

Blessed 108

Chapter 108 Become A Poor Man Again

Being constantly mocked by Aggy, Trevor finally snapped.

He said through gritted teeth, "Do you really think I can't afford anything in here? Salesclerk, I'll take the Love of Crystal earrings, please."

He had hesitated earlier.

But now he decided to buy the one-hundred-thousand-dollar pair of earrings that Estrella pointed out to him.

Estrella had kept silent the entire time, but when she heard that Trevor was going to buy the earrings, her eyes suddenly lit up.

This was the moment she had been waiting for, for Trevor to expose his background. Was he really going to show how rich he really was now?

At the thought of this, Estrella could not help despising Aggy.

'You reckless, stupid bitch! Marlon is nothing! Let Trevor prove to you how wealthy he is!'

Of course, Aggy did not know what Estrella was thinking.

Hearing Trevor's words, Aggy said jokingly, "You were lucky enough last time to win the lottery and buy a bag worth three hundred thousand dollars. Do you really think someone like you can be rich all his life?"

Trevor scoffed. He knew it was useless to say anything more, so he just handed his bank card to the salesclerk and nodded.

The salesclerk took Trevor's card and swiped it on the terminal. After a few moments, she handed the card back to Trevor and said morosely, "Sir, your card has been declined."

"What? That's impossible. Let me go to the ATM nearby and check my balance."

Trevor could not believe what he just heard.

Was it because he just bought a Bugatti supercar this morning that he did not have funds in his account anymore?

Aggy cackled and said, "Oh, my God, are you kidding me, Trevor? You're still pretending to be rich? All right. Come on, let's go to the ATM together and see how much money is left in your bank account."

Aggy disliked Trevor even more and invited everyone to follow them to the ATM.

The ATM was set in front of the jewelry store.

Trevor walked toward it and stuck his card into the slot. He did not care that everyone was there to see the contents of his account. He waited as the machine processed his card.

Then, he input his PIN code.

Everyone held their breath as they stared at the ATM's screen.

After a few heartbeats, a pop-up window appeared.

It showed that Trevor's available balance was 30 dollars.

"Sir, there's only 30 dollars in your account."

The salesclerk next to Trevor was the first to speak after the seemingly long silence. She just followed Trevor and his friends out of curiosity. When she saw the balance, she could not help rolling her eyes at him.

Was he just at the store to pass the time, not to actually buy something?

The salesclerk had thought that she was going to make a big sale with the Love of Crystal earrings, but it turned out to be a ruse.

But she was not the only one who felt displeased.

Estrella's eyes were wide open, and there was only one thought in her mind.

'Damn it! Trevor must have spent all his money! I just wasted my time catering to him!'

"This is how you pretend to be rich, Trevor? With 30 measly dollars in your bank account?"

Marlon snorted derisively and patted his thigh.

He had been displeased with Trevor for a long time. He really did not understand why Luisa would befriend such a destitute man like him.

"Oh, you poor, deceitful bastard. It must be humiliating trying to buy such an expensive piece of jewelry like Love of Crystal with 30 dollars."

Aggy immediately joined Marlon in poking fun at Trevor.

Trevor could do nothing but dip his chin and think hard. There must be a reasonable explanation for his account being practically empty. Then, he remembered.

At noon, he sorted out his bank cards in his wallet and planned to cancel the unnecessary ones.

Since he was too busy thinking about buying a gift for Luisa, he fished out the wrong card by accident.

Another reason was that the two cards looked very similar.

However, before he could defend himself, a woman with a clear, pleasant voice suddenly spoke.

"It's just a pair of earrings. I'll pay for Trevor."
