Chapter 285 The Proposal Cost Fifty Million Dollars

With a smile on his face, Trevor brought two chairs for them and said, "Why don't you two sit down and have a talk?"

His actions made Jeanne feel a bit embarrassed.

The one who brought a chair for her to sit down was her boss! What kind of special treatment was this?

Immediately, she sat down on the seat and said in a low voice, "T-Thank you."

Fortunately for them, Stewart was so immersed in shock that he didn't notice this subtle abnormality between them.

Then, the two of them sat down and the negotiation gradually got on the right track.

When they were discussing, Stewart had a wide grin on his face that he didn't try to conceal.

The thing that surprised him even more was that Jeanne, who represented the investor, was not only easy-going, but also willing to consider Noor's advice!

The situation was so incredible that Stewart kept pulling his goatee to determine if he was just dreaming.

At that time, Trevor, who was observing quietly from beside, couldn't help but smile.

While they were discussing, Jeanne looked at Trevor from time to time for advice. She wanted to make him feel that he was her supervisor no matter what.

The efficiency of their discussion made Trevor nod his head with satisfaction.

After that, Jeanne didn't waste much time and ordered her assistant to draft several rough plans for the construction.

Not long after, the drafts were sent over to them. Looking through them, Stewart failed to hide the look of shock on his face.

Originally, he thought that he would only receive a small amount of money to repair the old orphanage.

What he didn't expect was that this mysterious donor would tear down the orphanage and rebuild it.

What was more, the donor even took the suggestion from the little girl and decided to build a school and amusement park!

It would definitely cost a fortune!

At that time, Trevor was looking through the drafts that were sent to him on his phone.

The draft that Jeanne gave Trevor was more detailed, including the specific cost and size.

The discussion was about to finish when Jeanne remembered something.

Since Trevor had told her not to expose his real identity, how was she going to make the final decision?

After racking her brain for some time, she came up with a solution.

"So, how much do you think our company should spend on this? 10 million, 30 million, or 50 million?"

Hearing the amount of money, the old director was stunned. Was he dreaming?

Shouldn't she ask that to her boss?

It was his first time meeting such kind of donor, who was so generous and respectful to the orphanage.

To make sure that it wasn't a dream, Stewart pulled his beard hard again.

This time, he pulled so hard that a few hair were pulled off! Although it hurt, he couldn't wipe the smile off his face.

Obviously, he didn't know what to reply to Jeanne.

Seeing his reaction, Trevor also smiled. Of course, he knew that Jeanne was asking the question to him.

When he turned around, Jeanne was indeed looking at him as if she was waiting for his order.

After thinking for a while, Trevor raised five fingers to Jeanne secretly.

It meant 50 million dollars!

This was the highest budget investment plan. In addition to rebuilding the orphanage, they would even build high-quality comprehensive teaching buildings and amusement park in the orphanage!

Seeing this, Jeanne breathed a sigh of relief. After all, she got clear instructions from her boss.

Jeanne noticed that Steward was still in dilemma. With a smile on her face, she said, "How about we use the plan that costs 50 million dollars?"

Hearing this, Stewart's smile widened. Tears welled up in his eyes.

Holding Jeanne's hand, he said in a trembling voice, "Thank you so much! Thank you so much!"

When they were discussing, Noor didn't leave the office and sat quietly beside Trevor.

Although she didn't know what they were saying, she could roughly understand the situation. Then, she squealed happily and ran out of the room excitedly to tell her friends.

Not long after that, the children in the orphanage swarmed over towards them.

All of them had a happy smile on their faces.

Even though they were young, they knew what happened.

All they knew was that the kind-hearted people decided to help them and so, they wouldn't have to be afraid or starved in the future.

Seeing the happy looks on the children's faces, Trevor couldn't help but smile with satisfaction.

In fact, the expense was nothing to the Sanderson family. However, it could let all the children in the orphanage have a happy childhood.

Jeanne, who was standing aside, became more respectful to Trevor when she saw the happy children.

Although he was incredibly rich, he didn't do anything bad like others. Instead, he even wanted to help others.

She had never seen someone as kind as him.

At that moment, she remembered something.

Taking advantage of the children who were celebrating, Jeanne got closer to Trevor and whispered, "Mr. Sanderson, there's an issue that needs your decision."
