Chapter 240 Trevor Is Mr. Sanderson

Nodding his head, Boris answered, "Yes, he's a freshman majoring in journalism."

On the other end of the phone, Jeanne's hands trembled and she couldn't even hold her cell phone steadily.

Licking her lips nervously, she thought to herself, 'Is that Mr. Sanderson?'

At that time, Jeanne felt dizzy and she almost fell down.

Before, she had repeatedly told her brother to flatter Trevor.

Yet her brother did the opposite and even provoked him.

Now, he was forcing Trevor to drop out of school? How dare he?

In a hurry, Jeanne thought of a solution while cursing Keanu in her heart.

When Boris didn't hear her reply for a while, he asked in confusion, "Hello? Are you still there, Miss Brown?"

Although Jeanne tried to calm herself down, she couldn't help but feel scared. In a trembling voice, she said, "Mr. Cohen, please give the phone to Mr...I mean Trevor."

Immediately, Boris handed the phone to Trevor and warned him to be respectful.

However, to his great surprise, Trevor didn't show any respect and said coldly, "This is Trevor."

Regardless of whether Boris was dissatisfied or not, Jeanne immediately figured who the person was when she heard the voice on the other end of the phone.

Sure enough, the person that her brother had offended was none other than Mr. Sanderson!

The fact made Jeanne so flustered. She had finally become the acting manager of the Sanderson family in Jork.

Therefore, if she displeased Trevor this time, he could make her lose her position easily.

In a hurry, Jeanne apologized in a trembling voice, "Mr. Sanderson, it's all my fault for not disciplining my brother well. Please forgive me!"

Since Trevor was still angry because of Keanu, he didn't have a good attitude towards Jeanne either.

In a cold voice, he said, "Well, handle it by yourself then."

After giving a simple reply, Trevor hung up the phone directly without saying anything.

Of course, Boris was stunned by Trevor's cold words. Picking up his phone, he shouted angrily, "Trevor, do you know who Miss Brown is? She can make your life a living hell just by saying a few words. How dare you talk to her like that?"

Boris was about to continue yelling at him when the phone in his hand rang again.

Seeing that it was Jeanne who was calling him, he thought that she called him to ask for an explanation about Trevor's behavior.

Glaring at Trevor, Boris muttered, "You are going to drop out of school, but you are still so arrogant. I won't give you a chance to implicate others in our school."

In order to please Jeanne, Boris thought of what to say in his mind.

Then, he picked up the phone and promised before Jeanne could say anything, "Miss Brown, don't worry. I can promise you that we will punish Trevor. I'll send the security guards to his dormitory and kick him out right now."

However, Boris' promise wasn't appreciated by Jeanne, instead, she even got panic.

From the other end of the phone, Jeanne shouted angrily, "How dare you do that!"

Because of her sudden outburst, Boris was stunned. Furrowing his eyebrows, he asked, "What do you mean?"

Taking a few deep breaths to calm herself down, she said angrily, "Do you even know who Trevor is? He is my boss, Mr. Sanderson who is the boss of the commercial street in Jork!"

Hearing it, Boris' eyes widened.

Looking at Trevor with fear in his eyes, he thought to himself, 'What! Trevor is Mr. Sanderson?

How dare Keanu ask me to kick Mr. Sanderson out?

He must have a death wish!

Boris' hands trembled as he held the phone.

The monthly revenue of a luxurious place like the commercial street was probably enough to build a school like theirs!

Now that he had offended the great Mr. Sanderson, he might even be removed from his position.
