

Blessed 90

Chapter 90 Don't Learn To Drive If You Can't Afford A Car

A few days passed in a blur without any dramas. It was rare for Trevor to have a quiet campus life for a few days. Time flew fast and it was weekend in the blink of an eye.

Just like they agreed, Trevor went to Bessie's house. Bessie taught him how to drive on the broad ground near her house.

The whole time, Trevor was excited as this was the first time that he had ever touched the steering wheel.

Under Bessie's guidance, Trevor finally calmed down and soon he made a smooth progress in learning it.

Time flew by and two hours had passed since they started.

Only after parking the car, Trevor could heave a sigh of relief.

When he turned around to give back the car key to Bessie, his face turned red.

Today, Bessie was wearing some casual clothes that she wore at home. As she was wearing short pants, her slender legs were bare, which tempted Trevor.

Since he was so focused on driving, he didn't notice it before.

Fortunately for Trevor, Bessie didn't seem to notice the look on his face. The two of them talked and laughed as they got out of the car.

Trevor was about to leave when he saw two figures coming towards their direction.

With wide eyes, Corrie shouted, "Why are you with Bessie, Trevor?"

Due to the scandals of Zavier, Corrie was depressed the whole week. Therefore, she and her roommate, Estrella Benton, planned to visit her cousin and relax on the weekend.

Hearing her question, Trevor said indifferently, "Oh, I'm here to learn driving from Miss Taylor."

Actually, he didn't like Corrie at all.

At that time, Estrella couldn't help but sneer as she said, "Why bother? Ha-ha, I don't think a loser like you can even afford the cheapest car."

Estrella was one of the girls who went to the Millennium Hotel that night. In fact, she was as avaricious as Corrie. Maybe even more straightforward than her. A downright gold-digger.

In her eyes, Trevor was always a poor loser.

Turning to look at Corrie, she asked, "Don't you think so, Corrie?"

With a gloomy look on her face, she nodded while saying, "Yes."

Obviously, she was in a bad mood.

Then, she looked at Trevor warily and warned her cousin, "Bessie, you should be careful. He's making a living by blackmailing the rich people. Who knows what he's up to when he learns to drive?"

When Trevor heard her words, he got depressed and snapped angrily, "How many times do I have to tell you that the video is edited maliciously. Next time, I'll go to that person and ask to prove the truth."

At the party, he was so focused on Zavier that he forgot to ask Selma to prove his innocence.

"I know you're genuine and kind, Corrie. But, I believe that Trevor won't do that kind of things. You both study in the same university. You should get along with each other."

Wrapping her arm around her cousin's shoulders, Bessie comforted her. Without doubt, she also heard what had happened at the party and she knew that it was a huge blow to Corrie.

Gritting her teeth, Corrie glared at Trevor and said, "I don't think so. What if he is just pretending to be innocent and do bad things secretly?"

"She's right, Miss Taylor. You are young and beautiful. You should beware of a guy like Trevor!"

At that time, Estrella also agreed with Corrie.

It seemed like both of them were venting their anger on Trevor.

Not wanting to argue anymore, Trevor shrugged and looked at Bessie who was giving him an apologetic look.

Everyone knew what happened between Corrie and Zavier.

As Corrie had just broken up with her boyfriend, Trevor didn't bother to argue with her anymore.

Suddenly, Bessie's phone rang.

After picking up the phone, her expression changed slightly. Judging by the way she touched her forehead, she seemed to be a bit helpless.

However, her face lit up in an instant once she saw Corrie's gloomy face. Then, she said to the person on the other end of the line, "Can I take my cousin and her friends there? If I can, I'll go there with you."

Finally, the person on the other end of the line agreed.

With a smile on her face, Bessie replied, "Okay, I'll see you later then."

After she ended the call, she held Corrie's hand and patted her hand while saying, "My friend invited us to have a meal in the Scarlet Restaurant that opened recently on the commercial street. Let's all go there and have a try."
