

Blessed 229

Chapter 229 Settle An Account With The Manager

Jaiden acted quickly after seeing that the child was seriously injured. He personally took Dilan to the emergency room and examined him carefully.

He said in a somewhat serious tone, "The bone in Dilan's leg is slightly broken. Fortunately, it is not severe. I will apply an ointment for now and then assign him to a ward in the Department of Orthopedics where he needs to stay for a few days."

Trevor's heart ached when he heard the news.

He was relieved to hear that the injury was not critical.

He looked at Luisa who also sighed in relief. With a grateful smile, he replied, "Thank you!"

Jaiden was flattered.

Not long after that, an ointment was prepared, and Jaiden personally applied it on Dilan.

Dilan grimaced in pain, but he was strong enough not to cry.

He acted tough as he declared, "When I grow up, I want to be like Trevor and beat the bad guys!"

Trevor patted Dilan's head in relief, but he was still angry at the manager who broke Dilan's leg.

He was determined not to let this matter go!

The scumbag deserved much suffering.

On top of that, the manager had ruined Trevor's plan to confess his feelings to Luisa.

After Jaiden finished treating Dilan, Trevor went over to him and asked, "Dr. Hudson, my phone's broken so can I borrow yours to make a call?"

Trevor borrowed Jaiden's phone and called Jeanne.

"Jeanne, help me buy the Landy Bookstore in Uphia Mall and send a digital copy of the contract to Maison."

On the other end of the line, Jeanne was a little surprised, but she accepted his order without question.

"Understood, Mr. Sanderson. I will handle it as quickly as possible."

Considering the manager's arrogance, Trevor had no plans of facing the other man alone so he also called Maison.

After receiving the call, Maison happily drove to the hospital.

Trevor gave Luisa an excuse so that he could leave first. He and Maison then went to the bookstore.

The manager was still sitting by the door when they arrived. When he saw Trevor, he jumped up immediately.

He rolled up his sleeves and aggressively stormed over to Trevor.

"How dare you come back here, you shameless beggar! I'm going to beat you up!"

He was about to hit Trevor but then he saw Maison who had been following after him.

Although the manager didn't know Maison, he could tell from his fierce expression that the other man was not to be trifled with.

He immediately chickened out and stopped in his tracks.

He pushed his sleeves back down, but he still didn't want to admit defeat so he demanded, "What are you doing here?"

However, while the manager rolled his eyes in response to Trevor and Maison's presence, Trevor noticed that the manager had his phone behind his back and was secretly pressing some buttons.

What was the scumbag up to?

Trevor saw no reason to panic because he had Maison by his side. He even sneered.

"Well, I've never seen such an unwelcoming store before. No wonder you're not getting a lot of customers despite being in a good location. You're going to lose your job soon."

The manager huffed in disdain, "Bullshit! The boss is my brother-in-law. Why would he fire me?"

Trevor didn't say anything else. He just tossed his head towards the manager, granting Maison permission to provoke the other man.

The manager was an awful person who was capable of scolding and beating children. Because of that, Trevor had no plans of forgiving him so easily.

Getting a beating from Maison was too light of a punishment.

Maison understood the unspoken command because they had discussed this during the drive. He immediately stepped forward with a fierce look on his face.