Chapter 144 Get Someone Out Of The Police Station

Janessa was all alone waiting at home for a while now. She was confused as to what actually happened or why no one answered her calls.

Initially she tried contacting Corbin but he hung up in haste saying he was too 'busy' to talk. Seeing no other way she called Rayan, even he refused to answer.

Alana called once to ask if the reporters had left already.

Janessa talked to her for a while and lay on her bed.

But that did not solve her problems. That was when she thought of someone who would really help her.

She quickly opened her phonebook and found Leona's name. She called her immediately.

Leona answered after a long ring of the phone.

"Hi, who is this?"

Leona answered lazily through the phone. Janessa was surprised that her friend was still sleeping when she looked at the clock, "It is twelve o' clock in the noon. Why are you still at bed? Shouldn't you be at work now?"

Even though it was late Leona was fast asleep.

They had not seen each other for some years only. How did she become so lazy in such a short time?

She tried hard to see the time on her phone, "Oh come on! It is still early!"

Janessa was rendered speechless. She would have never called her during this time had it not been for today's situation.

She was thinking how she would break the news to Leona. But before she could she heard a familiar voice coming from her friend's side.

"Can't you just go back to sleep? Why on earth are you calling someone so early?"

"Gavin Wu, are you mad or what? Because you should get out immediately then!"

It was evident that Leona was really angry by the intervention. Her voice gave Janessa goose bumps.

She kept totally silent. She was shocked that Gavin and Leona were sleeping together.

It was true that they were together in the past and used to break up often. But that they were seeing each other again, probably for the final time was something Janessa did not expect.

Janessa started regretting making the call in the first place now. She didn't want the two to fight because of her untimely call.

"If you need sleep, shut your mouth and go back to sleeping. If you have any opinion, get out of my mansion. I won't mind some silence." It was almost as if Leona did not want to continue with him at all. Janessa was awkwardly listening to everything and did not know if she could still be on the call.

The silence on the other side made her uncomfortable.

"Well, go on then. Tell me, why did you call?" Leona became the soft and sober person she was, again. She fought with Gavin and all her sleep was gone.

Janessa took a moment to observe if she could hear anything else. Then she said, "Are you two okay?"

"Yes, yes. Just a big fight. You tell me why you called." It was not that she was avoiding talking about her equation with Gavin, because truth be told she was still confused about it even after all those years.

Janessa however did not force her friend. Instead she told about the whole incident regarding Nolan. She felt even more anxious spilling everything out to her friend.

"What is your opinion on all this? What should I do? I know the picture is doctored but netizens have already seen it. They aren't concerned about the authenticity of it, right now. They are more interested in the possible gossip that might steam up surrounding me and Nolan."

After introspecting for a while Leona opened the tablet to see the news but it was no longer available. She searched for it multiple times, but nothing came up.

"Well, something is not right! Can't see any such news on the Internet anymore. There are only some screenshots and insignificant posts, but that won't excite the netizens for sure."

"How is that possible? I checked right before I called you!" She jumped out of her bed and started looking carefully, to really find that there was no trace of the whole incident.

There were only some news about celebrity families and their children as the top-searched news.

"Someone probably took the news down. That means problem is solved then, right?"

But Janessa did not answer her friend. She ran to open the window and found that all the reporters were gone.

But who helped her solve the problem so quickly?

"Yes, it seems all is okay now. Sorry for waking you up. Go back to seep. You probably had a long night." Janessa teased. Gavin and Leona almost had this pattern of constantly breaking up and making up. Janessa knew exactly what was going on.

"Since you know it all, don't call me," Leona said groggily and immediately fell asleep after hanging up.

After the call, Janessa stared blankly outside her window, "Who could do such a thing for me?" She was lost in thought.

Almost immediately the phone rang again.

She was stunned as she received a call from the suburban police station.

The person said that Rayan was there and she needed to bail him out. At first she did not believe the news. So she called again to confirm, before she changed her clothes to go out.

Janessa didn't expect that the whole morning she had to hide in her apartment, but in the afternoon she had to go to the police station to get someone out.

Janessa had nothing to say. She simply asked the driver to drive as fast as possible. She finally arrived at the police station and found Rayan.

The moment she stepped out of her car she saw Rayan and Gracie leaning against each other.

Even after being beaten he looked good. He got punched at his torso but not his face.

Even though he committed the mistake of beating someone up, he had the power to leave the police custody, without any punishment. Janessa waited and saw that he took his car keys and returned home with Gracie.

She had to be in the police station to complete the formalities on her boss's behalf. She quickly finished off the work.

As she was about to leave, she noticed Nolan on the other side. He sat with bruises on his face.

After taking permission, Janessa walked over to Nolan to take a look before leaving him on his own.

"The news has gone. Won't you say anything to me?" Nolan was confused. Did Janessa forgive the person who created such a mess for her and framed her?

But the truth was that Janessa was too tired to ponder on it. So she just let go.

She was not aware of the relations among Rayan, Gracie and Nolan. She could guess that something bad happened between the two men.

She had a vague idea but she did not say it out loud.

It was better to be silent sometimes.

It would be the best for everyone.

"Whatever you want from all this, the fact is it is over now. I don't want to deal with you ever again. Do not bother me in the future."
