Chapter 392 Blackmail

"What's wrong with her?" asked Rayan.

Rayan believed in the doctor's medical skills.

Otherwise, Rayan wouldn't have let her be his family doctor.

Selma looked at the thermometer reading and said seriously, "She might have caught a heavy cold due to using air conditioning for too long this afternoon."

"You stay with her tonight until she recovers then," Rayan said before he took his phone and left.

He didn't even give the doctor the chance to refuse.

Selma, the family doctor, looked at the patient lying on the bed before her eyes almost drilled holes on Rayan's back.

"Don't I get a chance to refuse? I also have something to deal with at home! I have a life too.'

After complaining silently about rich people and their attitudes, Selma began examining Gracie carefully.

As soon as Rayan walked out of the apartment, he got a call from Corbin.

But Corbin didn't tell him what he wanted to hear.

"Mr. Lu, we couldn't find Janessa. I have looked into all the hotels in the city, but I didn't find any check-in information under her name."

Corbin wanted to ask what was going on between them but he had enough sense not to.

The trouble was that he was now stuck between the two of them. He had just called Janessa, but she hung up. When he tried to call her again, her phone was switched off.

"She ran away. So she won't use her real name. Janessa is not stupid." Rayan was starting to have doubts about his assistant's intelligence. If he didn't need him to find Janessa, he would have fired him for being so stupid.

"Oh, she ran away. I'll check again." Corbin could sense the impatience and annoyance in Rayan's words, but it wasn't his fault. It was his boss who hadn't told him the whole story.

'Forget it, I will continue with the search then.'

Rayan had started calling Janessa from the minute he came out of the bar. She hung up on him the first time and from then on he couldn't get through again.

Obviously, he had been blocked.

Rayan then drove to Janessa's house.

By the time he got there, Janessa was already in the hotel room. Before her was the penthouse presidential suite.

There was almost everything she needed in there. Janessa could even wash clothes and cook if she wanted to. The only problem was that there was only one bedroom.

"You can leave now." Janessa became angry by just looking at Rylan. The man just couldn't do anything right.

"Why are you still so mad? I just found a place for you to stay." Sitting on the sofa, Rylan looked too complacent, as if he had forgotten who had caused everything.

"As if that covers everything you did? We aren't even yet! I told you because you promised me that you wouldn't tell Rayan. But you went ahead and did exactly that. I can't even say I'm disappointed."

"Janessa, I told you I didn't mean it. I was so scared after telling him that I even sobered up. But I made up for my mistake. Don't be angry, okay?"

"You should go home then!" The bedroom door could be locked, but when a man and a woman stayed in a hotel room alone together, that was enough to start raising suspicions.

Although Janessa was pregnant, she was still worried that Raylan would do something to her.

She didn't want to make things worse, especially now that she and Rayan were on a break.

"I can leave now, but aren't you afraid that Rayan will find you? It's dangerous for you to be here alone! Who knows what could happen?" Rylan told Janessa. It seemed as if he was only looking out for her.

He didn't want to do anything, but they had never lived in the same room before. He just didn't want to miss such an opportunity to get close to Janessa.

Maybe he wouldn't get other chances in the future.

Janessa knew it was only a matter of time before Rayan found her. She couldn't escape forever.

"What happens doesn't matter as long as tonight is over." Janessa also knew what lengths Rayan would go to if he needed to.

But she still didn't want to be in the same room with Rylan.

Maybe God heard her prayers because Rylan's phone rang.

His face darkened as he listened to the person on the phone.

"Janessa, I have something to deal with at home. You can just stay here for as long as you want. If you need anything, just call the front desk. They will send it to you. No one will enter the room unless you need someone to clean the room. I'm the only resident on this floor. So don't worry, you won't meet anyone if you stay here. And even Rayan won't find this place for now," Rylan said as he put on his coat. As he walked to the door, he looked back at Janessa worriedly.

"I know you don't want to see me now, and you won't for the next few days. Take care. Call me if something comes up."

"Okay, I know. You'd better leave now. Don't waste time." After closing the door, Janessa sat on the sofa and turned on the TV. Now that the rush was over, she was bored.

Janessa knew that Rayan would look for her in all manner of ways, but she didn't expect to see herself on TV.

There was a notice about her disappearance on the channel.

This time, Rayan was determined to find her. In the past, when Janessa chased after Rayan, he dated others in her face. But now? He had abandoned his new girlfriend and was looking for his ex-wife on TV.

Only Rayan could do such an unbelievable thing.

This was typical of Rayan. What else could she expect? He had never thought like normal people did.

Rayan had probably thought that using pictures wouldn't be enough, so he had sent a video instead to help increase the chances of someone recognizing her.

Coincidentally, Janessa's phone rang. It was Alana calling her.

Janessa went to answer it but she suddenly realized that there had to be someone else at Alana's home. So she hung up instead.

"Rayan, you have to try harder if you want to find me," Janessa said complacently. She lay on the sofa, and continued watching TV.

On the other side, Alana hung up and handed the phone to Rayan.

"Just like I said, she won't answer my calls!" Alana secretly rolled her eyes when Rayan wasn't looking.

What did the man take Janessa for? Did he really think that her head became muddled after she got pregnant?

Alana was worried about Rayan's level of intelligence. He used to be a smart man, but now he couldn't even figure out such a simple thing.

"I'll help your family but on one condition." In the past, Rayan didn't see the need to help the Shen family. After all, for them, marriage was the best way to solve their problem.

"I won't agree. How can you be so despicable? What do you take me for?" Alana understood what Rayan meant, but she didn't want to betray her friend.

"We don't need to waste my time here. As long as you help me find Janessa, the Shen family will be out of trouble."

No one dared to question him.
