

Chapter 41 A dangerous moment

“Wait a minute. What’s the matter with your eyes? You’ve lost your sight?” Ann found something wrong and thought, “Why is she blind?”

“I don’t know... I don’t know what you are saying. Steward is my husband and he only loves me!”

“Do you remember Steward took something from your body for me?”

Ann moved her gun to Nora’s waist with a tap.

Nora was very scared of her, but she twisted her small face and laughed by instinct.

“I feel itchy! Steward won’t do that to me! You are lying!”

Ann gritted her teeth and growled, “Nora, I am Ann Edith! Don’t you remember me? Stop playing tricks with me!”

The doctor saw that Ann gave her attention to Nora, so he quietly moved his body, leaning against the wall to try to sneak out.

He thought, “That woman is so crazy and has lost her mind.”

“Stop and stand still,” Ann threatened him and said, “Do you still want your legs?”

Her gun pointed at the doctor’s leg. If he tried to run away again, she might shoot his legs.

“OK... At first, I need to give both of you the anesthetic.”

“There’s no need for the anesthetic. I will kill her right now, and you take the kidney from her immediately!”

The doctor was astonished and persuaded, “You can’t do this! I have no vessel for medical use, and I need to give her an anesthetic so that her kidney will be useful for you. If you kill her right now, the kidney will not be viable for you...”

“Oh, yeah?” Ann squinted.

“Yes...Yes. So you should let me give her an anesthetic.”

Then the doctor took out an anesthetic with an excessive amount.

At that moment, someone broke the door open and shouted, “Are you here? Nora!”

Just then, the doctor ran toward Ann and injected her with the anesthetic.

Ann felt the pain and shot him in his shoulder and then he kept bleeding.

The shot and a scream of Nora made Steward shocked.

He broke into the room and he felt relieved when he found Nora was not hurt.

He asked Ann with a gloomy face, “Ann, don’t do anything rash! I will help you find a suitable kidney around the world. I promise!”

“I don’t believe you! I want Nora’s kidney! Only hers!” Ann bit her lips. Her vision got blurred and she started feeling cold.

Her waist hurt badly and was urgent to get a new healthy kidney.

“Steward, I am scared...” Nora said.

When Steward heard Nora, he ran toward her regardless of the danger.

Ann lifted her gun and shot at him.

At that moment, Steward was shot but still held Nora in his arms tightly.

The warm blood was on Nora’s face and she was shocked to faint without saying anything.

“Bang!” she fired another shot.

But this time she missed because the anesthetic was really hitting her.

She had no strength to fire another shot and she fell to the ground, dead.

Because her body was already in a bad situation, the large dose of anesthetic made her even worse.

At the hospital

Steward was in the Emergency Room. He was shot in the place only half centimetre from his heart so the situation was quite unpredictable.

His father kept pacing outside the operating room, and his mother cried so hard.

Mrs. Mandel hated Ann and thought why she kept badgering him.

At the ward, Nora slowly opened her eyes.

She still could not see anything but this time she gained her memories.

Her tears silently slid down her cheeks, and her hands clutched the sheets.

She thought fate was joking with her. After losing her memories, she got back together with Steward, and now she restored her memories.

“If only I never remembered it for the rest of my life, or I hadn't lost it in the first place.” Nora thought. Especially now...