Chapter 280 What My Family Went Bankrup

Seeing the scene in front of her, Mona's face darkened.

On her wedding day, Howe and Trevor got into a great mess because of Luisa. How many people must think of their family as a joke?

In order to maintain their dignity and to prevent the relationship between the two families from deteriorating, Mona mustered up her courage and said to Howe, "Mr. Salazar, I'm sorry but can you do me a favor? Let's not talk about this matter right now. How about we talk about this after my wedding? Is that okay?"

Hearing this, Howe glared at Mona disdainfully and sneered.

Now that they were already at odds, Howe no longer cared about maintaining his image as a noble gentleman.

Obviously, his look meant that he wasn't going to do as Mona said.

Being ignored by Howe, Mona felt so embarrassed that she wanted to hide herself.

When Trevor saw Mona being humiliated, he didn't feel sorry for her.

In his eyes, a person who disliked the poor and favored the rich deserved to be treated that way.

Obviously, Howe didn't take the Burke family seriously. However, seeing the firm look on Luisa's face, he decided to ease the atmosphere.

After all, pushing people too hard often led up to worse decisions.

Thinking about it, Howe sneered and gave Luisa an ultimatum, "Well, I'll give you half an hour to think about it properly. Don't think of it as a joke. If you don't agree to be my girlfriend, you will have to face the consequences for disobeying me."

In fact, Howe thought that it was enough time for Luisa to figure out her part in this.

After saying that, Howe left the people without caring about the expressions on everyone's face. Then, he secretly contacted Kenton and told him to come to the West River Villa as soon as possible.

Since Trevor had humiliated him several times, Howe decided to take this as an opportunity to teach Trevor a lesson and vent his anger.

Time passed by and Luisa still didn't give in. The whole time Trevor accompanied her calmly.

On the other hand, the rest of the Burke family were in panic mood. They felt as if they were sitting on the thorns.

Although they tried to persuade Luisa several times, all of them were ignored.

How could they not feel uneasy and anxious thinking about the possible disaster that was to befall them?

After half an hour, Howe clapped his hands to get attention from everyone.

Then, he said, "Half an hour is up now. Have you made up your mind, Luisa? Will you become my girlfriend or will you let the Burke family end?"

Hearing this, Luisa closed her eyes in distress. At that time, Howe turned to look at Trevor and said contemptuously, "Poor loser, I thought you said the Salazar family would go bankrupt in half an hour. Why there isn't any news then?"

At that moment, Howe's phone in his pocket rang loudly.

When he saw the caller ID, he picked up his phone and answered impatiently, "Hello, what's up?"

After the person on the other end of the phone said a few words, Howe's face suddenly changed.

"What the hell are you saying? What do you mean my credit card is disabled?"

Without any further explanation, the person on the other end of the phone hung up.

Howe was about to call him back when his phone rang again and again. As he was talking on the phone, he looked more and more embarrassed.

"What? Do you know I'm your regular client? You can't just ask me to pay you back right now!"

"What the hell are you talking? That's my villa! You have no right to auction it!"

To say Howe was dumbfounded would be an understatement. He couldn't believe what on earth was happening right now.

He looked like a drowning man who was struggling desperately for air. Then, he immediately called the person he was most familiar with.

"Mom, do you know why my credit card is disabled? Why are they saying that my house is auctioned? And why is everyone urging me to pay back the money right now?"

On the other end of the phone, someone was crying and intermittent cries could be heard from this side.

After hearing what his mother said, Howe's face darkened instantly.

"But how is that possible? For so many years, our family has been in power. Why would it go bankrupt all of a sudden?"

After hearing everything from his mom, Howe looked as if he lost all his strength. He slumped into his chair and his phone slipped from his hand.

Looking at Howe's distressed face, Trevor said, "Well, do you believe me now? Like I said, your family has gone bankrupt. So, do you want me to buy you a rope to commit suicide?"

Hearing his words, Howe became furious. Raising his head, he stared at Trevor with red eyes and said angrily, "You bastard! This is all your fault! I'm going to kill you!"
