

Chapter 184 - Dr.Luna

Wyatt sighed and leaned his head on his father's shoulder. He soaked in a minute of his father's solace. "How-"

"Jason sent us a letter explaining everything. Why didn't you tell us when you visited?" Tyler held his boy tightly in his arms. He could only imagine the amount of pain he had been in.

"You guys have enough to worry about with Rhea. I didn't need to bother you over something small like this." Wyatt said as he pulled away from his dad. He saw his Uncle Tristan and Jason walking away from them. Giving him some privacy with his father.

Tyler scoffed loudly and then furrowed his brows down to his son. "Something small like this?! There is nothing small about this. It's okay to be crushed. That was your mate you lost Wyatt. This is a big deal. You need to tell us. You are our child too and just as important. We want to know about everything that is going on in your life. Do I need to move back here?"

Now it was Wyatt's time to scoff. "Don't treat me like a child dad. I am the Alpha of this pack now."

"Then act like it. An Alpha doesn't have to hold his feelings in. You have a support system. Use it. You can be strong for the pack but still utilize those around you. From now on, you make sure you tell me what is going on. Or I promise I will move right back into the pack house and hover over your shoulder."

Wyatt shook his head and chuckled. "Alright dad. I get it. But remember, I'm the Alpha here not you. You're the fairy king now."

"Right. But I am still your father. And a father trumps you being the Alpha." Tyler chuckled and patted his son on the shoulder. "Now, honestly. How are you doing?"

Wyatt heaved out a sigh and looked upwards. "It still stings to be honest. I'm a bit bitter over it. And I feel like. Well, I feel like there is an emptiness inside of me. Blaze has gone quiet. He rarely speaks now even when shifting he keeps his personality dormant. He is hurting too. I'm going to keep moving forward though. I've got the pack to worry about. And these demon wolves are keeping me busy. Eventually, I'll have to try to find my own Luna. I don't have the time for that now."

Tyler looked into his son's grey eyes. It was like looking into his own. His eyes looked a bit tired and had lost some of their shine. But he was strong. And he would get past this. "Your wolf will get better in time. So will you. Who knows, you may have a second chance mate out there.” He was proud of his son and how well he was handling being rejected. For some wolves they go mad. Hearing about the demon wolves had him a bit apprehensive though. Their leader Abaddon had been after his mate Lilly twenty years ago, and now he was after their daughter Rhea. “Tell me about these demon wolves you are having trouble with. Do you think any of them were Abaddon?”

“No, but I think they are part of his pack. I think they were checking to see if Rhea was here. But we took care of them. I think this put us on his radar though because since then demon wolves have been caught patrolling the area.” Wyatt rubbed his temple. “It’s only a matter of time before we have another run in. I upped the training sessions among the pack. We will be ready for them.”

“Just be careful. Remember Abaddon has wolfsbane venom. I’m sure he isn’t the only demon wolf with that.” Tyler was taking on his fatherly role trying to guide his son.

Wyatt chuckled. “Dad, don’t worry. I have things taken care of. Remember I am part fairy too. I found out recently that I am also immune to wolfsbane.” Wyatt looked back and saw Tristan and Jason talking seriously in the distance. He felt a weird pit in his stomach as he looked back to his dad. “How is Rhea?”

Tyler took in a breath of air and rubbed the back of his neck. “You’re not going to like hearing this.”

“What?” Wyatt’s voice came out in a low growl. What happened to his sister?

“Rhea isn’t in Elysium anymore. She is living in the west dragon kingdom.”

“Calm down. I don’t like it either. But your mother insisted on this. It is one of the safest places for her. They don’t want to give her back and... well there is another thing too. She has a mate there.” Tyler hesitated to bring the last part up knowing that Wyatt just lost his.

“Wait what? A dragon mate?!”

Tyler chuckled. “She doesn’t know it yet. They were hoping for her wolf to come out to see if she also recognizes him as her mate. You know some mates are not mutual. It happens.”

“Who is her mate?” Wyatt felt irritated at the fact of Rhea being in a strange place with dragons he did not know. It was different when she was with their parents.

“Keep this secret for now. Leviathan claims she is his mate.”

Wyatt stood there with wide eyes. His sister’s deity was her mate?! He at least knew Leviathan. Having met him often as his sister’s summon. He was also very considerate of Rhea and very protective. Thinking back on it his reactions made sense as her mate. “Is she there all alone? What about Cody?”

“Cody and Kelsie are there with her. You know Cody isn’t leaving her side. Just like Jason would never leave yours. Honestly, because Cody is there I am able to relax a bit over it. And knowing that Leviathan is with her... I know she is well protected. Still, I wish I could keep all of my kids with me. I worry about all of you.” Tyler admitted with a side grin. No matter what they were his children. They would always be his little kids.

“You don’t have to worry dad. We are doing good here. I’m taking great care of the pack too. And I’m okay... I’m going to be okay. I’m still not happy about Rhea. I want her back here where I can watch over her.”

“Don’t worry. Cody won’t let anything happen to her.” Jason said as he and Tristan walked back up to them.

“TYLER!!!” Kade ran in from the distance and collided with him. “What are you doing here?”

“Hey I thought you were going with Sam and Susan?” Jason asked, seeing the old Beta there.

“As soon as I heard Sam was going I ditched out. I don’t want to go shopping.” Kade smiled and then patted Tyler on the back hard. “It’s great to see you.”

“How is my son handling things here? Be truthful. Does he need roughed up some?” Tyler winked over at his son as he smiled at the man who was his old Beta.

“He’s doing a great job Tyler. It is really good to see you. Caleb and Cedric are back at the pack house. They will be stoked.” Kade then reached out and patted Tristan on the arm. “You taking care of our trouble makers?”

“The best I can. You know how Tyler and Lilly are though. Always a handful.” Tristan smirked over at Tyler who only chuckled in response.

“Let’s go back to the pack house. I’m hungry again anyways.” Jason shrugged.

“Me too. What are you feeding us Wyatt?” Kade asked with a big toothy grin.

“Wait. How did I get stuck cooking? We have a pack cook for that.” Wyatt chuckled as the guys all walked back to the pack house together.

“Tyler! Where is Lilly? How’s my fairy queen?” Cedric asked the moment Tyler walked into the door. While Caleb walked up and patted Tyler heavily on the pack.

“Lilly is still in Elysium and she is doing good. I’m good too by the way Cedric.” Tyler gave him a wry smile.

“Well, I can see you are good.” Cedric chuckled and shook his head. “Merida and I have decided to make the move to Elysium. Now that Renee has Sam as her mate, we feel it is time for us to make our move back to the fairy kingdom. Merida has been away from her home for so long and we know it is easy to visit. So let Lilly know we will be seeing her soon.”

“That’s great. I am sure Lilly will be thrilled to hear this news.” Tyler said excitedly.

“Rosa and I want to wait a bit longer. Susan still needs to find her mate and it doesn’t hurt to have a couple experienced past ranking wolves around just in case.” Kade winked over at Wyatt.

Wyatt respected Kade. He respected all of them. Caleb and Cedric too. He might be the Alpha, but he grew up with these men. He trusted them. And he didn’t mind listening to any advice that they may have to offer. He leaned back against the wall and smiled as he watched the older men laughing and teasing each other. It was interesting looking at the past leaders of his pack. It reminded him of his own ranking pack members.

He watched his father laughing as Tristan and Kade had an arm-wrestling match. Kade seemed to think that Tristan had lost his touch. Wyatt smirked already knowing how this match would end.

“You want to arm wrestle me Wyatt?” Jason poked at his brothers’ side as he rested his back against the wall beside him.

“Person against person or are we bringing our animals out in this?” Wyatt raised an eyebrow as he asked.

“Doesn’t matter how we do it. I’ll still be the winner.”

“Is that so?” Wyatt turned looking at his brother.

The door to the pack house suddenly opened. They all turned their attention to the dark haired, green eyed beauty who opened the door.

“Kelsie? What are you doing here?” Wyatt asked with some concern. Kelsie was his sister’s best friend. She was a kelpie, dark fairy who could shift into a water horse, who could also travel instantly through one body of water to the next.

“Kelsie?” Tyler met her halfway and Wyatt was right by his father’s side.

“The queen sent me here. She wanted me to let you know that she went to visit Rhea but she would meet you back in Elysium so not to worry.”

Tyler and Tristan both growled lowly. “She shouldn’t have left without us. What happened? Why did she go to the dragon kingdom?” Tyler sighed in irritation as his grey eyes pinned on the kelpie.

“I don’t know exactly. Rhea was so upset. She was crying. I think she had a vision. She needed her mother.” Kelsie squeezed her hands together and looked into Tyler’s eyes. “I’ve never seen Rhea that upset before.”

Wyatt’s knuckles turned white from clenching his hands. “We need to bring her back here.” He turned his head and looked at his father’s taut face.

“What do you want to do Tyler?” Tristan asked as he walked up to his side.

“Well, Lilly is already there by now. Let’s continue with our visit here. I’m sure Cody will make sure she makes it back alright.” Tyler rubbed his forehead and sighed. He wanted to race off to the dragon kingdom to be by Lilly’s side, but he came to visit with Wyatt. Wyatt needed him too. Just this once he was going to fight the urge to run to Lilly’s side. He turned and looked at Wyatt. “Try to relax. Rhea is okay. Your mom will talk with her and get things sorted out.”

Wyatt scowled and let out a low growl. He felt a warm hand lay on his shoulder and the two sets of grey eyes stared back at each other. His father gave him a small smile and nodded his head. “I understand son. Believe me I do.”

“Kelsie why don’t you stick around for a little bit. I want to write a letter to Rhea and Cody. We were about to eat dinner too. Plus I want to talk with you. I want you to tell me about Rhea and Cody. How they are doing and how they are treated there.” Wyatt figured this was the next best thing. It was to get information from Kelsie.

“I can do that. I know Rhea and Cody would be very happy to get a letter from the both of you.”

“You and Cody still picking on each other?” Jason gave Kelsie a side smile as he watched her roll her eyes.

“He lives to infuriate me.” Kelsie snorted as she crossed her arms.

“Make yourself at home Kelsie. We will talk in a bit.” Wyatt watched Kelsie walk over and sit on the couches. Wyatt looked over at his father. “If anything seems off, anything at all, I am bringing her back here. If Rhea wants to leave, I will bring her here no matter what.”

Tyler smiled. “I know you will son.”Book 3

Chapter 3 Partner

Chapter 185 - Dr.Luna

Wyatt and Tyler sat across from Kelsie as she told them about everything in the dragon kingdom. From what Wyatt could gather, while Rhea missed being with them she was still doing okay. She wasn't being mistreated and was not in any danger. Still, he wanted Rhea to know that if she ever wanted to leave, he would gladly come and get her. He said as much in the note he and Jason wrote to her. They had entrusted their letters to Kelsie to deliver to their siblings.

"Cody is taking good care of our sister then?" Jason asked as he leaned on the arm of the chair.

"That and eating all of the dragon's food supply. Po Panda eats everything." Kelsie rolled her eyes and snorted out a gust of air.

"Sounds like a typical growing shifter to me." Jason shrugged. He had always had a big appetite too.

"If those dragons mistreat her at all bring her here to me. I'll protect her here." Wyatt's stormy eyes pinned against Kelsie.

Kelsie nodded her head. "If those damn lizards do anything to hurt her I'll be bring hell to them. Don't worry. I will look after your sister." She then turned and looked at Jason. "No offense but I know I can do a better job of that than the bottomless pit bear you have for a brother."

"I think you secretly want him." Jason chuckled and winked at Kelsie.

"Why would I? If I wanted garbage I would find a trash can." Kelsie shrugged and Jason let out a low growl.

"Easy there Kelsie. He may be a gluttonous pig but he is still one of my favorite brothers. Besides... you don't think he is charming in his own little way." Jason smirked at Kelsie, raising his eyebrows up towards her.

"He is as charming as a rancid infection." Kelsie snorted and folded her arms across her chest.

Wyatt chuckled. "Thanks for watching over the two of them for me." Regardless of what Kelsie is saying she would protect them both. Sometimes people who are close actually fight a lot. This was the case for Cody and Kelsie.

She looked at Wyatt and nodded with a smile. "Well, I need to be getting back. I don't like leaving Rhea for too long." Kelsie stood up and looked at Wyatt and Tyler making sure it was okay for her to leave.

"We need to be going too. I want to be back when Lilly gets back. I want to hear what is going on." Tyler stood up and looked up to Tristan who nodded in agreement. "Go ahead and go Kelsie. Thank you for delivering the messages for us."

"Yes, thank you Kelsie. Remember if Rhea needs anything to come and get me." Wyatt watched her nod and then left. "I'll walk you out dad."

Wyatt and Jason followed Tristan and Tyler outside where they left their hippogryphs. Tyler stopped and turned to look at his two boys. He frowned slightly and ran his hand through his hair. “Man, I really miss having you guys around. It seems like only yesterday you were a bunch of little kids racing about. I wish I could just take you all with me.”

“Awe Dad.” Jason walked up and wrapped his arms around his father. “We will be able to visit more after we get these demon problems figured out. For now enjoy your kid free vacation because it won’t last long. Wyatt and Rhea will soon be shipping your grandkids for you and mom to raise.” Jason laughed.

“What about you? Are you going to ship us grandkids too?” Tyler asked, giving his son a side grin.

“You know, taking a mate or not is a personal decision for us guardians. I decided that Tyler and Lilly were too much like children for me to ever dream of settling down. My life is complete with them and you kids. It was all I ever wanted. This is the life I chose.” Tristan added seeing Jason getting ready to immediately reject the idea.

“I promise. Whatever decision I make will be my decision and not because I felt forced into it.” Jason wasn’t going to live his life celibate or anything, but he wasn’t sure if he wanted a mate. It just wasn’t usually done among guardians. You can’t have your mate taking priority over your charge. Wyatt would always be his number one priority. That is the way it worked with guardians. They were bound to their person. It was a bond hard to explain. It was strong like a mate bond. A guardian could sense their charge’s feelings and could even take their pain away. It wasn’t like the mate bond in that there was no intimate attraction.

“I know there is a lot going on right now, but take time for yourself too. You have to have a Luna son. And somewhere out there is the perfect one for you. I’m sure of it.” Tyler hugged Wyatt tightly and patted his back. “If you need us, send a fairy messenger. They can get to us quickly. You might be a werewolf, but you are still a fairy prince too. Don’t forget that.”

“Thanks dad. I promise if anything else comes up we will let you know.” Wyatt smiled and then felt himself get strangled in a big bear hug from his side.

“You just need to get roughed up a bit more. Jason here is going easy on you.” Tristan chuckled and then smiled down at Wyatt. “You know your uncle Tristan is always here for you too. So if there is something you can’t tell your old man you just come to me.”

“Pfft, old man.” Tyler rolled his eyes. “We will see you both soon. I love you both.”

“Love you too dad.”

“Love you too dad.”

They both said in unison. They stood there and watched the two hippogryphs fly away, taking the two men with them. Wyatt leaned back on his heels. It was good to see them. He turned and shoved Jason.

“Big mouth.” Wyatt hissed at his brother.

“You were in a slump. I thought for sure you would tell at least dad when we visited, and you didn’t. So, I decided to send him a message and explain what had happened.” Jason shrugged and smiled. “It was nice having them here for a visit wasn’t it?”

Wyatt looked up at the empty sky and nodded. “Yes, it was.” Just as he started to turn to walk back to the pack house a warm air swirled around him. The air played in his air and twirled around his clothes playfully. On the wind a slight giggle was heard. He snapped his head in the direction of the pack border. “Did you hear that?”

Jason stopped from walking and turned to look at Wyatt staring off in the distance. “No, I didn’t hear anything. But I am sensing something. Something strong.” His voice reverberated in a low growl as he took a protective stance near Wyatt.

Wyatt started walking towards the direction of where he heard the sound and a firm hand landed on his shoulder.

“What do you think you are doing?” Jason looked at him astounded. Was his brother seriously going to walk towards something strange away from the safety of the pack.

“I need to see what it is.” The wind gushed over Wyatt again and seemed to gently nudge him towards the sound he had heard. He smirked and tilted his head back to Jason. “You aren’t scared, are you?”

Jason snorted angrily. “Trouble. That’s all you are for me is trouble.” He stomped in front of Wyatt. “Fine let’s go but I am leading the way.”

The two men walked out of the pack territory and paused in an open field. The tall grass tossed back and forth in the breeze. The sunset had an orange glow over the field and in the distance, at the edge of the field, was someone. A girl with green wavy hair stood looking into the forest. She turned her head to the two men and a sweet smile spread over her face. She turned completely and started walking up towards them.

Jason stood in front of Wyatt and growled at the girl. Though his growl did not scare her at all. She kept walking confidently with her cute smile resting on her face. When she was a few feet away from Jason she folded her hands behind her back and leaned forward smiling up at Jason.

“I love your eye color! You’re not afraid of me, are you?” She giggled. Her voice was light and soft. It had such a happy sound to it.

Jason seemed a bit taken back by the girl. A strange power was flowing from her. “Who are you?” He asked cautiously.

The girl giggled and then tilted to the side so that she could see Wyatt. “Are you not going to come and see me? I’ve been waiting for you.”

Jason growled threateningly and stood fully in front of Wyatt to block her view of him. The girl straightened up and giggled. She covered her mouth with her hand and looked into the chocolate eyes in front of her. “You really are protective over him, aren’t you?”

Jason looked at the petite girl in front of him. Her green hair flowed behind her in a ponytail, her eyes were a deep emerald color, she looked to be in her early twenties, and she was very short (maybe only five foot tall). Despite her small stature, a strong power emanated from her body. He watched as she tilted her head to the side as she studied him. Another giggle escaped from her mouth. He watched as she effortlessly leaped into the air and landed on his shoulders. She stood on his shoulders and looked down at the chocolate eyes looking up at her. She was laughing as she looked at his shocked face. “Nothing can get past you right?” She giggled again as she watched his eyes darken.

Jason quickly jolted backwards, and the girl gently leaped back down to the ground. Landing so softly as if she was being carried by the air.

Wyatt put a hand on Jason to stop him from retaliating. This girl didn’t seem like she was there to hurt them. He patted Jason and smiled before he walked beside him. “You have been waiting for me? Why? Who are you?”

The girl beamed and then leaned forward again placing her hands behind her back. “My name is Fujin.” Her sweet voice giggled out as she introduced herself.

“Hmph, well that’s your name. What are you? And what do you want with him?” Jason growled out protectively. He did not know where this nimble creature came from. But she emitted a strong power and she had business with Wyatt. She added up to trouble in his eyes. And no one was going to hurt his brother.

For the first time a small frown formed on her lips. Her deep green eyes looked down at the ground and she kicked at the grass uncomfortably. “Okay, don’t freak out please.” She looked up at the two men who were waiting for her response. “I’m a”, she sighed and clenched her eyes shut, “I’m a wind demon.” She heard a low threatening snarl in front of her and she squinted her eyes open. The storm cloud eyes were looking at her with interest while the dark Hershey eyes were glaring at her angrily.

“What do you want with him, Demon?” Jason said in a demeaning tone.

Fujin looked at Jason and bit her lip. “Well, you don’t have to be so grumpy with me Mr. Bear. I didn’t even do anything.” She folded her arms across her chest and furrowed her eyes at Jason. And everyone gives demons a hard time.

“Easy Jason.” Wyatt said gently. He looked into the shining emeralds and took a step forward. “What is it that you want with me?”

A sweet smile raised on the girl and she took a shy step forward looking at Wyatt. “I have come for you Wyatt. I am here to be your partner.” The girl giggled as she watched his confused face in front of her.

“I’m sorry. Your partner?” Wyatt asked making sure he heard her right. He watched as the small girl walked closer to him.

“Yes, Wyatt. I am your partner. From here on out we will fight together.” Fujin lifted up in the air and Wyatt’s eyes widened as she planted her lips onto his. Book 3

A warm gust of air raced through Wyatt. The girl pulled away from his lips and stood there smiling at him. Wyatt took a small step back and studied the girl. What was going on? He turned and looked at Jason who had menacing eyes on her. Something was rippling through him. He felt a warmth ignite inside of him.

Hello... Wyatt. Jin smiled as she watched Wyatt's face.

Wyatt looked at the girl shocked. Her voice had just rung in his head. “What did you do? How were you able to mind link with me?”

The girl giggled. “You are not at all like I imagined.” She smiled as she looked up at him. “I have given you a gift Wyatt. I am the one who controls the element of air. Just as your mother controls fire and your sister controls water. You now control air. I am not like a deity though. I am not your summon Wyatt. I am your partner.”

“I can control the wind now?!” Wyatt raised his eyes. He connected with the new warmth inside of him and twirled his fingers around feeling the wind obey him. “This is amazing.”

“Time out, demon. One, why would a demon be his partner? Why would you gift him? And when you say partner what do you mean exactly?” Jason continued to glare at the girl with distrust.

Fujin laughed. “Grumpy Bear, you are very protective, aren’t you?” Wyatt chuckled and looked at Jason and shrugged.

“I think Grumpy Bear fits.” Wyatt smirked over at Jason.

“First misconception, not all demons are evil. A dark fairy is just a dark fairy, but that doesn’t mean they are evil right? The demons are divided. I am against this demon war. I have chosen to fight on the side of balance. I am working with the other deities who are trying to restore balance, like your family's summons. I agreed to gift Wyatt the gift of air. And when I said partner, I mean partner. Like what you two are. I will always be by Wyatts side now. Just how the deities who gifted your mother and sister are connected. I am also connected to Wyatt.” Fujin looked over at Wyatt. “You can feel me inside of you, can’t you? You can also mind link to me now.”

Wyatt nodded his head.

“So why did you kiss him?” Jason still wasn’t trusting this small creature.

Fujin giggled. “Grumpy Bear are you jealous?” She raised her hand and covered her mouth as she laughed. “That wasn’t a kiss. Well not technically. That was me gifting him the air element.” Her green eyes shined with laughter as she looked into Jason's rich dark eyes.

Wyatt studied the small girl in front of them. She was not like any demon he had ever met before. She was so different. So lively and happy. And maybe it was dumb of him, but he trusted her. Just how his mother and sister trusted the ones who gave them elemental powers. She did not give him a bad vibe at all. Actually, it was quite the opposite. She gave him this feeling of warmth. And for the first time since he was rejected, he started to feel whole again.

“I take it that means you are moving into the Diamond pack?” Wyatt asked in minor amusement.

“That is the plan. If that is going to be okay?” Fujin bit her bottom lip and dug her toe in the dirt.

Wyatt smiled as he regarded her. Behind her smile and bright eyes, she also seemed like she was sad. That was the only other thing he could sense about her. There was nothing about her that screamed evil or dangerous.

“I think that seems like a good idea too. Especially if we are partners now. Is this a for life thing or just for now?” Wyatt asked as he listened to the small grumble from Jason.

Fujin looked over at Jason with a small frown. She could see that he didn’t want her around. Her eyes flashed back over to Wyatt before she let anymore sadness show and put on her exterior smile. "Of course it is for life. This is how it works. Sorry I'm not a deity. I know this would have been more acceptable. I can't help who I am though." Her voice trailed off quietly.

"I can't help who I am either." Wyatt shrugged and grinned at her. He was an Alpha who wasn't all werewolf. He was accepted though for the person he is, so why shouldn't she get that same chance? "So Fujin-"

"You can call me Jin."

Wyatt nodded. "Jin, welcome to the Diamond pack."

Jason growled lowly. "Wyatt, are you sure this is a good idea. Given the circumstances, how do we know we can trust her."

Wyatt chuckled and then gave Jason a side look with his eyes raised. "Jase, come on bro. I'm connected to her now. I can feel who she is. You trusted Levi when he showed up. She is the same to me that Levi is to Rhea. Give her a chance." He nudged his elbow into his brother.

"Fine." Jason turned and his icy glare set on Jin. "Look Wyatt is, well he is my most important person. I can't just trust you blindly. His safety is too important."

"Then we agree." Jin smiled. "Wyatt's safety is my top priority."

Wyatt's brows furrowed. "I don't really understand though Jin. How did you know about me? Why did you decide to gift me with the air element?"

"There is a war coming. Of course, you are aware of this. This war is an imbalance. Demons can't disturb the balance by taking over. There are great forces at work here. The yin and yang of the world. Those who keep balance. I am on the side of yin, the dark priestess." Jin sighed and met her gaze with Wyatt. "Just how the deities have chosen to gift their elements I also have chosen. Your family is the chosen family. The family that was chosen to restore balance. I'm afraid I don't know more details than that. I just knew who you were and where to find you."

"This demon war is more than just protecting the fairies then. I had a feeling it was much bigger. This war is meant to happen to restore the balance. I guess I can get behind that." Wyatt figured if this war was going to happen anyways it was nice to hear there was more at stake. They were battling for balance.

"Tell me about yourself Jin. Where is your family?" Wyatt asked casually but immediately regretted what he said. He saw the shine fade from her eyes and her smile vanished. Her green eyes looked down as her head dropped slightly. Then she pulled her head up with a large smile on her face.

"Mmmm there isn't anything important to tell." Her fake smile plastered on her face to hide her pain.

“Really? Nothing to tell? You just appear out of nowhere with no past history? What about others? Who have you been with all this time? What about your friends?” Jason, who couldn’t take a hint because of his dislike, spoke out bluntly with a low irritated voice.

Wyatt watched Jinn as her lips pursed together. “We don’t have to talk about all this stuff now. Do you have any belongings with you?”

Jin giggled and held out her hands. “Just me and what I am wearing.”

“Well then I guess you are easy to move in.” Wyatt chuckled. “We will take you out to get some things.”

“Oh no you don’t have to do that.” Jin shook her hands in protest.

“Nonsense. It’s the least I can do for this new awesome gift you gave me.” Wyatt twirled the air around making the grass bend around.

“Thank you.” Her voice was quiet, and she looked down to hide the tears forming in her eyes. She cleared her throat. “We will practice daily and get you better acquainted with your element. Soon you will have it mastered.”

Wyatt wasn’t sure what Jin was hiding but it was obvious to him there was sadness in her life. He felt like he could connect with her there. She reminded him of his sister Rhea. She always put on a brave face and tried to hide her pain. She never wanted others to worry about her, but he could always tell. She was horrible at keeping secrets. “It’s starting to get dark. How about we head back? Are you hungry? I think I spotted some chocolate cake back at the house.” Wyatt watched the girl immediately perk up.

“Chocolate cake?!” She bounced over to him and clasped onto his arm. “Let’s go.” Jin cheered.

Wyatt chuckled. This girl was adorable. She was not dangerous. “Come on then.” Wyatt led her back towards the Diamond pack while Jason followed closely. His eyes gazed over the girl in deep suspicion. He didn’t like her secrets. There was something off about her and he was going to figure out what it was.

Wyatt pushed open the pack doors and several sets of eyes shot up from the table. Renee was sitting on Sam’s lap across the table from Winston, Adam and Susan. Susan’s eyes locked on the girl holding onto Wyatt’s arm and her eyes darkened. Wyatt felt Jin’s hand tighten on his arm and he couldn’t be sure, but he thought he felt a mild tremble. He took his arm away from her hand and then swung it around her shoulders. He gave her a reassuring smile and led her into the house.

“Everyone I would like for you to meet Fujin, Jin for short. She will be living with us from here on out.” Wyatt said.

“Is she your mate?” Winston blurted out as he eyed the girl up.

Wyatt coughed on his spit and shook his head at Winston. “Umm, not exactly. But she is someone important to me. She is my partner.” Wyatt smiled down at Jin as he used the same word that she used to describe their relationship.

“Look all I need to know is if she is off limits or not.” Winston's lips curled up as he more openly looked the girl over.

Wyatt sighed. “Sorry about him. He really is harmless. I promise. All these people you see in front of you right now are people I trust with my life. You can trust them too.” Jin’s eyes glanced up to his and she gave him a soft smile.

Sam stood up with Renee and the two of them walked over to greet Jin. “If you are important to Wyatt then you are important to us. I’m Sam and this is Renee. You can come to us for anything.”

Jin regarded the two of them and then looked over the others in the room. They all looked very warm and nice. All of them except for one. The girl with the blonde hair had an unwelcoming gaze on her. And then the large grumpy bear to her side also was giving her ice daggers.

“Renee see if you or Susan here has any clothes that will fit her. Just until I can buy new clothes for her.” Wyatt looked between the two girls. He caught the look from Susan and he immediately fixated on her. He raised an eye unsure why she would be looking at Jin that way. He watched her straighten up and then nod. She wiped the disdainful look from her face. “Anyways, is there any cake left? I promised Jin a slice.”

“Yes, there is.” Adam said walking into the kitchen. He lifted up a large chocolate frosted cake. “Who’s hungry?” He beamed as he took another step forward though he tripped, and the cake went flying forward. They all watched as the cake suddenly stopped. It floated in the air.

Jin giggled. “Thank goodness. That would have been such a waste.” She motioned her hand and the cake rested back in the tray on Adam’s hand.

“Nice save Jin! That’s the first thing you are teaching me.” Wyatt squeezed onto her shoulders.

“Wait. What was that?” Sam asked with an awe shocked grin.

“Jin here can control air. And now because of her I can too.” Wyatt grinned with pride.

“Oh, are you a summon like Suzaku and Leviathan?” Renee asked.

“Not quite like them.” Jin replied quietly.

“No, she is a wind demon.” Jason snorted and folded his arms. Book 3

Chapter 5 Sleeping in My Room

Chapter 187 - Dr.Luna

“No, she is a wind demon.” Jason snorted and folded his arms. Wyatt turned his head and shot Jason a look before looking back over his friends. Their eyes were wide, and they looked very uncertain. Wyatt felt the tiny body next to him shift herself deeper in his side. She wanted to be accepted. When she first brought up she was a demon and then again now she seemed almost ashamed of who she was. Wyatt nudged her side gently. Her green gems flickered up to look at him and he gave her a reassuring smile.

“We are not a pack that discriminates here. Never have been and we will not be starting now. Jin is welcome here. I won’t tolerate any mistreatment especially from all of you.” Wyatt’s Alpha voice sounded out to his close pack members. He still would need to address the rest of the pack. These were those he was closest too. And he expected them to welcome Jin just as she is.

Sam noticed the reaction of the tiny girl. He immediately smiled at her. “You won’t be mistreated here.”

“That’s right. Besides we need more girls around here.” Renee’s sweet voice rang out coaxing a timid smile from Jin.

“How about that cake then? Hold the five second rule thanks to Jin.” Adam winked at the girl and sat the cake down on the table. If his Alpha was okay with the girl then he was too.

“Come on Jin. Let’s have a slice of that cake. I’ll introduce you to everyone.” Wyatt flashed her a bright welcoming smile.

Jason leaned back against the wall. He watched as their little group exchanged stories and interacted with Jin. He watched as she would laugh and join in the conversation with everyone. A quiet sigh escaped his nose. He was bothered by this girl. She hid behind a smile and a laugh. He recognized what she was doing. How couldn’t he? His own sister Rhea did the same thing. But Jin’s felt more wounded and hidden. She was better at hiding things than his sister. And secrets, especially with a stranger, made him nervous. What was her secret? Jason pushed off from the wall and strode over to the table. He took the empty chair next to Jin and sat beside her.

Jin slid him a piece of cake and tilted her head to him. He grabbed the plate and pulled it in front of him and slowly began to fork at the dessert.

“Hmm let me see. There is another room on the second floor at the far end that is empty. We can make that your room Jin. You can sleep there tonight.” Wyatt said as he thoughtfully stabbed at his cake.

“No.” Jason said tersely. “She’s sleeping in my room tonight.” He continued to eat his cake casually and then glanced up noticing the silence. All eyes were on him. Winston and Adam had a smirk playing on their lips and gave him a couple of eyebrow raises.

Jin giggled. “So, you really were jealous of that kiss earlier?” Jason grunted and looked at her with unamused eyes.

Sam snorted milk out of his nose and started coughing. “K-k-kiss?”

Winston smiled and rested his elbows on the table as he stared at his Alpha. “So which room should she be sleeping in?”

Jin giggled again and tilted her head over to Wyatt. “In all seriousness that wasn’t really a kiss right? That doesn’t count, does it?”

Wyatt smiled at her and shook his head. “No, I don’t think so.”

“Phew, good. I mean nothing against you but that would have been my first kiss and it would have felt wasted.” Jin said shyly.

Winston leaned closer towards Jin from across the table. “You’ve never been kissed huh?”

“Time out I am confused here. What is this kiss non kiss thing? And Jason you care to explain yourself, pervert...” Sam grinned at Jason who only rolled his eyes at Sam.

“It was how I transferred the element to Wyatt. I had to transfer it to his lips. It wasn’t a kiss in that sense. Our lips touched and that was all.” Jin explained and Wyatt nodded his head.

“Well, that’s disappointing.” Sam said then directed his attention to Jason. Meanwhile, no one noticed the look of relief that washed over Susan’s face.

“I don’t trust her. I don’t know anything about her. I’m standing guard over her tonight. I am keeping her in my sights at all times and that includes at night.” Jason said as he finished up his last bite of cake.

“And that is even more disappointing.” Sam frowned at the boringness of it all.

“Jason, that is hardly necessary.” Wyatt scowled at his brother. She didn’t need to have her privacy invaded at all times.

“I’m to stay in your sight at all times?” Jin giggled and turned her head to look at Jason. “Does that include undressing and bathing?”

Adam and Winston snickered keeping their eyes on Jason. He only shrugged. “If I think I need to.” He replied emotionlessly.

“No, he doesn’t.” Wyatt glared at Jason. “Sorry about him Jin.”

“Mmm it’s okay. He’s already explained himself earlier. But I also explained myself. It’s just up to him to believe it or not. But with someone with awesome chocolate eyes his personality bitters him up.” Jin looked at Jason from the side of her eyes Jason did not show any response to what she had just say. She then eyed the cake in front of her. “I’ll have another slice of cake.” She grinned sheepishly. “Chocolate is sort of a weakness for me.”

“Noted, chocolate is the element of air’s weakness. So, if there is ever a tornado, I’ll offer up a chocolate sacrifice.” Winston placed another slice of cake on Jin’s plate.

“Actually, if there ever is a tornado Wyatt and I would be able to stop it.” Jin eyed the moist chocolate goodness in front of her as she placed a bite in her mouth.

“That is pretty incredible.” Sam smiled and looked over at Wyatt. The girl seemed very sweet. He didn’t feel any malcontent from her. He understood why Jason was overly cautious over Wyatt but in this case, he didn’t feel he needed to be.

Wyatt sighed and turned and looked at Jason. He could tell his brother was not going to concede over this issue. “Tonight, Jason and I will both stay with you. It’s a new place and all so maybe it is for the best in case you need anything.”

Winston smirked. “And the love triangle is formed.”

Jason snarled as he looked at Winston and then he flipped his glare over at Wyatt. “I’m keeping you safe. You don’t need to watch over her overnight.”

Wyatt let a crooked smile rise on his face. “Well, I am keeping her safe from you.”

Jason choked on his drink and he turned and shot his brother a venomous glare. “Protecting her from me? What exactly do you think I am going to do to her?”

Jin smiled and bit her lip. “Umm. I would like to get cleaned up. Do I really need to have an audience?”

Renee shot up from her seat along with Susan.

“No, you don’t.”

“No, you don’t.”

Both girls demanded in unison. They both looked at each other and then giggled.

“Wyatt stood up from his seat. “Of course, you don’t. Jason here was only jesting.” He shot his brother an irritated glance. “I’ll get you something to change into and show you to a shower if you are finished?”

Jin nodded her head and stood up. “Thank you for the cake it was delicious.” Jason stood up immediately with her. She looked at him by her side eye. It was clear he didn’t intend for her to go anywhere with Wyatt without him.

“We will see you all in the morning.” Wyatt nodded his head to his friends and then led the way upstairs. “We will go to my room. It has a shower in it and a couch that pulled out into a bed.”

She followed behind Wyatt up the stairs and then made a left on the second floor. She looked over the railing that looked down into the room they were just at. The house was very luxurious. She had never lived in a place like this. Not even close. The whole thing was actually very foreign to her.

SNAP

Jin froze at the sound. She looked over the railing to see Winston snapping a wet cloth over the counter playfully. The sound it made echoed in her mind and her insides froze as she continued to stare blankly.

Jason watched the girl as she quit walking. Her green eyes twitched slightly at the sudden sound. He furrowed his brows as he watched her body posture. Her small fist began to slightly tremble at her side. His heart sank immediately. She was... afraid. His eyes wandered back to her face. She just stood there quietly but it was clear she was having a minor flashback. He watched as she shivered slightly from whatever she was in deep thought about.

“You coming?” Wyatt asked once he realized she was no longer following him.

Jin snapped her attention back to Wyatt and she plastered a smile back over her face. “Yep, coming.”

Jason sighed and followed behind her. Something disturbed him over this whole situation. Something that he was almost afraid to find out. He balled up one of his fists and then slowly released it. Jin being here was not a good thing, not a good thing at all.

Wyatt led her into the large bathroom. He laid a shirt of his and some joggers on a stand near the shower. “I hope this works until we can get you some proper clothes tomorrow.”

Jin gnawed on her bottom lip and looked down at the ground a bit embarrassed.

“Is this not okay? I can find you something else to wear?” Wyatt asked seeing her weird expression. Jason leaned in the doorway and watched her with interest.

“Um. No, this is fine. Thank you. I. Do you think...” A loud breath heaved from her mouth. “I don’t know how to work the shower.” She clenched her eyes shut hard afraid to look at anyone.

Wyatt glanced over at Jason with a wave of concern. She’s never had a shower before? He looked at Jason’s unreadable eyes for a moment before a gentle smile formed on his face.

“Come on over here and I’ll show you. It is pretty simple.” Wyatt called to her in a calming tone. He watched her peak her eyes open and he nodded his head in the direction of the shower.

“This knob here gives you hot water. And this knob gives you cold water. You turn them both together to get the temperature that you want. I’ll set it to a temperature that I think is comfortable. Here feel, is this good for you?” Wyatt leaned away from the shower and allowed her to reach her hand in. He watched a genuine smile spread across her face. She looked up at him and nodded.

“Yes, it feels perfect.”

Wyatt cleared his throat. “There is a towel hanging here for when you are finished. You can toss your clothes in the hamper here and we will get those washed for you.”

“Thank you.” Her soft sweet voice called out.

“Jason and I will be just out here if you need anything.” Wyatt turned and walked out of the bathroom. Jason shut the door behind him giving her privacy to shower. The two looked at each other and Wyatt frowned.

What do you think about that Jase?

Jason nodded his head and stood there in silence. Something seemed off about all of this. Something seemed off about her.

Chapter 6 Sleeping together

Chapter 188 - Dr.Luna

Jin opened the door and walked out. She had pulled the string as tight as she could on the joggers and folded the pants up to help fit her body. But there was not much she could do about the shirt. She looked like a small child wearing her father’s t-shirt. She glanced up at the two guys and then giggled as she held her arms out. “At least I am clean now.”

Wyatt chuckled. “Sorry. I don’t have anything smaller, and Jason’s clothes would have been even bigger. I can send Sam to get something off of Renee tonight if you want?”

“No this is fine. Thank you.” Jin flexed her fingers in front of her as she glanced between the two men awkwardly.

Wyatt cleared his throat. “Okay, I’m going to get showered up real quick.” He turned and gave Jason a look of warning before he disappeared into the bathroom.

The sound of the shower running filled the empty room. Jin glanced around the room. To the far side was a large window with a door that led out to a ledge. Her eyes lit up at this and she made her way over to it. She placed her hand on the cold handle and then pulled it open. Immediately the evening air hit her and she closed her eyes to breathe it in. She looked up to the tiny dots that invaded the night sky. Everything seemed very peaceful here. They were all happy and got along well. She felt his presence first and then saw him lean his arms on the banister beside her.

“It looks like this was a happy place to grow up.” Jin smiled looking out at the distant sky.

Jason looked at her from the side then looked ahead. “It was. And it is. It’s always been like one big family here.”

“What was it like where you grew up?” Jason watched her immediately tense. Her lips curved downwards, and her gaze went down to her hands.

“It was nothing like this.” Jin focused on her hands in front of her. “But that’s the past. Maybe I can have this in the future?” She sighed and turned to look at Jason. “Do you think I can?”

Jason met with her green eyes. “I guess time will tell. I don’t like secrets and you are riddled with them. Right now, you are unknown, and I am going to protect Wyatt. I am going to protect this pack. Do you want to clear the air with me?”

“Why do you have to know my past to know who I am now? Does it matter?”

“It does if it bothers you.” Jason watched her tense up. Her tiny fists squeezed together.

“I don’t want to talk about my past. I’m sorry.”

“Where are your parents?” Jason ignored her and continued to pry.

“They’re dead.” She met his gaze blankly.

Jason nodded his head. “When did this happen?”

“When I was a child.”

“I lost my parents too. My biological ones. I was adopted, Lilly and Tyler are my parents. They raised me since I was a toddler. Me and my twin brother. What about you? Who raised you?” Jason watched as she began to tremble. She bit her bottom lip and she looked like she was about to cry.

“Raised me...” She said in an almost bitter voice. “I survived. I wasn’t raised.” She closed her eyes and wiped the dampness that was forming away.

“Jason you need the shower next?” Wyatt walked to the edge of the doorway.

Jason sighed and then looked at Jin. He would have to leave her alone with Wyatt in order to shower. Though more and more he was feeling more relaxed around her. Now he was curious what she was hiding. What had her life been like before?

Jin knew exactly what he was thinking, and she started giggling. “You want me to come into the bathroom with you so you can shower? You can’t possibly leave this evil demon alone with Wyatt.”

Wyatt snickered. “Go get your shower Jason.”

Jason walked out from the shower and looked over to see Jin and Wyatt laughing on the couch.

“And get this. Then he tried to destroy the whole rose bush with his bare hands. He got all cut up and caught in the thorns. Mom had to come and free him.” Wyatt laughed loudly as Jin giggled.

“Not that story again.” Jason sighed in annoyance.

“And then he just looked up at mom because he was stuck.”

“Aww, I bet that was adorable. Those big brown eyes looking up for help.” Jin smiled.

“Do you think he’s adorable now?” Wyatt teased and Jin giggled.

“His eyes are.” Jin shrugged. She loved chocolate and associated it with his deep brown eyes.

“He’s a fun guy once he loosens up. You’ll see.” Wyatt smiled back at Jason who only rolled his eyes.

“So how are the sleeping arrangements going to work?” Jason grumbled less then amused at being the topic of conversation.

“We can give Jin the bed-” Wyatt started.

“No no no. I don’t need the bed. The floor is fine with me.” Jin answered quickly.

Wyatt laughed. “I’m not about to have you sleeping on the floor.”

“Honestly I don’t mind. The carpet is so soft in here anyways. It wouldn’t bother me in the slightest. I’m not taking the bed.”

“You’re not sleeping on the floor Jin.” Wyatt shook his head no. There was no way he could sleep if she was sleeping on the floor.

“Fine. Then I can sleep here on the couch. The bed looks big enough that you both can share it.” Jin glanced between Wyatt and Jason. This honestly made the most sense. Though she really didn’t mind sleeping on the floor. This soft plush carpet was an upgrade compared to what she was used to.

Her skin was on fire but yet she shivered from the cold. The shredded cloth that barely covered her body could not keep her warm. A deep pain burned inside of her stomach. She was hungry. No, she was starving. She could feel the slow oozing of liquid running down her back from where she was lashed. She curled up on the dirty floor. Her body ached in agony. She winced from the pain as she moved slightly. She gritted her teeth but refused to make a sound. Making a sound would only end up drawing their attention to her. Creating more pain for her. She took in a breath through her nose. The stagnant air was not at all refreshing. If only she wasn’t shackled in the anti-element bracelets.

“We should probably feed it again. Don’t want our toy dying on us.” An eerie sinister sounding voice hissed out.

Death. She actually wished for death. She would finally be free if she died. She accepted her fate already. The only way she would ever get away would be if she died.

Another set of heavy footsteps were heard. “Have you gotten what I need yet?” The low voice growled.

“No, not yet.”

“Go and get it now. And take that filth with you. I’m sure there is someone there who would be interested in her for a price.” His low voice dripped in ice.

She felt herself being yanked up by her bonded hands. No, please. Just let me die. Please. Please. Please. Please.

“Please. Please. Please. Please.”

“Jin? Jin, are you alright?”

Her eyes popped open. Her body was still shaking, and she could feel the dampness on her cheek. She let out a breath and wiped her eyes. Why did she dream about that memory of when she was at her lowest point? It must have been from talking about her past a bit. She looked up to see two sets of concerned eyes looking down at her. She forced a smile and then sat up. “I’m fine. Just a bad dream.” She lied.

Wyatt sat next to her. “You want to talk about it?”

That was the last thing she wanted to do. She shook her head no swiftly. “No, there isn’t anything to talk about.” She listened as Jason heaved a heavy sigh. She looked up to see his slightly annoyed face. “Sorry for waking you guys up.”

“Don’t worry about it. It’s morning now anyways.” Wyatt gave her a reassuring smile. “I have a meeting today in town. How about coming along and going shopping? Renee and Susan will join you. You need to get some clothes that are actually made for you.”

“Thank you I really appreciate it. I didn’t come here to create a problem for you but it feels like that is what I have done.” Jin said with a small frown.

“No way. You are not a problem at all. You gave me an awesome gift that I can’t wait to practice with later today.” Wyatt gently nudged her with his shoulder.

She smiled and then glanced up to Jason. She was sure Wyatt was the only one who did not think that she was a problem. Though this shouldn’t shock her or surprise her. She was a demon after all. They didn’t have the best reputation. She was guilty by association. She felt a warm heavy hand land on top of her head and gently moved around side to side.

“I said you aren’t a problem so stop over thinking it.” Wyatt flashed her his white brilliant smile. He knew she was hiding things about her. He figured the more comfortable she got with them the more likely she would be to share. And even if she didn’t want to share that was fine too. But he wanted her to feel at home here. He could feel that she was a bit uptight. Jason and his discerning eyes didn’t help make her feel at home that was for sure.

“I hate these Alpha meetings.” Jason grumbled and then leaned back against the wall.

“Sorry Jason. I’d bring you in with me if I could but only the Alpha and Beta are allowed in the meeting.” Wyatt stood up from the couch and then offered his hand to Jin. She slowly reached her hand into his. He could feel her soft cold hands in his own. They were so tiny. Maybe it was because she was so small, but he felt protective over her. The irony of that was she was there to protect him. He effortlessly pulled her up and swung his arm around her. “Let’s see about getting some breakfast.”

When they entered the downstairs their band of friends were already seated at the table at the pack house. There was another person there though who Jin had not met before. The woman bounded over to them and grinned.

“You must be Jin. I’m Avery. I’m Wyatt’s aunt. Here I brought you over some clothes of mine and these are some of Susan’s and Renee’s clothes. Try them on and wear what fits the best.” Avery beamed at the girl and then tugged her away from Wyatt. “Come on now. You don’t want to be stuck wearing Wyatt’s clothes any longer I am sure. It is hard to wash all that male wolf scent out.” Avery giggled. She ushered Jin into the bathroom. “I’ll be right out here.” And then shut the door.

Jin smiled and stared down at the clothes in her hands. Now that was a bubbly personality. She liked it though. She was so warm and never once made her feel like an outsider. Maybe... just maybe she could finally feel like part of a family here. Book 3

“Sam and I will be gone for the day. Winston, Adam. I am counting on you to handle things here. I want the younger wolves doing a double training session today. Caleb and Kade are going to do a patrol together and double check our borders. They are helping out in my absence. Cedric offered to help with the training today as well. Let’s keep this pack running smoothly.” Wyatt sipped his coffee and looked up at his pack.

“How do you think the meeting will go? This is about the packs uniting against the demons, right?” Winston asked.

“It has to go in the direction we need. The packs must unite. We don’t know how much time is left.” Wyatt frowned slightly. This part was all on him. He had to convince the packs. No, he had to convince the Alpha’s. A deep red power swelled inside of him at this moment but vanished just as quickly. What was that? He shook it off and looked up at the two women approaching.

“Doesn’t she look so much better now.” Avery bounced around Jin.

“Does it fit okay Jin?” Wyatt smiled and stood up, walking over to her.

“Yes. I appreciate you letting me borrow your clothes.” Jin looked at Avery who waved her off.

“Nonsense. Wyatt?”

“Yes, Aunt Avery.”

“Rosa is also going to assist in training the pack today. She is going to use her diversions to help stimulate them.”

“That’s awesome. They could use more of that.”

Avery looked at Winston and Adam. “You boys hurry up and finish eating. There is a lot of work to do today.”

“What will you be doing mom?” Adam turned just as her hand landed over the back of his head.

“You know I’m not a fighter. That’s what your father is for. Merida and I are going to help with refreshments.” Avery never was a fighter. She was actually a bit squeamish when it came to bones breaking.

“That works for me. Growing boys gotta eat.” Winston beamed as he stood up towering over his mother. He bent down and kissed her on the cheek. “Thanks mom.” He flashed her a big cheesy grin.

Avery shook her head. “You boys are such trouble.” She started walking to the pack door and then turned slightly. “I hope everything goes as planned.”

Wyatt nodded at her and then watched her disappear out the door. Then he turned back to Jin. “How about some breakfast?”

Jin leaned up on her toes to look in Wyatt’s cup. “What’s that?” She scrunched her nose up with a frown. It had a strong smell to it. If that was breakfast she was going to pass.

Wyatt chuckled and his eyes danced in laughter. “This is my life blood, Jin. Also, known as coffee. Here take a sip.” Wyatt held his cup up to her with a side grin. He watched her face distort and his smile widened.

Her eyes stared into the black liquid with a small frown. Wyatt leaned down and tilted his head looking at her face. “Ugh, its even on your breath too.” Jin stepped back and shook her head to the side.

Wyatt laughed again. “I take it you are not a coffee drinker?” He walked into the kitchen and brought out a box.

“Never had it but it smells so strong.” Jin could feel the eyes resting on her and she looked up at Wyatt nervously.

“It helps keep me going. It is like liquid energy. Here, I think you wouldn’t mind having one of these.” Wyatt opened the box revealing several chocolate donuts. He watched her eyes light up and a smile curved over her lips. She grabbed a donut out and looked up at him like a child who was just given a present. She then bounced over to the table and perched herself on one of the chairs.

“You really love your chocolate don’t you Jin?” Wyatt chuckled and took a seat next to her. She was sitting on her feet as she sat in the chair. Even though she was a beautiful young woman. In this moment she reminded him of a little kid. Who took pleasure in the little things in life. His mind drifted back to earlier. Her voice had sounded so frightened this morning. What had happened to her before? Who could possibly do something to someone so sweet?

Jason went to reach for a donut and hovered his hand between two. The last chocolate donut and one with maple icing. Jin took a bite at her donut and she raised her eyebrow up at him. “You willing to wage war over a donut?”

For the first time Jason’s lips curled upwards as he grinned at her. “The real question is are you really planning to fight with a guardian over a donut?” Jason plucked the chocolate pastry in his hand and stood up. But just as he was about to place the donut in his mouth...

SWOOSH

Jin was on top of Jason’s shoulders and a gust of air shot the donut up in her hand. She giggled as she retreated by leaping over to gently rest on Wyatt’s head. Her soft giggle was heard along with laughter from Adam and Winston. She had more tenacity then they thought to challenge Jason like that.

A dark chuckle left Jason’s throat. “Careful little demon. I’m not a cute teddy bear.”

She looked down at Wyatt and grinned before she lifted off and floated back to the ground. She took a bite of the donut defiantly and met with the deep rich brown eyes. “It wouldn’t be any fun if you were.”

Jason smirked and shook his head. She stood her ground as he took a few large steps towards her. He watched her curiously wondering what she would do as he closed the gap.

Wyatt laughed heartily. “Finally, someone else who isn’t afraid to challenge Jason.” He stood up sliding his chair back. As he did though the back leg got caught and the chair went smashing down.

Jin buried her head into Jason’s chest and clenched her fingers into his shirt. He could feel her body slightly trembling. He looked up at the other men who were all looking at her with concern. This was not a typical reaction. Jason let out a sigh and placed his hand on the top of her head. He leaned his head down next to her ear. “Jin, you’re safe here.” He whispered quietly in a calming tone. He smiled and said, “But if you ever steal my donut again, you’ll have to face the consequences.” He winked at her as she glanced up at him. He even surprised himself being so friendly with her.

Don’t bring it up. Just look away and continue finishing up your breakfast. Wyatt ordered through the mind link. He didn’t want her feeling more embarrassed then what she already did. He walked into the kitchen frowning as he poured himself another cup of coffee. He felt his insides shake in anger. Jin had been mistreated.

Jason watched her as she slowly released her grip on his shirt. He could see she looked embarrassed. He smiled at her showing her it was okay. A realization came over him. Even with all his unwelcoming attitude with her she still felt safe with him. She immediately went to him when she reacted. A strange feeling continued to pull inside of him. One that he didn't want to investigate further. He cleared his throat and went and retrieved the maple donut.

"I was never going to eat the chocolate donut anyways." Jason grinned as she played right into his trap.

Jin smiled. She appreciated them just dropping the issue. "When it comes to chocolate you can never be too careful." She was shocked when she realized she ended up in Jason's arms. She just leaped to the closest person. No, it was more than that. She subconsciously was seeking out safety. She had come a long way over the years. She was still trying to condition herself with certain scenarios. She was getting better. And when she expected the sounds she was prepared. Unexpected sounds were harder to control. She looked down at her fingers. They still tingled from his warmth. She silently scolded herself. She already trusted them. She looked over at Wyatt he was smiling at her. She was connected with Wyatt. It made sense that she trusted him already. He wouldn't mistreat her. She was safe with him. But for some reason she already felt safe with everyone else. She already trusted them. Maybe she wasn't completely ruined. She still had faith in others.

"Jin, at the mall I am taking you too they have an amazing chocolate store there. After my meeting I'll take you there. You'll love it." Wyatt watched her eyes widen in happiness. That quick the pain that was flashing over her eyes was gone. "I'll have to leave you alone just during my meeting, but Susan and Renee will take good care of you. Plus, Jason will be lurking around too." He watched her eyes glance over to Jason and then quickly planted back on him.

Wyatt walked up to Jin and patted her head. "You ready to go shopping?"

Jin looked up and gave him a half shrug. "I guess so." Her voice was quiet but a small smile rested on her lips. She felt his large reassuring arm swing around her and held her to his side.

"Renee, Sam and Susan should be waiting for us by now at the car." Wyatt pulled her along. "We are taking the stretch SUV so we can all fit comfortably."

Jin's eyes lit up in excitement. "I've never ridden in one before."

"A stretch SUV?" Wyatt asked with a smile.

"A vehicle."

Wyatt kept the smile on his face though his gaze met with Jason's. How has she never ridden in a vehicle before? Wyatt held onto her protectively as they walked to the vehicle. Was Jin really there to protect him? Or was she meant to be there so he could protect her?

“I suggest not focusing on what is right out the windows. Look at the horizon. If this is your first time in a vehicle you could experience some motion sickness.” Wyatt looked at her and she only shrugged.

“I could always ride on the roof of the vehicle in that case. I don’t get air sick.” She giggled at her own joke. That apparently, they didn’t think was funny.

“You ride with us, Jin. You are one of us now. Think of us as family and we will think of you the same way. Till death do us part right?” Wyatt winked at her. He felt her body tense up slightly as they approached the vehicle in the distance. A black stretch SUV was gently humming. The windows were all tinted dark and it seemed to shine in the sunlight. Sam was standing by the open door. Renee and Susan were already seated inside. “There’s nothing to it Jin.” Wyatt whispered in a reassuring voice. She nodded slowly. Both excited and nervous. She was experiencing so many firsts in her life. And while it was a bit overwhelming, she for once felt like she was living.

Jason trailed just behind them. He could not help it but his gaze never wandered from Jin. Something about her kept bothering him. And he was pushing back at what his body was feeling. He squeezed his fist together and gritted his teeth. This was not in his plans. Book 3

Chapter 8 Shopping

Chapter 190 - Dr.Luna

Jin looked out the window and grinned as her eyes took in the countryside. She turned her head to Wyatt and smiled widely.

“You enjoying the trip? It is much faster to get around by a vehicle.” Wyatt grinned as he watched her nod excitedly.

“Yes this is fun. It is quicker then walking but not as fast as riding a dragon.” She giggled and then looked back out the window.

“You’ve rode on a dragon before?” Wyatt asked curiously. The rest of the passengers quieted down as they looked at her with interest.

Jin had a soft smile resting on her face as she continued to look out the window. “Yes. I have.”

“Oh wow. That is amazing Jin. Did you grow up together?” Wyatt asked casually.

Jin opened her mouth and then continued to quietly stare out the window. “We’ve only known each other for a couple years.”

“How did you two meet?” Renee asked engaging in the conversation.

Jason noticed how Jin’s hands squeezed together. She stared out the window blankly for a moment before she turned and looked at them. She drifted her attention from Wyatt and looked at Jason. She then drifted her gaze back to Renee. “She is the one who rescued me... My past is a bit dark to be talked about on only the second day knowing everyone.” A smile was forced over her face as she stared back out the window. He squeezed his hands together as he watched her hide behind her smile.

“Oh umm. Well, what was the dragons name? You seem like you are friends?” Renee cleverly tried to lighten to mood.

Jin’s eyes smiled as she looked back at Renee. “Her name is Ciana. You guys will meet her soon.” She then looked at Wyatt. “As long as you are okay with that?” She watched Wyatt nod. “We split up when I went looking for Wyatt. She went scouting for the demons. Trying to get an idea on their movements.” Jin looked down at her hands. “I hope she is okay.”

“I’m sure she is. Dragons are really strong.” Susan reassured Jin with a kind voice. She felt more at ease with Jin. Wyatt didn't seem overly interested in her and she seemed like a sweet girl.

Jin nodded. “You’re right. I know you all will love her.”

“You say that like she will be living with us...” Jason trailed off sounding a bit annoyed.

“If she is welcome, she would love to stay. Not indefinitely, but until the war is over. Her parents are away traveling the world, so she has been on her own for a few years.”

“What about the kingdom she is from?” Wyatt asked.

Jin shook her head. “Ciana isn’t from a kingdom. She grew up in one of the utopian villages. You know the villages where all species gather neutrally. Her parents raised her there to keep her safe. She is special and they wanted to make sure she was raised away from anyone who may wish to abuse her powers.”

“You trust us with such a secret?” Sam asked with a wide grin.

Jin nodded. “Yes, you are all nice people. I know you would never take advantage of her.”

“You trust us?” Jason asked and her eyes flickered up to meet his gaze. “Well, I want to know about your past.”

“It isn’t that I don’t trust you. Honestly, I don’t know why I trust you all already. Is that weird?” Jin asked but not really expecting an answer, so she continued. “It is just that my story is not an easy one to digest.”

“I trust you too Jin. I don’t think it is weird. It doesn’t matter what your past is. Not to me. And if you ever want to talk about it I am ready to listen.” Wyatt leaned over and patted her shoulder.

She looked up at Jason. “If you really feel like you want to know now then I will tell you. But maybe we should leave that conversation for this evening. It’ll ruin everyone’s mood to hear it now.”

Jason felt his chest squeeze uncomfortably hearing that. Was her past that bad? He had the urge to wrap his arms around her and let her know she was safe with him. Shit. Why was he feeling like this? There was just something about Jin. Something that made him irritated at the way his body was reacting. He turned and looked away from her and back out the window. “That’s fine.” He managed to reply. Meanwhile, he was raging a war within himself. A war that had him questioning everything.

Jin looked at the big building they pulled up to. The building stretched far in the distance. She suddenly felt a bit nervous. There were so many people going in and out of the building. A warm hand landed on her shoulder and she turned to see Wyatt’s bright smile.

“Time to get you some clothes.” Wyatt scooted out of the vehicle and then turned offering his hand to her. He pulled her up next to him and watched her eyes flicker around nervously. “I would stay with you if I could but Sam and I have a meeting to attend. Renee and Susan will be with you though.”

“That’s fine. I’ll be fine with them.” Jin smiled at Renee and Susan. She walked up towards the girls who excitedly began to drag her into the building.

Wyatt watched them until they disappeared. Wyatt had to go and lead a roomful of Alpha’s. Alphas did not like to be told what to do or challenged by anyone. It wasn’t in their nature. This was his task though. He had to get the Alpha’s to fall in line under him. The red energy inside of him began to slightly swell again. It didn’t disappear this time but stayed there keeping a low presence. Jason followed them over to the conference room that was located in the mall.

“I guess this is where we leave you Jase. Go raid the food court. We will see you shortly.” Wyatt listened to his brother’s low growl before he and Sam entered the room.

The gentle murmuring of voices was heard immediately as they walked into the room. The room was decorated in a red carpet that had many circular tables set up. Alphas and the Betas were all seated at these tables. Dozens of different packs were being represented here. As Wyatt walked into the room James from the Ashton pack walked up to him. “Wyatt. You have your hands full here.” James chuckled and looked back over his shoulder. “I brought my son along with me instead of my Beta. Kyle is taking over for me next year, so I want him to get used to these events.”

“Wyatt!”

Wyatt turned and smiled. “Uncle Aaron, Ace. I’m glad you guys could make it.”

“Are you kidding? We have to be here. We need to show our support and get these demons taken care of when the time comes.” Aaron (Alpha of the Silver Moon pack and his mother’s brother) was one of Wyatt’s biggest supporters.

Wyatt nodded his head and looked out. He saw many unwelcoming stares. Another good reason not to have Jason here. He would be rampaging at the way these men were looking at him. He looked back at the raised platform behind him. He might as well get started.

“I guess this is a real case of getting fed to the wolves.” Sam snickered at his own joke. “Seriously, you’ve got this Wyatt.”

Wyatt let out an airy laugh and sighed. He took authoritative steps up the platform and walked out to the center. He turned and looked out over the men sitting there waiting for him to speak.

“I’d like to start out by thanking you all for coming. We are gathered here under a grave circumstance. As many of you know from firsthand experience demons have been gathering in masses. Our packs are continually colliding with them during patrols. Some of us have even experienced several casualties.”

“That’s not our fault that other packs are weak.” A voice growled out from the crowd.

“It has nothing to do with a pack being weak. But with the ever-increasing presence of an enemy. A war is approaching. There is no avoiding it. We must unite together and band against a common enemy. This is much bigger than you all know. The demons are going to make their move to claim all of the earth’s surface. If we do not act now there may never be another opportunity to defend ourselves.”

Yelling and snarling immediately filled the air. The idea of going to war with demons made some of the Alpha’s scowl. Not everyone had been troubled by the demons. They failed to see where this was their problem. Others were demanding they all unite having had mass casualties. The growing voices and growls continued to rise. The room echoed with the increasing anger of the growing mob. Alphas lashing back at Alphas.

The red energy inside of Wyatt started resonating inside of him. The light grew and seized his body as a mighty roar escaped his lips. “SILENCE!”

There was no more sound. Immediately after his command everyone turned to look at him. Not another word was heard.

Wyatt growled and looked over at the other Alphas. An authoritative strength spread through him. He set a commanding glare over everyone.

“There is no choice in this matter. The packs will unite and fight against the demons when the time comes. We will defend our territory. We will protect our kind. We will join forces with those who fight against the demons. This is our one shot, and I will not let anyone’s pride get in the way of this. This moment is too important.” Wyatt snarled out angrily. Power filled his voice. A strength he had never felt before. “Is that understood?”

“Yes.” The room said in unison. Wyatt looked over the room wide eyed. What just happened there. He felt a strange power continue to seep out of him. He watched as his uncle Aaron and James approached the podium cautiously.

“What is it?” Wyatt asked casually.

“How long have you known?” James whispered out in an awe-struck voice.

“I never thought I would live to see this day.” His Uncle Aaron said in a breath.

Wyatt chuckled and then hopped down beside the two men. “What are you senile men talking about?”

“Do you know what you just did?” James asked, his eyes widening. He was shocked. It was apparent that this young Alpha in front of him didn’t have the slightest idea.

“He doesn’t even know...” Aaron looked at James and then back to Wyatt. Just wait until Tyler and Lilly find out. He couldn’t believe it. Yet, he had witnessed it himself. He had felt it inside of him. There was no denying who his nephew was.

Wyatt looked up at the still quiet crowd. What was he missing? He looked back at the two men in front of him. He raised his brow at them. “Do you care to enlighten me then?”Book 3
