Chapter 471 Fight The God Of Death!

When Trevor successfully swam to the lonely island with Luisa, he had almost used up all his strength.

However, he didn't have time to rest.

Trevor patted Luisa's face twice, but she still didn't regain her consciousness.

The situation was extremely critical. He had to give her first aid, or she might not make it.

Trevor hurriedly propped her up against him. He then stood in a forward lunge position, with his left leg leaning forward.

Carefully, he positioned Luisa with her stomach facing downward against his thigh. Still unconscious, her body drooped down. He kept patting her firmly on her back to help her spit out the water she had inhaled.

After doing this for a few minutes, Luisa spat out three or four mouthfuls of salt water, but she couldn't anymore.

However, she still didn't wake up even after this.

He placed the back of his hand under her nose to feel her breath, but he couldn't feel anything. Fortunately, she still had a pulse.

Trevor gritted his teeth, panicking a bit.

No matter what, he had to save his girlfriend.

'Luisa, hold on!

You have to live! I'll fight the God of Death if I have to!

Taking a deep breath, he squatted down beside her.

He held Luisa's head and pressed her forehead with his right hand.

He held Luisa's head and pressed her forehead with his right hand.

He then put his other hand on her chin and opened her mouth.

With the faint morning light, he could see that there were no sand, seaweed, or other things blocking her airway.

Trevor took a deep breath and bent down.

He pinched Luisa's nose with his right hand and pressed his mouth against hers. He tried his best to align their lips perfectly to create a seal. With all his strength he had left, he blew air into her mouth.

Luisa's mouth was cold and moist, which made him feel quite nervous.

Trevor didn't think of anything when their lips touched, but he became more anxious.

As he was giving her CPR, he kept praying in his heart.

'Luisa, you must wake up!

You must!

Trevor blew air into her mouth and let go of his hand that was pinching her nose. He did this a couple more times to let her breathe naturally.

When he had done it ten times, he began to apply more force on Luisa's chest.

One...Two... Trevor forcefully pressed down on Luisa's sternum.

This was the only way he could make her heart beat again.

He kept rotating between artificial respiration and chest compressions, desperately praying the whole time.

Three minutes later, Luisa finally woke up.

Her eyelashes quivered slightly, and her face seemed to grimace in pain.

At the same time, Trevor felt that Luisa had moved slightly.

He gently pulled open her eyes and found that his girlfriend's pupils had returned to normal.

Her skin now had a bit of color in them.

Even her body temperature started returning to normal.

At this moment, Trevor felt that his eyes were a little wet. He wondered if it was tears or rain.

But then he remembered that he had no time to think about these things.

Trevor stopped the chest compressions and put his ear on Luisa's chest.

Thump! Thump! Thump! It was the sound of her heart beating.

Ten seconds later, he finally smiled with relief.

Realizing that she was alive, Trevor collapsed beside his girlfriend.

After such a long, terrible ordeal, he felt that his body and mind were completely exhausted.

But everything was worth it now that Luisa had survived.

Chapter 472 Finding The Cave

It was raining heavily.

Luisa and Trevor were lying on the beach side by side.

Anyone who saw them like this would be terribly shocked by this messy scene.

It was only after a few more minutes that Luisa finally moved.

She coughed a few times before slowly opening her eyes.

"W-where am I?" she asked dizzily.

Although he was tired, Trevor helped Luisa up and held her tightly in his arms.

"I'm so glad to see that you are fine, honey. I was so scared!"

Luisa could feel Trevor's sincere joy, and it filled her heart with warmth.

She hugged Trevor back and the two stayed like that for a moment, in each other's arms.

When she felt that she was in danger of drowning Luisa was really scared just now.

Fortunately, everything was finally over!

After lying on the sand for a long time, Trevor was able to regain some strength.

He stood up and pulled Luisa up.

The heavy rain didn't seem to be stopping any time soon. They had to find shelter as soon as possible.

Otherwise, they would most certainly catch a nasty cold.

The young couple then began to explore this isolated island on which they were stranded.

Luisa soon found a hidden cave half-covered with dense vines at the back of a small hill.

"Well done, Luisa!"

Trevor praised her happily.

Trevor praised her happily.

He felt that perhaps their misfortune had come to an end and that they were finally lucky.

However, Trevor was cautious enough not to just rush Luisa recklessly into the cave.

"Let's inspect the inside first, okay?"

Without waiting for her answer, Trevor moved in front of Luisa to protect her. Then he reached out to pull away the drooping vines in front of the cave.

They knew nothing about this uninhabited island, so they had to be very cautious.

Trevor was relieved to discover that there was no rotten smell inside the cave.

That meant that there wasn't some wild animal living in there.

After thinking for a while, Trevor reached for his backpack.

In it was everything he had been able to get from Platinum.

Trevor needed to be sure there was no lurking danger in this dark cave.

Alas, the flashlight in his backpack had been soaked in sea water for a long time and was now damaged.

The torch shed a very faint light such that there was no difference with the darkness.

Luckily, the lighter wasn't damaged as well.

Trevor rushed to the thick forest nearby and picked up a few dead tree branches that were not too wet by the rain.

He then wrapped some plastic bags on the branches and lit them to make a simple torch.

He then quickly threw the torch into the cave.

Soon, the cave was lit up and dozens of bats swarmed out!

The heat of the fire also caused several snakes to rush out of the cave.

Luisa was so scared that she clung to Trevor's back for a long time.

Trevor understood Luisa's fear. After all, she was a girl and girls were easily scared by nature.

Luisa was clinging to Trevor so tight that her voluptuous chest was literally crushing against Trevor's back.

For a moment, Trevor was distracted by the soft feeling on his back.

It wasn't until all the snakes had rushed into the forest that Luisa finally came to her senses. She quickly stood straight with a red face.

Trevor just gave a simple smile without saying anything.

He then lit another single torch, and led Luisa into the cave, holding her hand.

The two torches Trevor had lit completely illuminated the cave.

The cave was not very deep.

The entrance was narrow and rather long, and the interior was quite big.

Several large boulders protruding about half a meter above the ground, formed a relatively flat platform, where they could lie down and rest.

Trevor and Luisa were very excited.

They finally had a place to temporarily stay!

Chapter 473 A Ferocious Beas

With the torch he had made, Trevor searched every nook and cranny of the cave.

Thanks to his search, he scared away another group of spiders and snakes. He was now convinced that they were safe.

Thus reassured, Trevor took Luisa to the dense forest to collect as much dry branches and leaves as they could gather. They also took a few large banana leaves to serve as a mattress.

Once they had picked enough dry leaves and branches for the fire, the two returned to the cave. At that moment, there was lightning and thunder outside.

The night sky was illuminated from time to time by flashes of lightning which were followed by rumbles of thunder.

Trevor and Luisa who were now safe in the cave felt quite lucky not to be outside with such a bad weather.

This cave was truly a blessing.

If they hadn't found this cave, they would be outside under this heavy rain!

The young couple looked at each other and smiled. They then went on to tidying up the cave a little bit.

Soon, the interior of the cave was cleaner and more comfortable.

Finally, they lit a small bonfire with stones and the dry branches they had picked up in the forest.

Trevor and Luisa watched the flames dance in the darkness of the cave. Slowly, the bonfire rose into a beautiful orange light, warming the whole cave.

However, a thick smoke rose at the same time from the fire, and threatened to suffocate them. Trevor hurriedly removed some branches from the fire to clear the smoke.

The thick smoke was actually a result of those branches being somewhat wet.

It wasn't until Trevor was done building the fire that he realized Luisa was watching him.

As soon as he stopped, Luisa leaned over him and asked with admiration, "Trevor, how come you know so much? That's amazing!"

As soon as he stopped, Luisa leaned over him and asked with admiration, "Trevor, how come you know so much? That's amazing!"

Trevor smiled and replied, "I should thank Bradley for teaching me all this. Whenever he was free, he taught me some survival skills."

At the mention of Bradley the young couple had a bitter smile.

They wondered whether Bradley was okay.

Trevor let out a heavy sigh.

Luisa tried to comfort him as best she could.

"Trevor, don't worry. I think Bradly will be fine. After all, he is so incredible," Luisa said in a low voice.

Trevor nodded silently.

Trevor could only hope that Bradly's powerful fighting skills would allow him to escape from this group of fierce pirates.

Suddenly, Trevor remembered that when he fled Platinum, Bradly had given him something. He was so anxious to escape then that he didn't have time to check it.

Just as Trevor was about to take a look at what Bradly had given him, a sound came from the direction of the cave entrance.

Apparently an animal had snuck through the vines and entered.

Trevor jumped up, alert. He stood in front of Luisa to protect her and watched the cave entrance carefully.

What he saw sent a cold shiver down his spine.

A gigantic leopard stood at the entrance to the cave, its large green eyes shining like torches in the dark of night.

The light and shadows effect caused by the lightning outside, as well as the rumbles of thunder made the leopard even more frightening.

Trevor's heart tightened.

Though Bradly had taught him many fighting skills, Bradly had never taught him how to fight a wild animal, let alone a leopard.

Trevor was at a loss right now.

Luisa also realized what wild beast was standing at the entrance of the cave thanks to the light of the fire.

Luisa was so terrified that she let out a scream. However, she quickly covered her mouth for fear of irritating the beast.

An eerie silence fell in the cave. For a brief moment the young couple and the leopard stared at each other.

A sudden thunder rumble eventually broke the silence.

The leopard who was probably frightened by the thunder took a few steps closer to the cave.

It bared its teeth wildly and growled.

The scary scene gave Trevor chills. He swallowed hard and his palms were sweating.

If it weren't for the rising flames, the leopard might have already rushed over and pounced on him.

However, not even the flames could hold the fierce beast indefinitely.

After a while, a sharp and piercing roar was heard.

The leopard suddenly rushed over!

It was clear that the leopard didn't feel any threat from the two people.

The leopard felt it would be a piece of cake to deal with the two people in the cave.

Because of the dancing flames and the fact that the leopard acted quickly, Trevor and Luisa did not see its action clearly.

The beast rushed aggressively towards the young couple and it was almost in front of them.

Then, it started howling.

Chapter 474 Pistol

The leopard died in peace.

There were two bloody holes in its head as it collapsed to the ground and died.

Trevor's chest heaved up and down as he looked at the beast. Even though it had already died, he still had a lingering fear that it might still be alive.

He patted his chest to calm himself down. He was glad that his skills in shooting were good. He and Luisa almost died here, after all.

Fortunately, he carried the Colt M2000 pistol with him, and the sea water didn't damage it.

Just a while ago, the leopard came running toward them. It waved its sharp claws as if it was saying that it could peel away their flesh without any minimal effort.

During that critical moment, Trevor pushed Luisa away. Then, he rolled sideways to avoid the leopard's attack.

He accidentally touched a hard object on his waistband at that point. That was when he realized he had a gun with him this whole time.

He quickly pulled out his gun and aimed straight at the leopard's head.

Then, he pulled the trigger, causing a loud bang to echo in the cave.

The training had finally paid off.

Since the distance between him and the leopard was short, Trevor managed to accurately shoot the leopard's head two times.

Thus, he killed the beast.

He waited for more than ten minutes, but the leopard didn't make a sound. That was when he stepped forward and kicked it.

Seeing that the beast was still motionless, he and Luisa breathed a sigh of relief. Especially since it seemed like it really was dead.

Trevor temporarily wrapped the leopard's body with a banana leaf and threw it in a corner of the cave.

After all, if they left the corpse outside, the smell of blood might attract other fierce beasts. That would be the worst-case scenario.

Under the thunder's and lightning's cover, Trevor's and Luisa's movements were almost imperceptible, and they also gradually calmed down.

Trevor sat back beside the bonfire before patting the ground next to him. He then told Luisa to come closer.

Trevor sat back beside the bonfire before patting the ground next to him. He then told Luisa to come closer.

Her clothes were wet, and he knew that she would catch a cold if she wore wet clothes.

Medicine was nowhere to be found on this uninhabited island. Even a minor illness would become troublesome!

"Luisa, take off your clothes," Trevor ordered.

He planned on building a simple shelf with several branches to dry their clothes.

But Luisa's cheeks flushed bright red as soon as she heard what he said.

Both of them were alone in a cave, and the only source of light they had was a bonfire while a storm was raging outside.

Even though they were a couple, they weren't that intimate yet.

Luisa nervously bit her lip. She didn't want to think any further.

When Trevor turned around so he could ask Luisa to take her clothes off again, he immediately noticed her covering her face. That was when he realized that she probably misunderstood what he had said.

"L-Luisa, I didn't mean it like that!" he hurriedly explained. "I just wanted to..."

Luisa shook her head, still flustered. "It doesn't matter. I know what you mean, but you have to turn around!"

Hearing this, Trevor scratched the back of his head before looking away. When he noticed Luisa move from the corner of his eye, he couldn't help but take a peek.

Her body glowed under the light of the fire. It caused his heart to race.

He quickly looked away before Luisa could notice that he was peeking at her. Then, he asked her to dry herself up by the fire after setting up the shelf.

He sat a bit far away from her before taking off his wet clothes, including his trousers.

"Trevor, give me your clothes. I'll dry them for you," Luisa said. She noticed that Trevor was sitting quite far from the fire, so she became worried that he might catch a cold. That was why she wanted to dry his clothes first.

Her kindness made him subconsciously smile as he gave her his clothes.

When both of their clothes were almost dry, Luisa grabbed hers and put them on. She asked Trevor to put on his clothes as well.

Luisa sighed as she leaned on Trevor's shoulder. "I wonder when the rain will stop?"

Because of the heavy rain, the only shelter they could find was the cave they were in. They didn't bring much food with them, either. The only food they brought was enough for two meals at most.

More importantly, they didn't know when they would be rescued.

Noticing Luisa's worried look, Trevor smoothed her hair, trying to comfort her. "Don't worry, Luisa. I promise I'll protect you. We'll get through this."

Luisa put her arms around Trevor's waist. "I hope so, Trevor. I'll always believe in you."

When both of them looked into each other's eyes, they felt a faint sense of relief surge through them. The atmosphere between them also gradually became a lot more intimate.

Luisa's cheeks flushed bright red as she said, "I don't know when the fire will go out, but I think we should hold each other to warm ourselves when we sleep."

Trevor's eyes widened, and his body instantly tensed up. He only had one thought in mind at that moment.

He was going to sleep with Luisa in his arms!

Seeing Trevor's expression, Luisa shyly covered her face. "D-Don't take it the wrong way!"

"Sorry." Trevor chuckled. "I promise I won't."

However, when he held Luisa's soft body in his arms, her fragrance wafted through his nose, causing him to feel restless.

Both of them were also exhausted, especially after what happened.

They stayed silent as they lay on their temporary bed. It wasn't long before they felt sleepy.

"Trevor, why don't you put your pistol away for a moment? You know we're about to go to sleep, right?" Luisa whispered.

Trevor's eyes widened as he blushed.

Chapter 475 Searching For Some Herbs

Trevor and Luisa had spent their first night on the uninhabited island, and now it was a new day.

A faint cough woke Trevor from a beautiful dream.

When he opened his eyes, he immediately saw Luisa's sleeping face.

Her looks were very charming even though she didn't use any cosmetics.

However, Trevor immediately realized that something was wrong.

Luisa's body was warmer than usual.

Her face was red, and she groaned from time to time.

With a slight frown, Trevor pressed a hand over her forehead to check her temperature.

It was as if her skin was on fire!

Luisa had a fever!

Trevor smiled wryly. The irony of their situation was not lost on him.

After dealing with the leopard, they had taken off their wet clothes and hung them over the fire to dry to avoid getting chilled—and yet Luisa still caught a fever.

There was no time to delay!

Trevor frowned. He needed to find some medicine for Luisa!

He gently withdrew his arms from around Luisa and shuffled out of their makeshift bed. He moved slowly so as not to wake her, but her eyes opened anyway.

"Hmm... Where are you going, Trevor?"

Luisa lifted her head slightly, causing her coat to slip off one shoulder.

With her pink complexion and one of her shoulders exposed, she looked particularly beautiful.

However, her voice was pitifully weak.

Trevor gently carded his fingers through her hair and explained, "You have a fever, Luisa, so you should sleep some more. I'll go find some herbs for you."

Luisa was also aware that something was off about her condition because she felt hot all over. She smiled apologetically at him.

Trevor stood up and walked towards the entrance of the cave.

He then turned around and handed his M2000 pistol to Luisa.

After teaching Luisa how to use it, Trevor left the cave feeling a little more at ease.

The skies had cleared up after yesterday's storm.

Trevor left a mark under a big tree in front of the cave and explored the dense forest.

About half an hour later, he came to a stream.

He had kept an eye out for any herbs along the way, but he failed to find anything useful.

It was Bradly who had taught Trevor some things about natural medicine.

The stream was very clean, and the clear rushing noise it made was pleasant to hear. Dew dripped from the treetops.

If there was a stream, that had to mean that there were mushrooms or wild grass nearby.

The chance of finding herbs was higher.

After walking along the stream, Trevor found something that made him gasp and then smile.

'That looks like Houttuynia cordata, also known as fish mint. It can be used as medicine to help alleviate fevers and detoxify the body!'

Unfortunately, Trevor only had an idea of what a fish mint plant looked like because of what Bradly had told him.

He was not entirely sure if these weed-looking plants were really fish mint.

After a moment's hesitation, Trevor came to a decision.

For Luisa's sake, he needed to check if his hunch was right.

Trevor dug out a few plants that looked like fish mint.

After washing them in the stream, he popped some of its leaves into his mouth.

Trevor had not eaten much all day so he was quite hungry. He plucked the leaves and stuffed it into his mouth with gusto.

If the plants he found turned out to be fish mint, he could use it not only as medicine but also as food.

After a few bites, he frowned.

'Ugh... It tastes really weird.'

However, as soon as he thought that, Trevor waved his arm in excitement.

Just as the name implied, a faint fishy taste began to spread in his mouth.

This proved that the plant he found was fish mint!

Chapter 476 Another Figure!

'This fish mint has such a strong smell! But at least it is edible and is good at reducing fever.

I need to find much more so we can be prepared.'

At last, Trevor felt relieved and smiled brightly.

He collected some more fish mint which he wrapped tightly in a plastic bag and hung it on the side of his backpack.

Then, he went back along the way he had come.

Trevor had been smart enough to mark the trees with a stone between short intervals.

Therefore, he didn't have much trouble finding his way back to the entrance of the cave.

If he hadn't done that, he might have probably got lost in this dense jungle.

Trevor felt really grateful towards Bradley who had taught him all these survival skills. Thinking of Bradley, Trevor couldn't help but sigh. If only Bradley were by his side.

Trevor lifted up the vines at the entrance of the cave and walked inside. No sooner had he walked into the cave than he was shocked.

There was another figure in the cave!

And the figure was bending beside Luisa!

Trevor felt a cold shiver running down his spine.

Was this just a hallucination?

He tried to reassure himself and did his best to calm down. Holding his breath, he quietly walked over.

Another figure appeared in the cave. This time, it was just next to Luisa and seemed to be resting with her back to the entrance.

Trevor took a deep breath and quietly pulled out the fruit knife, padding forward.

Soon, Trevor was only a few steps away from the intruder. At this point, he could tell that the stranger was a woman.

She wore a short skirt that seemed to be made of animal hide, and it revealed her smooth, tanned thighs.

Her legs were slender but visibly very powerful.

She also wore a T-shirt, which was already worn out.

Her chest was so full that it seemed it would burst out the T-shirt at any time.

And her bare waist was very slender.

Though the woman was visibly very attractive, Trevor wasn't tempted.

He just wanted to catch this woman quickly lest she hurt Luisa.

Now, he was just five steps away.

Three steps.

One step!

Just when Trevor was about to make a move, the woman suddenly turned around.

She seemed to have a sharp sense of danger.

However, Trevor acted quickly.

The next second, the fruit knife was pointed against the woman's neck.

However, the woman was holding a sharp stone that she wouldn't hesitate to smack on Trevor's temple at any time.

"Who are you?" they both asked at once.

They looked at each other vigilantly.

It was not until then that Trevor saw the woman's face clearly.

The woman really had exquisite features, but her eyes revealed a bit of sharpness.

She had thin lips and exuded a rare wild beauty.

The tension between the two was very palpable, as if a bloody confrontation was about to erupt any moment.

It was only when Luisa suddenly woke up that the tension eased and all misunderstanding was clarified.

"Trevor, her name is Vida Tran. She was also attacked by a group of pirates not long ago and was exiled to this uninhabited island.

Vida, Trevor is my boyfriend. He's the one I told you about who went to get some herbs to help me lower my fever."

Although her face was a little pale, Luisa seemed to be much better now.

She gathered whatever strength she had to explain the situation very quickly.

Luisa also told Trevor that Vida had fed her some herbal juice, thanks to which her fever subsided a little.

Feeling relieved, Trevor put down his knife.

However, he did not let his guard down at all.

"Were you also a passenger on the Platinum?" he asked the woman.

For some reason, Trevor felt that she was hiding something.

Vida shook her head and said calmly, "I was on a small passenger ship. A group of pirates attacked my ship more than ten days ago."

Trevor was really not convinced by what Vida said.

The way Vida had reacted earlier as well as her appearance did not correspond at all to an ordinary passenger.

However, she had graciously given Luisa some medicine to bring down her fever.

Trevor thought for a while.

He really felt that the woman was hiding something. However, she didn't seem to make trouble for them.

Trevor finally thanked Vida.

But he had no intention of letting her stay in the cave with them.

He didn't want to have too much contact with someone who seemed to have many secrets.

Vida seemed to have read Trevor's mind.

She smiled and said, "If I tell you there is a way for all of us to get out of this island, can we cooperate?"

At this moment, Trevor's face changed instantly!

Chapter 477 The Mysterious Woman

"Do you know that there are really islands around here? And those pirates are on another island not far away from us,"

Vida added upon seeing from Trevor's expression that he seemed to be interested.

And her words instantly awakened him.

He frowned and asked cautiously, "Seriously? I'm surprised. How do you know so much?"

If the pirates' lair was really nearby, they couldn't simply stay on the island and wait for the rescue.

It was too risky. What if the pirates came to the island and found them?

Vida looked at Trevor and shrugged her shoulders helplessly as if it was her way to dispel his worries. Then she said, "Trust me, I really don't have any other ideas. I know because I came from that island inhabited by the pirates. I only managed to escape by a lifeboat."

"Then tell me what happened to you in detail," Trevor said lightly.

Vida thought for a while and said, "About ten days ago, the ship I boarded was attacked by the pirates, and they brought us to the island.

When I went out to fetch water, I saw that the guards were not paying attention to me, so I sneaked out.

Then I found a lifeboat, so I successfully escaped and hid on this island."

Trevor was noncommittal. He just asked, "When did you come to this island? Did you see those pirates kidnapped the passengers of our ship and took them there?"

He wanted to get some information about Bradly, and Vida might help him.

But unfortunately, she said that she fled to this island four or five days ago. And she learned from Luisa that Platinum was also attacked at that time.

Trevor sighed helplessly. He still had no way to find out Bradley's whereabouts.

However, he still got some useful information as they continued to talk.

He learned the range of the island and the pirates' location from Vida.

He also learned how many pirates were there, what weapons they were equipped with, and their patrol routes.

The captain was a guy named Barton Palmer.

"This group of pirates is too cruel. They treat their captives as animals. If they are unhappy, they beat their captives up,"

Vida continued. Her clear and cold voice echoed in the cave.

"Women usually have a more miserable ending. If I hadn't escaped in time, I would have been abused and killed too."

Trevor nodded, thinking to himself, 'Vida seems right. Those pirates are indeed very brutal.'

However, his heart skipped a beat after hearing so much information.

The more he listened to Vida, the more he felt that the woman in front of him was not simple.

To gain Trevor's trust, Vida took out a simple nautical chart made from animal skin. A rough outline of the islands was drawn on it using charcoal.

She pointed at a small island and said, "This is the island we landed on, and next to this is the pirates' lair."

The map was very clear. Indeed, the pirates' lair was not too far away from them.

"Don't underestimate these pirates. If we don't make a move sooner, they may come to us soon,"

Vida said with a dignified expression. It seemed that she wanted to make Trevor her ally.

"So, what's your plan?" Trevor suddenly asked.

Vida's eyes lit up at once. She said, "We have to go back to the island where the pirates are and ask for help from the outside.

The pirates have all kinds of living goods, computers, and wires in their lair. It's like their secret base."

Vida paused. She seemed to observe Trevor's reaction.

Then she put forward another condition that was hard to refuse, "Besides, there are many rare resources like medicines there. Although Luisa's fever is gone, she still needs real medicine to recover."

Trevor was shocked when he heard the first half of Vida's words.

He thought that she was the boldest woman he had ever met. How could she want to return to the pirates' lair?

He wanted to refuse. But the latter part of her words made him hesitate.

Trevor turned to look at Luisa, who was pale and weak.

Then he finally nodded in agreement, gritting his teeth.

"Okay, I'll go with you then."

Chapter 478 Sneak Attack Succeeded

After settling Luisa down, Trevor followed Vida to where she hid the lifeboat. He was even more surprised by what he saw there.

It turned out Vida even knew archery!

There was a composite bow on the other side of the lifeboat!

Most of the arrows in the quiver seemed to have been used before.

Despite his curiosity, Trevor didn't ask any questions.

Of course, he didn't trust this woman.

However, they had agreed to cooperate at least for now as they shared the same goal.

Since this woman seemed determined to keep her identity a mystery, Trevor wasn't going to ask.

It took them nearly two hours aboard this rescue boat to reach the island where the pirates were.

Once there, Vida looked at Trevor seriously and said in a low voice, "Trevor, at this point, I can only help you identify the patrol route in the pirates' lair and also support you from outside. I can't venture there myself because I'm too easily spotted. I'm afraid you'll have to explore these pirates' hideout on your own."

Trevor didn't expect that. A deep frown appeared on his face and he fell into deep thought.

From what this woman told him, she had been held captive by these pirates and had managed to narrowly escape just a few days ago.

Trevor concluded that it would be more dangerous for her if she were caught than if it were him.

Moreover, there were lesser chances for him to be caught than her.

Trevor could understand why she didn't want to go into the island.

But there was something about Vida that really bothered Trevor though he couldn't quite put his finger on it. What if she was one of the pirates?

In that case, he was running headlong into a trap.

Trevor thought the matter over carefully.

After serious consideration, he dispelled that thought as it was very much unlikely.

'If Vida is really one of the pirates, she could have kidnapped Luisa when I was away.

She could have also alerted the other pirates to search the island and capture me too. Why would she have to go through all this trouble with us if she was a pirate?'

Trevor assessed the situation for a long time and finally agreed to Vida's plan.

The two of them then agreed on their respective missions.

Under Vida's guidance, they soon reached the forest outside the pirates' secret base.

Crouching in the darkness of the forest, Trevor and Vida watched intently in the direction of the gate, waiting for an opportunity.

Dusk was near and they waited until nightfall.

Trevor had been waiting for long in that crouching position and now, he felt his legs numb. Just as he was about to stretch his legs, several figures finally appeared in his sight.

Three pirates came to the gate, cursing and dragging behind them an old acquaintance -- Newell!

Newell was in a very bad condition now. After being mercilessly tortured by these pirates, he looked very pale and thin.

He also wore a red and blue robe which was the uniform of the pirates.

He was limping from his injured leg. Obviously, his wound was far from healed.

Trevor noticed that Newell was holding a broom.

Once at the gate, the pirates threw him to the ground. Newell sat up and, limping from his injured leg, began to sweep the ground at the gate.

The proud young man had been brought down to the condition of slave.

Trevor didn't feel sorry for this guy at all.

The three pirates left Newell outside to sweep while they entered the base, chatting happily.

Suddenly, an idea came to Trevor's mind.

"Vida, watch the surroundings for me,"

Trevor whispered as he too observed the surroundings of the gate.

When he was sure that there was no danger, he slowly walked out of the forest without making a sound.

Thanks to the information provided by Vida, he managed to avoid being spotted by the sentries posted on the many high hills. He slowly approached Newell while still exploring the surroundings.

Newell was sweeping the floor superficially. Seeing no one around, he cursed and sat down on a stone to rest.

"Fucking pirates. You don't know who you attacked. After what you've done, I'm sure help will come soon. I swear to you that thanks to the power of my family, I will kill you all to the last.

And that bastard, Trevor! If it weren't for him, I wouldn't have been crippled. Damn it! I hope that bastard had drowned in the sea!"

Of course, Trevor heard everything Newell said, and that only made him want to laugh.

Since Newell hated him so much, it relieved him of any moral restraint as to what he planned to do next.

Trevor slowly approached Newell's back. In a quick move, he raised his hand and then brought it down almost immediately...

"Well..." Newell wanted to say something.

However, he was knocked unconscious.

Vida helped Trevor drag him into the forest and took the opportunity to strip off his clothes.

Then they tied him to a tree.

After a while, Newell slowly woke up. Only to find that he couldn't move.

He looked more carefully. And he was shocked to realize that he was tied to a tree, naked.

He was about to call out for help when he saw a man and a woman pointing their knives at his lower body. Their faces were covered with a black cloth.

Newell was so frightened that the words he was about to shout out stuck in his throat.

"If you don't want to be castrated, listen to me,"

Trevor said coldly.

"What do you want to do?" Newell asked, trembling all over.

"I don't want to do anything. Just answer whatever I ask.

Otherwise, I'll make you feel worse than death,"

Trevor replied lightly.

"Ask whatever you want to ask. I will answer all your questions."

Newell didn't show any resistance. He was totally a coward at this moment.

Trevor raised his eyebrows slightly and asked directly, "What is today's password?"

According to Vida, these pirates were arrogant.

But their rules were quite complicated, and they changed passwords every few days.

It was to prevent someone disguised as one of them from sneaking in.

Actually, Trevor's original plan was just to climb over the wall and sneak in.

But when he saw Newell, he changed his mind.

Newell stuttered, but he managed to smile with difficulty.

"I'm just a sweeper. I don't remember very well. But if you let me go, I may remember it again."

"Oh, really?"

Trevor sneered coldly and thought inwardly, 'How stupid!'

Under such a situation, Newell still wanted to play tricks. So Trevor slowly moved the dagger in his hand towards his crotch.

Newell got so scared that he shouted, "Wait!

I'll tell you now.

Today's password is pink lady."

Trevor raised his eyebrows. He immediately covered Newell's mouth with his hand and warned, "Don't shout. How many pirates are on duty today?"

Although Vida also knew about the patrol team of the pirates, there was nothing wrong with being cautious.

Newell was scared to death, but he endured it. He swallowed and said, "A total of fifty pirate soldiers are on duty tonight, and they will take turns."

"Are you telling the truth? Are there really fifty of them? Why do they have to deploy so many people to patrol?"

Trevor frowned slightly and looked at Vida.

Fortunately, he asked Newell about it. The information this mysterious woman in front of him gave him was different.

As if afraid of losing his penis, Newell quickly replied, "I don't know. But I heard that someone ran away some time ago, so they send more men to patrol this time."

Trevor didn't say anything and thought for a while. It seemed that Vida was telling the truth.

He was a little relieved. The pirates must have become more vigilant because of Vida's escape.

After getting all the information he needed, Trevor knocked Newell unconscious again.

"Vida, let's stick to the original plan. You'll be responsible for supporting me outside.

I will disguise as Newell and sneak in."

Trevor turned around, explained some things to Vida, and hid himself in the dark night.

He took a deep breath and slowly walked towards the pirates' lair with a broom in his hand.

To completely cure Luisa's disease, he had to risk life and limb in a dangerous place.

Chapter 480 Sneak In

In the pirates' base.

It wasn't easy to get your bearings in there.

In fact, the structure of the pirates' base was just like a maze.

As he navigated the crisscrossed corridors of the base, Trevor couldn't help but rejoice in his heart.

"I'm really lucky that Vida gave me all the information I needed. Otherwise, I would have lost my way long ago."

However, Trevor was still very cautious.

Though Vida had managed to give him some very crucial information, she couldn't figure out the layout of the whole pirates' base.

The information Trevor had was therefore quite limited and he needed to explore the base himself to learn more.

One of his headaches was finding the medicine room.

"How can I find the medicine in this huge place?" Trevor wondered.

Thanks to the clothes he had taken from Newell, he managed to sneak past the pirates unnoticed.

Trevor, however, remained on his guard. The environment was far too hostile for him to lower his vigilance for a moment.

Worse still, there were fifty or so pirates standing guard. He therefore had to be extremely vigilant.

Despite the fighting techniques that Bradley had taught him, he was no match for all these pirates. So if they caught him, he was a dead meat.

Suddenly, Trevor heard footsteps. He stopped at once and pretended to clean the ground.

Several pirates passed by him. Some stopped to ask him for the password, while others continued on their way after glancing at him.

The contact with these pirates, however brief it was, made Trevor's heartbeat quicken.

Trevor was wise enough to use his nervousness to his advantage. He showed his fear, which fooled the pirates.

They thought he was one of the captives who was assigned to clean up.

Thanks to his disguise, Trevor was able to search the rooms of the base without any problem. He found something surprising.

He found a satellite phone in a luxuriously decorated room.

Trevor was very excited by his finding.

He was about to enter the room when he suddenly heard a flurry of quick footsteps coming from the hallway.

Trevor instinctively lowered his head and again pretended to clean up. He changed direction so as not to be seen entering the room.

The footsteps were getting closer and closer. Trevor could smell a strong odor of alcohol. Suddenly, a pair of shoes appeared in front of him.

"Raise your head!" the man in front of him ordered.

Trevor had no choice but to raise his head slowly.

The pirate in front of him had a pizza face and was holding a half-bottle of wine in his hand. From his expression, Trevor guessed he was drunk.

"I haven't seen you before."

Although the pirate was quite drunk, he still seemed a little lucid and his hand was already gripping dangerously on his gun.

Trevor quickly dropped the broom and crouched down with his hands raised.

He pleaded, "I... I was caught two days ago! Don't kill me! Don't kill me!"

The pirate took another sip of his wine and held his gun even more tightly. He thought with a frown before asking, "You say you were caught two days ago? I only remember a cripple who was caught two days ago."

Of course, Trevor knew he was talking about Newell, so he said in a hurry, "He went to the bathroom and I'm just here to help him do his job. It's true. Don't kill me!"

The pirate looked at Trevor with disdain and sneered.

He kicked Trevor in the shin, knocking him to the ground!

"Then get to work. I'll kill you if all this isn't cleaned up!"

As he spoke, he took out his gun and pointed it at Trevor's head before leaving triumphantly.

Trevor had narrowly escaped death.

Although he had been able to keep calm, his heart was still beating rapidly with nervousness and his back was still dripping with sweat.

The satellite phone that represented his exit key was right in front of him, but he knew it would be very unwise to take it right away.

"If someone finds out that this phone is missing, I'll have a hard time getting out of here!"

After analyzing the situation for a while, Trevor finally decided to just remember the position of the room for the time being and not take the phone right away.

At this point, his top priority was to search for the medicine!

Unlike the satellite phone, if a bottle or two of medicine were missing, or even a pill or two in the pharmacy room, the likelihood of being noticed was very little!

Trevor got up and picked up the broom again. He had to restrain himself from entering the room to take the phone and decided to look for the medicine room instead.

Ultimately his efforts paid off.

After searching for a while, he finally found the pirates' infirmary!

At this time of night, the pirates who were supposed to be on guard had gone somewhere to have fun and there was no one in the infirmary.

Trevor rushed into the room and hurriedly looked for the medicine in the medicine cabinet.

Luisa was complaining of high fever and chills.

Those were most likely symptoms of malaria.

It was because he knew how serious this disease was that Trevor had insisted on sneaking into the pirates' lair and finding the medicine for Luisa.

He grabbed a cold medicine from the medicine cabinet, as well as a bottle of quinine, which was very good in treating malaria.

Just as Trevor was about to leave, he heard a flurry of footsteps from the corridor.

The footsteps were getting closer by second.

They were just a few meters from the infirmary.

Then, the footsteps halted.

The person stopped outside the door!
