Home / Romance / Bye, My Ex-husband

Chapter 141 Journalists Blocked Their House

Janessa simply informed Gordon about the steps the company had taken and then refused to talk about company affairs anymore.

Even though they managed to set their past aside and become friends again, Gordon was still the manager of the Shen Group. Therefore it was best to keep discussions regarding the company out of their conversations.

They had endless interactions about the past. Any meal that had barbecue and beer was bound to make them nostalgic.

When the three finally finished dinner it was really late. Gordon called a driver to arrange for Alana and Janessa to return safely first before returning to his own place.

At home, Janessa took a long relaxing shower and then came to her bed. But sleep did not come to her. She could only think of the beautiful past she had once and found it unbelievable that she used to be so happy.

She realized that her dedication towards the Qiu Group had deprived her of all her chances to live a simple and happy life.

She stayed wide awake until dawn.

As she finally managed to leave her bed, she saw the dark circles around her eyes. She lazily covered them up with layers of foundation.

As she was halfway through her makeup, her phone rang disrupting the silence.

Janessa didn't expect that something should have remained hidden in the dark would be suddenly exposed like this.

It was Corbin on the phone. It was early for him to call. The moment she answered the call he said in a hurry, "Where are you?"

"Why? At home obviously. I will be going out in a while though." She carefully applied lipstick and puckered her lips. Seeing herself at the mirror she put down the lip tint in satisfaction.

make a move only then." Saying this, he quickly hung the phone.

"You don't need to come to work today. Pull the plugs out of your landline. Do not go on the Internet. Wait for my message, and

He did not even give her time to answer.

'Don't go out, don't go on the Internet or answer any phone call? What is wrong?'

She anyway opened her phone to check the Internet. But before she could put any update there, Alana rushed inside.

"Janessa, the house is surrounded by journalists outside. I went for grocery shopping, and almost could not make it back in the building. If the security guards did not stop them, I would never make it inside today." Alana was panting like a dog as she spoke. She was confused when she saw Janessa scroll through the micro-blog.

"What is going on?"

Now Janessa understood, why Corbin sounded so hasty and worried. A lot of people were swarming outside.

'But why on earth were they here anyway?'

Instead of answering her friend, Janessa opened her phone again to look up the most searched hashtags. Pretty soon she discovered that there were hashtags about her.

In fact, she had five to her name in the top fifty.

She randomly picked one of them to read and soon figured out what had happened.

Someone had clicked a picture of her while she was getting into Nolan's car. The car and everything that was going on inside was clearly visible in the snapshot. She was drinking red wine with Nolan. It seemed as if they were celebrating something.

All of it was very ridiculous.

her yet again.

opinion.

She knew herself that they were celebrating nothing that day. It was probably Nolan's idea to post this sneaky photo on the Internet to create a fiasco.

It was definitely approved by him, because otherwise it was impossible for anyone to photograph him.

What did he try to prove with this? She finally managed to save her reputation in the Lu Group. But now everything was messed up yet again, because of Nolan's photo.

without uttering a single word.

"What? It is not possible for you to be with the president of the Gu Group. These people will write any non-sense for publicity!

Alana just looked at her friend and then in the cell phone in complete silence. She simply walked behind and saw all the messages Don't let it affect you, Janessa." Alana trusted her friend not to be a traitor under any circumstances. She was sure that someone had set up her friend.

"I have done nothing, but the people of the Lu Group will surely doubt me again." Janessa lay on her back as hopelessness filled

'This was why Corbin called me. But would Rayan ever believe me after seeing the picture?'

would only make her seem more desperate.

"Why do these journalists have to be so boring? All they do is prepare false reports. All the journalists are waiting hungrily

She did not know what she would say to prove her innocence and that she said nothing to Nolan. She knew that trying to explain outside. I am sure they came for this." Alana sat beside Janessa and looked at her helplessly.

"Don't worry. Corbin called and informed me beforehand. So I won't be stepping out. I will check again once he gets back to me. I am okay. You go for work. Those journalists are here for me; they will not bother you I think."

She wanted to help her distressed friend but did not know how.

Janessa assured Alana about her well-being. But she knew deep within that she was trapped and would be subjected to the public's

"But are you really okay, though?" Alana was really concerned and wanted to make sure. This incident would have a large impact

"I'm okay. Please go now. I did not sleep last night. I will catch up on the missing nap now." Once Alana left, Janessa sat all alone

She did not understand Nolan's purpose for posting the photo.

She was very worried about the consequences.

on the sofa with a gloomy face.

just didn't make sense!

'We are done with their last project. There are no upcoming projects. Did he do this to give the impression that I am nothing but a because otherwise, not so many journalists would crowd.

spy for the Gu Group who relayed all of the Lu Group information?'

She was once married to Rayan. Even after the divorce, she still seemed to have no reason to betray the Lu Group! Everything Janessa thought long and hard, but could not find a reason for this erratic action.

She tried to remember exactly what happened that day. The moment she left the hospital, Nolan's car met her. It was at the gate and arrived only when she came out. It was obvious that he was indeed, waiting for her.

Inside the car, to be very precise, only Nolan drank wine, while she got out without even taking a sip.

But there she was, smiling and drinking with Nolan in this photo. The real question now was where did the photo come from?

Janessa finally sent the photo out to the best computer masters she knew. The investigation went on for an hour, before they discovered that it was photoshoped.

discovered that it was photoshoped.

"Hi, I talked to a friend about the photo, and turns out it is a doctored one. The person you see there is not me. Even though I do not yet know why Nolan would do that, I know that I never let out any company secrets."

She then called Corbin after thinking for a while.

She did not bother about anything as long as Rayan retained his trust on her, but...

The point of someone was trying to frame her, they indirectly trying to attack the Lu Group.

Janessa still did not know how Rayan reacted to the whole thing.