he thought Nora had changed her mind and did not want to marry him. However, when she appeared before him again, she said firmly she wanted to marry him.

“Steward, let me be your eyes and take me to your heart!” said Nora as a mature woman but not his childhood playmate.

Steward did not remember what he had replied to her. He was very upset and totally lost his temper. He did not take any medicine on purpose at that time and vented his rage on her.

Now, he thought, he was going to make it up to Nora. He believed he’d got time.

He said to Ann, "You, don't deserve what Nora had given you. You must give it back."

Looking at his gloomy face, Ann was a little bit frightened and started to be worried about her new kidney.

"No, you can't do this to me... The kidney will be a waste if it is taken away from my body. I am sure Nora doesn't want her kidney to be useless." begged Ann.

"I know that. Remember, take care of her kidney and one day come to her, making amends for your selfishness," said Steward coldly.

Steward rearranged his collar and walked out of the door. He must find Nora and beg for her forgiveness.

After he arrived home, he took a shower and then drove his car to his parents' house.

On the way, he gave a call to Gabriel and swore with a lot of bad words. Gabriel did not care but carried on by snorting, "How were your feelings when together with your former lover? Steward, I am going to persuade Mrs. Mandel to accept Ann. You'd better try your best to make Ann pregnant so that you guys are more likely to get married."

"You shut up! It is none of your business!" yelled Steward.

Steward hung up the phone. What Gabriel said reminded him of Nora's baby. He felt more anxious and wanted to know how she was doing.

When he arrived at his parents' house, his mother was still angry at his divorce from Nora.

She sneered at him, "A surprise seeing you here."

Steward seldom came back to his parents' home since he got married. Two months ago, he and Nora went back for dinner and at that time she thought they had gotten closer and Steward was finally moved by Nora.

But since they had gotten divorced, she had little hope of their marriage. She would still treat Nora as her daughter.

As for Steward, she was very disappointed in him.

"Mom, did Nora contact you these days?" asked Steward.

His mother thought for a while. Looking at his worn-out face, she said, "Did you lose touch with her? She must be avoiding you! That's a good thing. Since she is single again, I am going to set her up on great dates."

Steward frowned and became more worried about Nora. She did not tell anything to his mother. But she used to have a close relationship with her.

Nora must be very angry at him so she didn't want to have anything to do with him.

Steward stood as if without a soul. After seeing this, Mrs. Mandel said to him with a cold face, "Since you had recovered, go back to the company to share your father's burden so that he could spend more time with me. Did you hear me? Steward! Steward!”

Steward, with a pale face, walked out of the gate without hearing anything around him. He received a call from the private detective, “Mr. Mandel, I had found out Mia's address. She lived in Building No.3, Oak Avenue.”

He arrived at Mia's place soon and before knocking on the door, he took a deep breath.

Mia thought it was the deliveryman so she opened the door without asking. When she realized that it was Steward, it was too late to close the door.
