

Chapter 44 It's too late

Steward mourned with a tight voice and grabbed her hand in a hurry. He took out a blue diamond ring and put it on her ring finger.

“Nora, please. Please don't do this to me. I still have feelings for you and I want to be with you... Can you give me a second chance? I picked this ring for you myself. It's different!”

She could notice that his body was shaking and she also felt very sad.

She struggled free of his grip and then took off the ring, throwing it away. Then she stood up and reached out her hands to Mia.

Mia immediately took her in her arms.

Gabriel hurriedly picked up the diamond ring.

Nora shook her head and said firmly, “That two years of marriage was a disaster for me. I would never get back together with you!”

Steward's heart was in great pain and his leg was weak. He held Nora's legs, begging.

“Nora, please give me a chance to get you back! I only need one chance! I will do anything if you can give me a chance, please!”

Steward did not care what he was doing. If Nora could give him a chance, he would kneel down for a long time.

This scene soon caused the crowd to gather and watch.

"The man even kneels down before his wife. What mistake did he make?"

"Two people in love can go through anything."

"Women are soft inside. If she was so determined, the man must have done many bad things."

"It seems that that woman was blind."

...

Nora did not expect Steward, a proud man, to kneel down before her.

But she only felt tired and wanted all this to end.

"We are over. It's too late for you to say this. Now I am going to get the abortion so you can leave. The sooner, the better."

Steward was like a soulless man and released her.

Nora and Mia went into the operating room.

Gabriel shouted to the crowd, "Just go, you people. Don't give us more trouble."

When he found Steward was still sitting on the floor, staring blankly, he was going to pull him up.

Steward stood up and sat on the chair where Nora had just sat, saying, "The surgery would do harm to her body so I will wait for her and take care of her after the operation."

He waited until the sky turned dark.

When he asked a nurse about Nora, he knew that

Nora and Mia had already left.

Gabriel saw that Steward was in frustration, so he comforted him, "What you need to do now is to get fully recovered and win her back."

Steward nodded and thought he still had time and would wait for her for the rest of his life.

After half a month, Steward was discharged from the hospital. When he saw the keys left by the door, he got a little nervous.

He went upstairs only to find that Nora had packed almost all her stuff and nothing was left in the room except the plum wine.

Steward got the lid off and drank more than ever. He became dizzy and went to the Hill's.

Mrs. Hill did not know what to do but asked the servant to get Nora in here.

Since Nora had made up her mind to divorce, Mrs. Hill would accept the result without asking the reasons.

Mrs. Hill was confused and thought it was a pity. But she also thought it was useless to ask the reasons for their marriage.

It was almost early in the morning. It was not polite for Steward to get so drunk and come here.

Nora came with her guide dog "Danny", a Labrador that helped a lot in her daily life.

When she was approaching, a strong smell of alcohol made her want to throw up.

“Steward, are you losing your mind? Do you know the danger of drink-driving?”

He shook his head and explained, “Don’t be mad at me, Nora. I came here by taxi.”

“You have just recovered. What drink attracts you so much?”

“The plum wine you made,” Steward’s eyes brightened and he staggered toward her. He gave her a big hug, smiling, “Nora, I know you still care about me. Right?”

Nora couldn’t bear it any longer and spat out on him.