Chapter 336 Meet At The Swimming Pool

This situation was beginning to seriously annoy Trevor.

'Damn, what does this snobbish girl want from me? Just of recent, she wanted to frame me of cheating on exams.

Now she is following me. What on earth is she up to?' Trevor wondered.

Meanwhile, Mattie waved at Trevor in the distance.

"Trevor... Sorry, Mr. Sanderson! Please, I'm here to apologize to you!"

It wasn't until then that Trevor understood everything.

In fact, Mattie had been waiting for an opportunity to apologize to him. That was why she followed him to the building housing the boys' dormitory.

However, Trevor didn't want to have anything to do with Mattie anymore.

He waved his hand impatiently at her and said, "Well, you deserve your punishment. Now get lost and you'd better not mess with me again!"

It was pretty scary to be followed by a stalker, especially if it was a maniac like Mattie. Trevor wanted to get rid of her as soon as possible.

Hearing what Trevor said, Mattie was overjoyed and thanked him earnestly.

"Thank you, Mr. Sanderson. I won't disturb you again!"

She was about to leave when she thought of something. After all, she needed to cotton up to Mr. Sanderson. She turned to Trevor and said, "Mr. Sanderson, I heard from the student union that the journalism department would assign a special task during the summer break. It is about finding a celebrity to do a special interview."

After saying that, Mattie bowed politely and left.

Trevor stood for a moment watching Mattie's receding silhouette. He was actually thinking about what she had just said. Frowning, he pulled out his phone and opened the school group chat.

Indeed, there was soon a message corroborating what Mattie had just told him.

"To all students, regarding this year's social practice task, you will need to find a person who has a certain social status and conduct a special interview with the said person. You have carte blanche to choose the topic of your interview."

Trevor also read through some of the messages from students about the activity. Most of the students complained about it.

"How do you expect us to find a celebrity? We're just ordinary college students!"

"This year's task is too difficult!" another person complained.

Trevor was also a little annoyed but for a different reason.

Unlike the other students, he knew so many wealthy businessmen in Jork who could be perfect for the interview.

He wouldn't have any trouble interviewing them.

The problem, however, was that these men would be so excited to meet him that they would start introducing their daughters to him.

Trevor thought for a moment about the best thing to do. Finally, he pulled out his phone and contacted Jeanne. She could help him.

He asked her to look for a suitable social celebrity he could interview.

Trevor was amazed that Jeanne answered him very quickly.

"Mr. Sanderson, your request is timely. A big star has just finished filming a commercial for a subsidiary of the Sanderson group. She lives in Willard Villa for now."

Attached to Jeanne's message, was a document about the star.

This celebrity was Celine Barnes. She had gained huge popularity over the past two years and was even dubbed "men's dream girl".

She was undoubtedly the most suitable celebrity for Trevor to interview.

Trevor wasn't the type to watch TV shows, so he had no idea who she was.

He nonetheless felt she would be the perfect person for him to interview, and so his decision was made. He would interview her.

The next morning, Trevor drove his Bugatti Chiron to the Willard Villa.

Trevor didn't want to waste time. Since he had this opportunity to finish his task soon, then he might as well get started. He had already made an appointment with Celine today.

However, he was stunned when Celine told him the place she wanted to meet him.

'How can such a celebrity want to meet me at an outdoor swimming pool?' Trevor wondered.

Once at the meeting place, Trevor thought he was mistaken.

There was a reception hall near the swimming pool but it was empty.

Taking a deep breath, Trevor decided to go to the swimming pool.

Willard Villa's outdoor swimming pool was extremely luxurious, with beautiful landscaping and a top privacy.

Moreover, access to the swimming pool was exclusively by reservation.

For this reason, this place was a haven for the rich and famous of Jork.

Trevor was actually the owner of Willard Villa. However, he had never been to the pool before.

The pool had several compartments and it was also equipped with chairs and umbrellas for people to rest.

Trevor stood there looking around for the woman he had an appointment with.

He then spotted a woman in a hot bikini, swimming leisurely in the biggest compartment of the swimming pool.

Another woman in her 40s sighed helplessly as she looked at the sexy young lady swimming.

"Celine you know you're a superstar now. There are things you can't afford to do anymore. Imagine the paparazzi taking pictures of you right now!"

In fact, this woman was Celine's agent. The star's image was managed by an agency, and it was thanks to this that she had achieved this "dream girl" status.

If her male fans knew she was so open in private, it would be a blow to her career going forward.

Celine turned to the woman and said coquettishly, "I've heard that Mr. Sanderson wants to interview me. I want to leave a good impression on him!"
